COOLIDGE PLURALITY OF 7,339,827 VOTES LARGEST IN HISTORY

28,920,070 BALLOTS CAST

Davis, 8,378,962, Failed to Equal Cox Vote—Many States Cast Fewer Votes Than in 1920.

4,822,319 FOR LA FOLLETTE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—President Coolidge polled more votes in the November election than his two principal competitors combined, and had a popular plurality of 7,339,827—the largest ever given a Presidential candidate.

Complete official returns show the vote for Mr. Coolidge was 15,718,789 compared to 8,378,962 for John W. Davis, and 4,822,319 for Robert M. La Follette.

The total popular vote for the three leading candidates was 28,920,070. In 1920, for all candidates, it was 26,711,183.

Despite the record-breaking plurality for Coolidge, which was 334,980 more than that given Warren G. Harding four years ago, the Coolidge total was 433,411 less than that of Harding, due to the presence in the field of a third powerful ticket. Harding's total was 16,152,200.

Davis received a smaller vote by 768,301 than did James M. Cox in 1920. The total for Cox was 9,147,353.

La Follette's vote exceeded by 696,299 the 4,126,020 given Theodore Roosevelt in 1912, when he headed a third ticket, but the La Follette strength was so distributed as to make a negligible showing in the Electoral College, whereas in the 1912 electoral vote Roosevelt ranked second to Woodrow Wilson and far ahead of William H. Taft.

In twelve States La Follette polled more votes than Davis, and in New York received more votes than in his home State of Wisconsin—the only State credited to him in the Electoral College.

Vote by Percentages.

Analysis of the returns shows that Coolidge received 54.4 per cent. of the total vote of the three leading candidates. Davis had 29 per cent. and La Follette 16.6 per cent.

In 1920 Harding had 61.6 per cent. and Cox 34.9 per cent. of all votes cast. In 1912 Taft had 25.1 per cent., Wilson 43.2 and Roosevelt 29.6 per cent.

Coolidge lost Oklahoma, Tennessee and Wisconsin, which were carried by Harding in 1920, but won Kentucky, which Harding lost.

More votes were polled for Coolidge than for Harding in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Texas, Vermont, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Davis's popular vote exceeded that of Cox in Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Texas and West Virginia.

The La Follette vote was larger than the Davis vote in California, Idaho, Iowa, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Plurality More than Rival's Votes.

Coolidge's plurality alone was larger than the total vote of his next highest opponent in Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

While the total popular vote was approximately 2,500,000 more than the total of the 1920 election, voters in a number of States, principally in the South, did not go to the polls in such great numbers as they did four years ago. The vote was smaller this year than in 1920 in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and Washington.

In Kentucky the total was more than 100,000 smaller than in 1920, and Coolidge carried the State by a vote that was 53,000 smaller than that which failed to carry it for Harding. In Tennessee the total dropped 150,000 under that of 1920.

The largest plurality given by any State was Pennsylvania's 992,280 plurality for Coolidge. The largest Coolidge total was New York, 1,820,058, but his plurality in that State was only 869,262. Illinois gave Coolidge his second largest plurality—876,346. Coolidge's smallest plurality was in Nevada, which he carried by 1,674, and his smallest total vote in any State was in South Carolina, where he polled only 1,123 votes.

Texas gave Davis his largest plurality —350,185. Three other Southern States returned Davis pluralities ranging within a few hundred votes of one another—Georgia, with 92,900; North Carolina, with 92,317, and Mississippi, with 92,195.

Mexico Chooses Manuel Tellez For Her Ambassador Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 23.—The next Mexican Ambassador to the United States will be Manuel C. Tellez, who for the last four years has been Chargé d'Affaires at Washington.

It is authoritatively learned that the State Department has been asked to approve the selection of Señor Tellez and that official announcement will be made when this is received.

Mexico has delayed appointing an Ambassador to Washington although the American Government sent Charles B. Warren to Mexico as Ambassador soon after the settlement of the claims question. Mr. Warren has since been succeeded by James R. Sheffield.

JUSSERAND SPEECH SURPRISES CAPITAL

White House Will Take No Cognizance of Ambassador's Plea for Moratorium.

NOT MADE TO DEBT BOARD

But Embassy Intimates It Was Made Informally to Hughes and to Mellon.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Considerable confusion was produced today by the intimation that willingness of France to enter into an arrangement for the payment of its war debt to the United States, announced yesterday by M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, in an informal speech, had not been communicated to the War Debt Commission by the Ambassador or any representatives of the French Government.

Even this was made known in French diplomatic quarters surprise was expressed. The impression conveyed in these quarters was that the position of France on the debt had been made known to the Debt Commission.

In his remarks yesterday, addressed to the members of the Current Events Class conducted by Miss Janet Richards, who was decorated recently by the French Government, Ambassador Jusserand said that in carrying out the intention to pay its war debt to the United States the French Government found it essential to have included in the debt-funding arrangement a provision for a moratorium, which would give France an opportunity to improve her financial and economic condition in a manner that would put her in position to pay this Government.

Today's development came in the form of information that President Coolidge regarded the remarks of the French Ambassador as addressed to the American people rather than to the Government, and that in these circumstances neither the White House nor the American Debt Commission could take cognizance of the Ambassador's statement. More surprising than this, however, was the intimation that the French position, as stated by M. Jusserand, had never been made known to the Debt Commission.

It has been no secret in Washington that M. Jusserand had carried on "conversations," to employ the diplomatic term, with Secretary Mellon, Chairman, and with other members of the Debt Commission. The understanding here was that while there was nothing formal in these conversations the Ambassador had indicated that France desired a moratorium of ten years during which she would be relieved of paying interest on her war indebtedness to this country, in the expectation that at the end of the period her financial and economic condition would have improved to such an extent as to enable her to begin the liquidation of the debt. Today's intimation, however, gave the impression that no such representations, or any representations whatever of France's intention to pay, had been made to the Debt Commission.

That M. Jusserand intended to be understood in his informal remarks yesterday as stating that France desired a moratorium was confirmed by the French Embassy in the statement that "the French Ambassador said what he has never ceased to say, that whether granted to other nations or not, a moratorium was indispensable to France."

While there was a disinclination in official circles today to comment on this

2 MORE INDICTMENTS AND 44 LIQUOR RAIDS IN 2 JERSEY CITIES

DRY AGENTS INVADE STATE

CLERGYMEN CALL ON HAGUE

Demand at Stormy Session With Jersey City Mayor That All Saloons There Be Closed.

Captain John Dillon and Lieutenant Edward J. Kirk of the Weehawken police were indicted yesterday by the Hudson County Grand Jury in connection with the disappearance of a truckload of liquor which had been confiscated by Prohibition Agent A. T. Ransom and which had been left standing in front of Weehawken police headquarters.

The New Jersey liquor disclosures thus far have resulted in fourteen indictments, of which twelve are against police officers. When the liquor disappeared on Nov. 10, Dillon, it was alleged, was at the desk on duty. The only witness before the Grand Jury, it was reported, was Leon Wendt, a taxicab chauffeur of Jersey City, who drove Ransom to Weehawken on the night when the truck was seized.

While the indictments were being returned in Hudson County forty-four agents under William H. Walker, first assistant to National Prohibition Director E. C. Yellowley, raided twenty-two saloons in the downtown section of Jersey City, many near the City Hall, served eighteen summonses and seized several hundred dollars' worth of liquor. Then they went to Newark and served warrants in twenty-two places. The agents were led by William J. McCay and acted on warrants. All of the raiders were attached to the Manhattan office of the Regional Federal Director of Prohibition Enforcement for the New York and New Jersey District.

Yellowley Ordered Raids.

The raids followed the visit made to Jersey City and Newark last week of Director Yellowley and were made as the result of the Hudson County inquiry. It was understood that on his return to Washington Chief Yellowley sent one of his agents, Peter Reager, to endeavor to determine the extent of the liquor traffic in Jersey City and Newark. It was said by Federal officials that the raids were the most comprehensive that have as yet been made in any locality by Federal officials. All those upon whom summons were served were ordered to appear before a United States Commissioner in Newark on Friday.

The raids in Jersey City were no more ended before a group of drys appeared before Mayor Frank Hague and the City Commissioners and demanded that they end the "flouting of the law" in Jersey City. Some of the Commissioners, according to the visitors, said that even the Federal Government could not enforce the liquor laws in New Jersey.

The Jersey City raids were conducted by agents in half a dozen touring cars, who began operating from Newark Avenue and Grove Street. The places raided were at 79, 113, 126, 523, 531, 657, 779, 788 and 854 Newark Avenue; 317, 331, 341 and 350 Henderson Street and 39, 271, 314, 325 and 335 Grand Street.

In Newark the warrants were served in the downtown section and, as in the Jersey City raids, no serious disorders were reported. In one place a bartender broke some bottles on the bar, but he was arrested before he could smash other vessels containing liquor.

Ask Closing of Saloons.

After the raids Samuel L. Wilson, Assistant Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey; the Rev. James W. Parker of the Second United Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Harvey L. Wyatt of the Westminster Presbyterian Church and the Rev. George M. Muller of the Summit Avenue Presbyterian Church appeared before the City Commissioners at 3 P. M. and demanded that every saloon in the city be closed.

Dr. Parker told Mayor Hague he had come to confer with him, but the Mayor said no conference had been arranged. Mr. Wilson asserted that the law was not being enforced by the police in Jersey City and declared that the Federal

Four Are Killed in Ambulance Seaplane, Swamped in Hampton Roads; Patient Aboard

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 23.—Three navy men and a civilian, the latter a patient en route to a Norfolk hospital, were killed at 3:34 o'clock this afternoon when a naval ambulance seaplane returning from an errand of mercy down the North Carolina coast swamped as the plane was landing at the Hampton Roads Naval Air Station.

The victims were E. M. Keyser and A. S. Manwaring, chief petty officers; F. H. Gavin, a hospital apprentice and Landrow B. Williams of Buxton, N. C., son of a retired naval enlisted man. Williams was suffering from pneumonia and an after-effect of influenza and accompanied by his father, was being transported to Norfolk for hospital treatment.

Young Williams was drowned, as was Keyser. Manwaring and Gavin were killed when they collided with propeller blades in trying to escape from the sinking craft. Williams's father, Lieutenant W. B. Gwin, U. S. N., pilot of the ambulance plane; M. M. Mendenhall, a radio operator, and William Mayo, an aviation mechanic, were rescued from the partly submerged airship by the crew of a retriver, an air station motor boat that was waiting at the landing to assist in carrying passengers and crew of the seaplane. None of these was injured.

This was the first fatal accident that has occurred in connection with the operation of an ambulance plane since the aerial hospital service for the isolated coast regions was inaugurated more than a year ago by Captain Yarnell, then commanding officer of Hampton Roads Air Station.

The mishap was attributed by Captain Cooke, Captain Yarnell's successor, to the probable existence of a hole in the bow of the plane. This theory was based upon the manner in which the craft foundered. Actual fixing of responsibility for the accident will be left to an official board of inquiry.

The ambulance left the air station at 11 o'clock for Buxton, a village near Hatteras, in response to an appeal from the elder Mr. Williams, relayed through the Coast Guard Station. The death of young Williams appeared inevitable, unless he could be given treatment that was not available in the remote coastal country.

At Hampton Roads the aerial ambulance made a perfect landing, but after landing displayed signs of distress. Water rushed in through the bow, filling the forward portion of the craft and she seemed in danger of sinking. The pilot guided her for the shallow runway. She missed the concrete elevation and floundered over into the deep water alongside. All the occupants of the plane, including the sick man, were forward. Manwaring and Gavin, rushing aft in an effort to escape the inrushing water, were struck by the propeller and hurled overboard.

The bodies of the dead were recovered within a few minutes after the accident and later removed to the Naval Hospital in Portsmouth.

MAN AND WIFE DROWN AS CAR LEAPS TO BAY

RESCUE ATTEMPTS FUTILE

Motorists See Machine Take Plunge and Call Police, but They Can Do Nothing.

A young married couple, driving home in a small automobile laden with Christmas packages, died in each other's arms last night when the steering gear went wrong and the car plunged upside down into the ice-strewn waters of Pelham Bay.

Policemen went to the spot in Pelham Bay Park when a passing motorist saw the tail light, with its red "Stop" sign still aglow, sticking out of the water. They tried to get at the imprisoned couple, but no one was equal to the task of diving into the freezing water.

Not until two wrecking crews had come at top speed from City Island was it possible to raise the car far enough to open the door, which already had been unlatched in the brief struggle to escape, and by then the two were long past aid.

The victims were John Frigel, a decorator, 30 years old, and his wife Mabel, a year his junior. They lived at 108 Center Street, City Island, and had no children.

The Frigels had spent an afternoon shopping. With their packages wedged in on all sides they started for City Island after dining downtown. It was about 8:30 when they started through Pelham Park, intending to emerge on the straight road to City Island. They were going along the New Shore Drive, about 300 yards in from Pelham Parkway and had almost reached the sluice bridge, when the car wabbled suddenly.

Car Dives Down Declivity.

Frigel's twists at the wheel were vain. The steering knuckle refused to operate and before he could stop the car had swerved off the road, dived down a ten-foot declivity, turned over and flopped into the water.

There had been another car close behind. Its occupants were almost dazed by the disappearance of the small sedan in front of them. It took a second or so to realize what happened. Then the onlookers, tooting their horn continuously, sped in search of a policeman.

They soon found Patrolman Boyen and raced with him back to the scene. The car had landed well out from shore and there seemed no hope of reaching it. No sound came from within.

Boyen ran to a police box and sent a call for an ambulance and for a wrecking crew from Smith's Garage in City Island, the nearest place from which help could come.

Two emergency cars, equipped with winches, blocks and tackle, were sent from the garage. By the time they arrived the spot was circled with horrified onlookers and a group of policemen were waiting to give what aid they could. It was a difficult task hooking chains to the car because of its distance from the roadway. But that was accomplished after a time and the overturned vehicle was drawn close to the shore.

Car Is Slowly Raised.

Then slowly it was raised. When the door came into view and it was found that it was slightly open, there was a moment of hope, the watchers believing maybe the imprisoned occupants had escaped and come to shore at some point which had escaped observation.

But when a little more of the car had been lifted into the air and policemen were able to pull the door open the rest of the way, it was soon that that hope was to be disappointed.

Unless the car door was wrenched open by the far as the car thudded into the water, Frigel had just managed to undo the latch and give a slight push. But meantime water had rushed in through gaping holes in the shattered glass and evidently both had been overcome before they were able to struggle for more than a second.

They seemed to have lived long enough to put their arms around each other, and there they had died together.

Mrs. Herbert Brazegirdle, 30 years old, of 351 East Fifty-seventh Street, hurrying from her home yesterday with Christmas gifts she had just purchased, was killed by a motor truck at Third Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street. She was on her way to a restaurant conducted by her husband at Madison Avenue and Thirty-sixth Street when the truck suddenly bore down on her and, becoming confused, she jumped directly into its path, after the driver had tried to turn aside. Louis Mallimint, the driver, of 122 Bourne Street, Brooklyn, was arrested on a technical charge of homicide.

WILL EXHUME BODY OF M'CLINTOCK HEIR

Prosecutor Seeks Cause of Death of Youth Who Left Millions to Guardians.

POISONED, SAID LETTER

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Exhumation of the body of William Nelson McClintock, millionaire orphan, was decided on today by State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe as an exhaustive investigation was begun into the manner of the youth's death.

Mr. Crowe sent his investigators to the home of William D. Shepherd, an attorney and the foster-father of McClintock with whom the latter made his home. A thorough search of the house was made and a maid was taken to the Criminal Court Building for examination.

The investigation was started by Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal Court, a friend of the McClintock family. Judge Olson said he had started his investigation into the youth's death immediately after his demise, but he refused to state what caused him to become suspicious. He said his investigation had simply progressed so far that he felt it was a matter for the State's Attorney to pursue.

A conference was held at which, in addition to Mr. Crowe and Judge Olson, Henry Urion, an official of the Dartmouth Alumni Association in Chicago, and A. F. Reichman, a coguardian, of McClintock with Mrs. Shepherd were present. McClintock first became ill while attending Dartmouth.

The Coroner's office tonight made public an anonymous letter received two weeks ago in which the writer expressed the belief that young McClintock had been poisoned, and asserted that had McClintock married before his death, other disposal would have been made of his fortune than that provided for in the will.

The Shepherds, it was reported, are now in Albuquerque, N. M., where they went last Friday. Shepherd, according to Judge Olson, was formerly a chemist and druggist, the Shepherd and McClintock families becoming acquainted about twenty years ago.

Death Prevented Marriage.

The inquiry into the circumstances of the youth's death from typhoid a few hours before he would have become the husband of Miss Isabelle Pope of Wilmette, Ill., extended far into the night, two of Mr. Crowe's assistants working arduously.

After he had been informed of the information thus far gathered, Mr. Crowe announced he was certain there was sufficient cause for the exhumation of young McClintock's body, and said he would apply for a court order tomorrow.

A post-mortem examination of the young man's organs to determine the exact cause of death will be made under the direction of Drs. Hektoen and Le Count, two of the West's most noted pathologists, if the body is exhumed under court order. The examination will seek to determine if death, as stated by the attending physicians, was caused by typhoid fever.

Dr. Hektoen has been in consultation with various officials, particularly discussing cases in which individuals have died from disease germs injected into their bodies.

Mr. Crowe also declared he would make a special study, through eminent diagnosticians, of the symptoms of typhoid, with a view of determining whether the youth exhibited them just prior to his death.

Foster Father Got $2,000,000.

McClintock's will, produced in the Probate Court recently, left his $2,000,000 estate, half of it in gilt-edge securities, to his foster father, Shepherd. Since he was 8 years old the youth has been under the guardianship of Mrs. Shepherd, who won his custody after a court battle with another friend of the elder McClintocks.

A few days after he became 21 and heir to the estate, which prior to that time had been held in trust by the Northern Trust Company, young McClintock signed the will, which was prepared by Shepherd. Seven cousins of McClintock, ignored in the testament,

SAY STEP-MOTHER SENT POISON CANDY TO CHILD IN OLEAN

GRAND AUNT ATE FROM BOX

ADMITS SENDING PACKAGE

Special to The New York Times.

OLEAN, N. Y., Dec. 23.—A warrant was issued here today calling for the arrest at Columbia, Miss., of Mrs. Hilma Barnes Ensminger on a charge of attempted murder, first degree, for sending a box of candy to her six-year-old stepson, living here, which has been found to contain poison.

Miss Harriet Mosier, aged 44, grandaunt of the boy, the only member of the household of five who ate any of the candy, which contained bichloride of mercury, was critically ill for a time, but is now out of danger.

The candy, wrapped in Christmas decorations, came in a package, sent by registered mail, on Saturday night. The names of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Ensminger of Columbia, Miss., were written on it as the senders, and a note enclosed was signed "Mother Hilma," reading:

"Merry Christmas and love. Would have sent more candy, but it did not harden. Will send more tomorrow."

The note, it is said, was in the handwriting of the boy's stepmother.

George E. Ensminger, a professional golfer, left his first wife, Marjorie A. Ensminger, about a year ago. He returned a short time later and endeavored to bring about a reconciliation. The first Mrs. Ensminger spurned him and he went away again, leaving their 5-year-old son, George Jr., with his wife, Mrs. Ensminger and the boy went to live with the Mosiers, relatives on her side of the family.

The next heard from Ensminger was the announcement of his divorce and marriage to Mrs. Hilma Barnes Freeman of Columbia, Miss., also the mother of a boy about the age of George Jr.

Relatives here say Ensminger had a deep affection for his own boy and provided very liberally, considering his income, for the lad's support. He also sent an occasional check to his first wife, asking her to use the money or invest it for the benefit of little George.

In this love of Ensminger for the "other boy" the local authorities believe they see a motive for the alleged poisoning attempt by the second Mrs. Ensminger. The fact that the package in which the candy was sent was plainly marked "From Mr. and Mrs. George Ensminger" does not tend to disprove the attempt to murder, they contend. There were only two pieces of candy and a fig in the package, which was made up chiefly of toys for young George. The candy was a fudge patty.

When the package came and was opened a youth's policeman outfit caught the boy's eye and he passed up the candy to put on the uniform. Miss Mosier picked up the fudge and ate some of it. Almost immediately she was taken ill. The family physician was summoned. He pronounced it a case of poisoning and made inquiries as to what the woman had been eating. The remnant of the fudge patty and the fig were sent to the City Chemist, Dr. Joseph P. Garen, for analysis.

Dr. Garen reported that both the candy and the fig contained bichloride of mercury. The poison apparently had been finely shaved from a tablet, or tablets, the chemist said, and had been pressed into the fudge after it had hardened.

The facts in the case were submitted to County Prosecutor Laidlaw. After going over the evidence with Police Chief Dempsey it was decided that there was sufficient cause to arrest Mrs. Hilma Ensminger and a warrant was sworn out late this afternoon.

Denies Poisoning the Candy.

Coolidges Will Hear Carols Sung in White House Grounds

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—A song service that is expected to attract a tremendous crowd, especially if weather conditions are favorable, will be held in the White House grounds tomorrow night, with President and Mrs. Coolidge acting as hosts of the occasion.

The singing will begin at 9 o'clock, when the vested choir of the First Congregational Church, where the President and his family worship, will sing familiar carols under the leadership of Ruby Smith Stahl, and the hearers will be asked to join. The choir comprises seventy voices.

One of the features of the celebration will be the singing of "Christmas Bells," the words and music of which were written by the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of the First Congregational Church. Mr. Pierce has dedicated the carol to Mrs. Coolidge, and she and the President, who will be on the front portico during the singing, will hear it tomorrow night for the first time.

TO ARREST ANDERSON AS HE IS FREED TODAY

Warrants at Sing Sing for Ex-Prohibition Leader to Be Served as His Term Ends.

PASTOR TO MEET HIM THERE

Arrangements Made to Free Him on Bail Under Four Indictments Still Pending.

When William H. Anderson, former Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of this State, walks out of Sing Sing Prison at 9 o'clock this morning, after having served nine months of his sentence of one to two years for forging the books of the league in 1921, he will be taken into custody by Detective Sergeant Charles Kane of District Attorney Banton's office on bench warrants lodged at the prison when he began his sentence last March.

Anderson then will be taken to General Sessions here and be arraigned before Judge Mancuso on four indictments, two charging grand larceny and two extortion, which were returned by the Grand Jury with the forgery indictment more than a year ago, after an investigation by Chief Assistant District Attorney Pecora into Anderson's management of the league over ten years.

The former dry leader, dressed in a new suit which he ordered from the outside when the Parole Board about a month ago decided to release him in advance of the expiration of his minimum sentence, will be joined at the prison gate by the Rev. Charles F. Ross, pastor of the Central Methodist Church in Yonkers, of which Anderson is still a member, and when the detective escorts him into the Criminal Courts Building for arraignment he will be met by former Governor Charles S. Whitman, who acted as his counsel at the trial in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court which resulted in his conviction.

Expect Bail to be $5,000.

The proceedings before Judge Mancuso are expected to be brief, the only requirement being the fixing of bail, preliminary to the eventual calling of the cases for trial or final disposal by the Court, Anderson having pleaded not guilty to the five indictments on the day they were returned by the Grand Jury last Winter. The general impression in the District Attorney's office yesterday was that Judge Mancuso would place the bail at $5,000 to cover all four indictments. It was understood that arrangements already had been made by Anderson's friends to have a bondsman present.

Mr. Whitman several days ago communicated with the District Attorney's office regarding the arraignment of Anderson on the four indictments and Anderson knew that it would be necessary for him to appear in court on the indictments before he could go to his home at 272 Van Cortlandt Park Avenue, Yonkers, to participate with his family in celebrating Christmas Eve.

Mr. Pecora intimated yesterday that he expected that there would be no hitch and that the prosecutor's office had arranged to facilitate Anderson's release on bail. He said that the District Attorney's office would place the four cases against Anderson on the regular calendars and that they would be reached in the usual course of bail cases, which, under District Attorney Banton's ruling, are held in abeyance

DELANEY DECLINES TO SUPPORT HYLAN IN TRANSIT CHARGES

DISPROVES ONE ACCUSATION

Says He Did Not Find That State Body Had Large Number of Useless Employes.

AVOIDS CRITICIZING MAYOR

Testimony Shows That New Heights Line Will Cost $188,457,000—Hylan to Be Witness Today.

John H. Delaney, Chairman of the City Board of Transportation, declined yesterday an opportunity to present testimony in support of the charges against the members of the Transit Commission. These charges were inspired by Mayor Hylan and their presentment of them by the Board of Estimate to Governor Smith caused the latter to direct Justice John V. McAvoy to conduct the general transit investigation at which Mr. Delaney was testifying.

Upon the statement of Justice McAvoy, who is sitting as a Moreland act Commissioner, that there was one charge, that alleging the employment of a large number of useless employes by the Transit Commission, upon which he might properly testify, Mr. Delaney said that he had not found that too many men were employed by the Transit Commission or that there was any unnecessary duplication in that part of its staff which the Board of Transportation took over from the commission when it organized on July 1, last.

"All of the men that came into the staff of the Board of Transportation are required, and more," Mr. Delaney said. "We are greatly increasing them."

Along with his statement that he had no criticism to make of the way the Transit Commissioners had proceeded with the work of completing subways called for by the dual contracts after they had taken over his functions as Transit Construction Commissioner, these parts of Mr. Delaney's testimony were taken to indicate a lack of sympathy with the Mayor's decision to press the charges and to corroborate the report that Mr. Delaney had been opposed to the charges at the time the Board of Estimate decided to prefer them.

Avoids Criticism of Hylan.

Mr. Delaney, who holds his place as Chairman of the Board of Transportation by appointment of the Mayor, resisted all questions which he considered were designed to have him make direct criticism of either Mayor Hylan or the Board of Estimate. Henry L. Sherman, counsel for Justice McAvoy, cited half a dozen instances in which the Board of Estimate had rejected or failed to approve subway construction contracts he had recommended as Transit Construction Commissioner. Mr. Delaney declared that the Board of Estimate had complete discretion in the appropriation of money and that he did not consider that the failure of the members of the board to agree with him in certain instances indicated lack of cooperation on their part. "At no time did I have trouble with the Board of Estimate," Mr. Delaney said, referring to the period of his term as Transit Construction Commissioner, "although some contracts were rejected for cause."

In another instance, Mr. Delaney avoided criticism of the Mayor when Mr. Sherman asked if Mayor Hylan, on his return from a long illness in March, 1924, had not condemned all the agreements made with the Transit Commission by the Conference Committee of the Board of Estimate, of which Mr. Delaney was Chairman.

"I think you are getting a little outside the bounds of proper questioning when you ask me to speculate and comment upon the actions of the Mayor of New York, who can probably answer for himself," Mr. Delaney said. "He has liberty of thought and action. I will gladly testify as to any connection that I have had with any of these transactions, but do not ask me to criticize the Mayor or to flatter him."

Hylan to Testify Today.

Much of the latter part of Mr. Delaney's examination, which related to rejection by the Board of Estimate of construction contracts recommended by Mr. Delaney while Transit Construction Commissioner, seemingly was to lay a groundwork for examination of Mayor Hylan, when the latter appears today.

The Mayor is scheduled to take the witness stand immediately after Justice McAvoy reconvenes the hearing this morning in the assembly room of the New York City Bar Association, 42 West Forty-fourth Street. The Mayor's appearance will be signalized by the reappearance of counsel who left the hearing a week ago after Justice McAvoy, in accordance with the custom at Moreland act investigations, had denied them the right to cross-examine witnesses, except through suggestions to Mr. Sherman.

According to information from the city's Law Department, the Mayor will be represented by Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson, Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Louis Lande, Assistant Corporation Counsel Edgar J. Mohler, and Harry A. Gordon, special counsel to the Board of Estimate. So far as could be learned, Max D. Steuer, who withdrew as special counsel to the Board of Estimate after Justice McAvoy's ruling, has not resumed connection with the case.

Other features of the day's proceedings included the assumption by Mr. Delaney of the responsibility for advising the Board of Transportation to reject the construction contract for the Brooklyn subway in June, 1923, shortly before the Board of Transportation took over and his revelation of the vital differ-

The Christmas Eve flight of the dirigible Los Angeles over New York has been canceled. As unexpectedly as the visit of the navy's proud giantess was promised to the city on Monday, that promise was withdrawn yesterday. From the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J., came the laconic bulletin that the Los Angeles would remain in her hangar on Christmas Eve.

When further details were sought, Commander Jacob H. Klein Jr., Commandant of the field, said he had received an order from Washington to abandon his preparations and had, of course, obeyed without question. Also he had granted leave over Christmas to virtually every one at the station, so there was no possibility of making the flight now, even if the navy should change its mind.

It developed that the order received at Lakehurst was a "stand by" one and the order to "execute" never came; in other words, the station was ordered to get ready to send the big German-built Zep bag over New York to broadcast Christmas music if the navy said "do." Instead the navy said "don't."

Upon inquiry at the Navy Department in Washington it was learned that the decision not to order the flight was due to disinclination to have the personnel of the airship and the ground crew of more than 100 men employed in such a task on Christmas Eve, thus preventing the granting of the usual Christmas leave.

A suggestion was made that the night jaunt had been abandoned because those responsible had realized that if such a venture should end in disaster, there might be much criticism of the kind that would not apply to misfortune in tactical or experimental manoeuvres, but there was no official verification.

The cold and the possibility of storms also were discussed as a possible reason, but at the air station it was said that Washington would not take atmospheric conditions into consideration, flight orders in any case being issued subject to the judgment of the commanding officer that the weather and similar circumstances, such as the condition of the craft, justified the voyage.

Stars of the Opera to Sing Over the Radio; Victor and Telephone Companies Cooperate

Opera stars and other famous musicians under contract with the Victor Talking Machine Company, which hitherto has kept them "off the air," will sing and play for the radio for the first time in a series of concerts beginning on New Year's night, it was announced yesterday. John McCormack, the Irish tenor, and Lucrezia Bori, the lyric soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing before the microphone in the first concert.

The following stars will be heard in later concerts: Feodor Challapin, the Russian bass of the Metropolitan; Renee Chemet, the French violinist; Alfred Cortot, the French pianist; Emilio de Gorgoza, the Spanish concert baritone; Mischa Elman, the violinist; Amelita Galli-Curci, coloratura soprano; Beniamino Gigli, tenor; Jascha Heifetz, violinist; Marie Jerina, Viennese soprano; Giovanni Martinelli, tenor; Titta Ruffo, baritone; Tito Schipa, Chicago Opera Company tenor; Antonio Scotti, baritone, and Reinald Werrenrath, the American baritone.

The singers will broadcast from the studio of Station WEAF of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, 195 Broadway, and their program will be carried by eight powerful stations as far west as Pittsburgh. In addition to WEAF the broadcasting stations will be WCAP, Washington, D. C.; WJAR, Providence, R. I.; WNAC, Boston, Mass.; WDBH, Worcester, Mass.; WGR, Buffalo, N. Y.; WFI, Philadelphia, Pa., and WCAE, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Whether the concerts will become a permanent feature of broadcasting will depend partly upon their popularity with radio fans and partly upon the advertising and financial benefits received from the experiment by the Victor Talking Machine Company and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which are cooperating in the venture.

The announcement of the decision to allow Victor artists to broadcast was made at 195 Broadway yesterday afternoon after a conference between E. R. Johnson, President, and W. W. Clark for the Victor company, and Edgar S. Bloom and W. E. Harkness, Vice Presidents of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

ence in point of view between the City Administration and the Transit Commission by his declaration of the necessity of building an independent subway line instead of tying new subways to lines of the existing dual system.

Heights Line to Cost $186,457,462.

Another important development was the disclosure, caused by questions suggested by former Justice Clarence J. Shearn, special counsel to the Transit Commission, that the new independent Manhattan subway system from Washington Heights to Fulton or Wall Street, adopted two weeks ago by the Board of Transportation, would cost $186,457,000, according to the estimate of the board's engineers, or about $10,600,000 a mile for construction alone without equipment. Further questioning led to the admission by Mr. Delaney that this was more than double the cost of the subways in the dual system and really an advance in cost of about 125 per cent.

Mr. Shearn further raised the question as to how this new line, presumably intended for municipal operation, was going to be operated at a profit, when the Interborough subway lines, built under contracts 1, 2 and 3 at a cost of less than one-half per mile of the proposed new system, had a deficit during the year ended June 30, 1924, of $4,400,000, taking into consideration the interest on the city's investment. Edmund L. Mooney, special counsel to the Board of Transportation, asked if this included the Interborough's "preferential." Mr. Shearn replied that it did not, and, although he did not press the matter further, he indicated that he doubted the ability of the city to build a new subway system at the cost of the estimates and operate it on five-cent fare.

Mr. Delaney's opportunity to testify in support of the Board of Estimate's charges against the Transit Commissioners came near the end of the afternoon session.

"Mr. Delaney," said Mr. Sherman, "I suppose that you are aware that charges were filed by the Board of Estimate against the individuals who constitute the Transit Commission, and I wanted to ask you whether you have given any consideration to those charges."

"I have not," Mr. Delaney replied.

"Have you any evidence in support of those charges which you wish to give me or can give me, so that I can introduce it here?"

"I would earnestly request to be excused from any testimony upon those charges," Mr. Delaney said. "I am ready to testify as to any facts within my knowledge about which you may ask me. I should prefer to have you ask me questions as to any transactions concerning which you think you desire information."

Prefers Not to Discuss Charges.

"I really don't know just what might be considered to be within your knowledge," Mr. Sherman continued. "Therefore I put the question pretty broadly to you as to whether or not there is anything you wish to say with regard to these charges in support of them?"

"On the contrary, I prefer to say nothing about the charges," replied Mr. Delaney.

"I am not going into it," Mr. Sherman went on, "unless there is something you wish to say to me with respect to these charges which would aid the Commissioner in determining any matter that may arise in connection with this general situation which we are investigating, which, of course, includes the matters set forth in the charges."

"I am very desirous, Mr. Sherman, of being out of any situation that might indicate that I was a prosecutor," Mr. Delaney said.

"Everybody knows that you are not a prosecutor here, sir, and in my questions to you I have taken the attitude, and still do, that you are not a prosecutor here," Mr. Sherman continued. "Nevertheless, it is within the scope of my duty, since you are a witness here and since you are concerned largely with transit problems, to put the query to you."

"I realize also that it is my duty to answer any questions you put to me," Mr. Delaney answered.

"I put the question to you," said Mr. Sherman, "leaving it to you to do whatever you wish to do with regard to the validity of the matters set forth in these charges."

"I have nothing to say," replied Mr. Delaney.

He Submitted No New Routes.

In beginning of his day's testimony Mr. Delaney was questioned as to whether he had submitted any new subway routes to the Board of Estimate during his term as Transit Construction Commissioner other than those provided in the dual contracts.

"No, I do not think of any," he replied. "I was pausing to consider whether I had one or two extension routes, but I do not recall any."

"So that I am correct in stating that no new routes were submitted to the Board of Estimate during your incumbency?" asked Mr. Sherman.

"I think that is entirely correct," Mr. Delaney replied.

Mr. Delaney said that soon after his retirement from the office of Transit Construction Commissioner, and after he had become Dock Commissioner, he had recommended that the board should proceed with the Queens Borough extension. "I was at the Board of Estimate meeting on a Dock Department matter, and I was asked to express my view on it," he said. "I advocated it, and I think it was adopted the same day."

Mr. Sherman questioned Mr. Delaney concerning the points of similarity and difference between the Mayor's 1922 subway plan and that of the Transit Commission of the same period. Asked if both plans did not include a Manhattan west side subway, with extensions to Yonkers and Fort George, Mr. Delaney said:

Tells of Conferences on Transit.

Mr. Delaney told of frequent conferences between the Transit Commission and the Conference Committee of the Board of Estimate, of which he was Chairman, and Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen, and Arthur S. Tuttle, chief engineer of the Board of Estimate, the other members. He said an agreement was reached by which both suggested routes for the Brooklyn crosstown subway—the Fulton Street route favored by the commission and the Lafayette route favored by the committee—were presented to the Board of Estimate with the assurance from the commission that it would take the one selected by the board. Mr. Delaney said that the Board of Estimate had approved the Lafayette Avenue route and also that part of the proposed Washington Heights subway upon which agreement had been reached in conference. The Brooklyn crosstown route, he said, was undoubtedly approved by Mayor Hylan in person and the Washington Heights route by Murray Hulbert, Acting Mayor during Mayor Hylan's absence on account of illness. This latter approval of the so-called Central Park West route was on Feb. 14, 1924. He added that the Transit Commission as a consequence had prepared and advertised for bids on one contract for the Brooklyn crosstown subway.

"Do you recall what happened after that?" Mr. Sherman asked. "Whether the Mayor returned to the city shortly after, declined to approve the contract and announced that he would not agree to the work that had been agreed upon in the conferences between the two committees?"

"No, I have no personal recollection of that," said Mr. Delaney.

Doesn't Recall Mayor's Announcement.

"I refer to the Mayor's return in March, 1924," Mr. Sherman continued. "Do you recall his announcement at that time?"

"I have no recollection of the contents of any announcements the Mayor has made," said Mr. Delaney, with a trace of a smile. "They are quite frequent."

It was at this juncture that Mr. Delaney declared that Mr. Sherman was exceeding the proper bounds of questioning and made the remark that the Mayor "probably could answer for himself."

Mr. Delaney assumed full responsibility for advising the Mayor to reject the Brooklyn crosstown construction contract in a letter dated June 3, 1924, less than a month before the date on which the city through the Board of Transportation assumed full control in new subway construction. The letter, in which the Mayor was advised to "put on a gas mask" if the Board rejected the contract, follows:

Hon. John F. Hylan,
Chairman of the Committee of the Whole,
Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Dear Sir:

Responding to the request of the Committee of the Whole for an expression of my view in respect to the pending contract with the Dadaile Contracting Company, Inc., for the construction of a section of the Brooklyn crosstown subway route which was submitted by the Transit Commission, the situation appears to be about as follows:

1. Approval of the contract before you would definitely commit your board to the construction of the next Brooklyn subway along Bedford Avenue and Bedding Street. The funds available will permit the immediate construction of only one Brooklyn line and therefore I suggest that the board should consider the comparative advantages of more than one route before committing itself to any construction.

2. The action of the Legislature in continuing the State Transit Commission in control over the existing city-owned subways, with power to increase fares and postpone recapture for municipal operation, seems to compell us to construct a new system of independent lines. It appears indisputable to me that the route of any new independent lines should be designed for service of the largest number of people, so that such route may be made self-sustaining in the shortest possible time. No subway can ever be self-supporting at a low rate of fare when the population is all on one side. The existing crosstown route all the way from the turn of Bedford Avenue and Wallabout Street to McCarren Park would have population only on one side because there will be no residential development in the three or four blocks adjoining the river front.

Suggests More Lucrative Route.

3. The crosstown route can be designed that will give a subway to the populous central section of Brooklyn that can be self-sustaining at a five-cent fare and that will be a logical part of an independent system passing through the boroughs of Brooklyn and Manhattan. It seems to me that the new Board of Transportation should be given an opportunity to study the situation before your board definitely adopts a policy. Otherwise, the new board will come into office on July 1 under conditions similar to those which prevented initiative in respect to the route by your recent Conference Committee. When the appropriating body that has constitutional control of the streets takes its position in regard to routes there remains nothing to be settled except details of construction.

4. I believe that before any construction contracts are authorized the new Board of Transportation and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment should adopt a plan to serve at least three of the boroughs. The cost of such a comprehensive plan should be estimated and the available funds should be equitably apportioned to each of the routes. The points at which construction should begin will be a consideration to be decided when it is known what construction is to take place. Every borough would then have an interest in supporting a city plan to have subway bonds exempted from the debt limit by substituting them for water bonds, or else all must face the necessity of providing funds for construction by local assessment. The alternative is to put all the available money into the Washington Heights line and the Brooklyn line and let the other boroughs wait. But I think we should consider the construction on an equitable basis.

5. I believe that a crosstown route through central Brooklyn would be the line of greatest public benefit, but the Bedford Avenue line would certainly be the line of least resistance. If you do not approve this contract you will be classified with the city officials who are wilfully obstructing the progress of subway building. An organized group of property owners working to enhance the value of real estate in the vicinity of Bedford Avenue and Fulton Street at public expense will fight bitterly to keep the crosstown line on Bedford Avenue. Some of the loudest haters of this Administration are in this group. Unless you build a new subway so as to pass through Bedford Avenue at Fulton Street, you will not be deemed fit to hold public office. This group will be energetically supported by all the agitation that the elevated and surface railroads can arouse, because central Brooklyn is regarded as a private railroad preserve. You may expect hot denunciation from any quarters if you set up any competition to the Fulton Street or the Broadway elevated lines of the surface railroads. So put on your gas mask if you decide to reject this contract.

6. Your board is not required by law to either adopt or reject this contract immediately. The only compelling feature at all is that the contractor may withdraw his bid after the expiration of forty-five days from the time it was tendered. As to the technical features, the engineers certify that the contractor is responsible, and that the price is reasonable under present conditions.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN H. DELANEY,
Chairman, Committee of Transportation Facilities.

Why He Changed His Position.

Mr. Delaney explained that he had changed his position regarding the agreement reached with the Transit Commission after the city had failed to get legislation to protect the city's right to "recapture" existing subway lines, according to the provisions of the dual contracts. He declared that the law which continued the State Transit Commission in force gave the commission power to postpone "recapture," and that, although the Legislature passed a law creating the Board of Transportation, it did not give the new body power over the contracts. Mr. Delaney said that he always had opposed tying up the Brooklyn crosstown and Washington Heights lines with existing systems and that the power of "recapture" was important in building up any new city subway system.

"As a representative of the city, I endeavored to get a law adopted that would protect the city in its contracts and in its recapture clause," Mr. Delaney said, "and one of the members of the Transit Commission, who sat with the Conference Committee throughout, insisted on maintaining and succeeded in maintaining in the law the right of that commission to cancel the dual subway contracts and to set back the time of recapture.

"After that experience, I came to the conclusion that there was nothing to be expected, either from this law or the Transit Commission, or the railroad company. In fact, I withdrew my allegiance to the plan as agreed upon in conference. In my judgment, the result of the efforts in the last Legislature and the conferences there is that this city has nothing to expect. It can make a contract today, or it can amend the contract today, and that can be canceled tomorrow. It can make no binding franchise or no binding contract. Any conditions that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment imposes upon its action in approving the use of streets may be nullified and canceled next month by the Transit Commission, and as long as that lasts I am opposed to any further extensions or connections with the existing lines, except to serve local localities where it is appropriate, and a new and independent system must be constructed. Of course, apart from that is the practical reason that they ought to be independent, and the existing systems are already overtaxed with the business passing through them and would be unable to hold any additional traffic anyhow.

"But addressing myself to that letter particularly, that is my explanation of the change of view, and I prevailed, I think, on the members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in this statement. I am assuming all of that responsibility."

Doesn't Recall Hylan's Letter.

Mr. Delaney said he had no recollection of a letter written by Mayor Hylan on March 22, 1922, in which the Mayor opposed the award of the contract for part of the Brooklyn crosstown line, the question apparently having been asked to determine whether Mr. Delaney's change of position had been influenced by this letter of the Mayor.

"The Mayor's letter to which you have referred and which I do not recall, was probably provoked by the same action or lack of action by the Legislature that provoked my change of view also," he said.

Mr. Delaney testified that nothing had been done to start proceedings to declare the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in default of its contract in not having maintained proper service after he had received a letter from Justice William P. Burr, then Corporation Counsel. It was recalled by those at the hearing, but not brought out, that a move to oust the Interborough from operation of the subways was started in 1920 on the ground that the Interborough had failed to comply with an order of the Public Service Commission to increase its service and for other alleged reasons.

"There was quite a controversy at the time," Mr. Delaney said. "There were several public hearings before the Board of Estimate at which Mr. Hedley appeared. I think the railroad company did comply with the service order that had been issued by the Public Service Commissioner and that the Corporation Counsel was assured of that."

"So we can dismiss that, I assume, with the statement that no action was taken looking toward declaring the Interborough in default of its contract as a result of that letter?" Mr. Sherman asked.

"That is correct," said Mr. Delaney.

Takes Up New Subway Plan.

In his testimony at the beginning of the afternoon session Mr. Delaney said that the Board of Transportation's new subway plan, announced two weeks ago, had not yet been formally submitted to the Board of Estimate. "It has not reached that stage yet," Mr. Delaney said. "It requires some more development before it can be submitted."

"The manner in which the plan became public was upon the formal meeting of the Board of Transportation and the consideration and adoption of these lines in public. Now we must prepare a statement with that plan to submit to the Board of Estimate."

Mr. Delaney explained that that part of the route of the proposed new subway system above Sixty-second Street and running to Washington Heights had been validated by the Board of Estimate. The rest of the routes would have to be validated, he said, and the Board of Transportation on transmitting them to the Board of Estimate must send at the same time not only estimates of cost and equipment, but, under the provisions of the new law, an estimate of the prospective financial results of operation for a ten-year period.

Mr. Delaney said that, were it not for this new provision of estimates of returns of operation, the Board of Transportation would now be ready to send the routes to the Board of Estimate for validation preparatory to obtaining the consents of abutting property owners.

Mr. Delaney described the routes and said that the cost of the part that had been validated, known as the Washington Heights line, had been estimated at $53,450,000, and that the cost of the other sections, not yet validated, had been estimated at $114,007,000. He said that there must be added to these amounts $10,000,000 for property to be taken and $5,000,000 for the cost of shops and yards, making the construction cost of the whole proposed line from the Harlem River at about 207th Street to either Fulton or Wall Street about $188,457,000, according to engineers' estimates.

The Cost Per Mile Estimated.

"Would you mind asking how much the cost per mile of construction of this new validated line will be if the Commissioner can give the figures?" Judge Shearn said to Mr. Sherman, and the latter put the desired question.

"I will give you the figures," said Mr. Delaney. "The mileage included in the recently adopted routes that are not yet validated is ten miles and the mileage of the previously adopted routes is 6.65 miles. That portion which will go to the yard is about a mile, so that you would have at that rate about 17.65 miles. The estimated cost with yards, real estate and construction is $186,457,000. Now, if some one will kindly make that calculation you will get the average. The estimates are not made that way, of course."

Mr. Sherman announced that an assistant had made the calculation, which showed about $10,600,000 a mile.

"How could that be made to compare with the cost per mile of new construction under Contract 3?" asked Judge Shearn.

"My recollection is that the estimate of construction for these subway lines, track for track and under certain conditions, will cost nearly, if not quite, double what the construction cost at least in the early days of Contract No. 3," Mr. Delaney replied. "The costs of labor and material are almost as high as they were immediately after the war."

Cost Increase Is 125 Per Cent.

"And that road, that is to cost twice as much per mile, is to be operated on a 5-cent fare?" asked Judge Shearn.

"Well, we will not get into that for the moment," said Mr. Sherman. "It would be operated according to the law governing the fare as it may say on that subject, I assume."

"Whatever the law says, of course," said Mr. Delaney.

"For your information, Mr. Sherman," interjected Mr. Mooney, "Mr. Ridgway (chief engineer of the Board of Transportation) has just said that the percentage would be about 125 per cent., in comparison."

"Not to double the former cost?" asked Mr. Sherman.

"Yes, costs have more than doubled," said Mr. Ridgway. "I am speaking of the cost today and the cost in pre-war times."

"Mr. Ridgway has made an important qualification," said Mr. Delaney. "Of course, a great part of Contract No. 3 was constructed during and after the war. So I think we may safely estimate that the new contracts might run nearly twice as much as the construction we had under Contract No. 3, taking into account that part of the former construction was done during these high-priced times also."

"That is a very clear statement, sir," said Mr. Sherman. "Let me see whether I apprehend it. Even taking the costs under Contract No. 3 and Contract No. 4, which were let when the war times were at their height, and comparing it with the total per mile cost today, the relation would be that at the present time the cost would be about 125 per cent. higher than the costs that were actually incurred in the construction per mile of Contracts Nos. 3 and 4?"

"Nearly So," He Admits.

"I am afraid that must be nearly so," said Mr. Delaney.

"So that on the lines now it would average about $10,600,000 a mile, whereas under those costs it would have been about $5,000,000 a mile," Mr. Sherman continued. "Is that correct?"

"As a matter of deduction, yes, I will say," replied the witness.

In reply to questions by Mr. Sherman, Mr. Delaney gave details of the Board of Transportation's plan for a new subway system, not contained in its original announcement that accompanied formal adoption of the basic routes. These details concerned chiefly proposed lines in the other boroughs but included the statement that it was proposed to run a track of the city's proposed Sixth Avenue line on each side of each side of the tracks of the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company, taking part of the space now used by that company for stations.

Mr. Delaney explained that the proposed Manhattan line to the Bronx would connect with the Central Park West trunk line, the four tracks of which would be expected to handle the traffic that might develop from that branch and from Washington Heights.

"This line shows that our adoption ended at East Fifty-first Street and the borough line," he continued, tracing a course on the map. "That was ended there to keep it within one judicial district in the event that we had to take it to the Court for valuation.

"Our plan will begin there where we have stopped and continue from Nott Avenue in Long Island City, a union station being established at Nott Avenue, from which a line will run to Jamaica. Generally we anticipate it will go through Jackson Avenue, Broadway and Queens Boulevard or immediately contiguous to Queens Boulevard, but perhaps not in the street.

Plan Open Cut Line in Queens.

"The Queens line probably will have an open cut. That is what we are trying to do, because the cost of that will be practically one-half of that of a subway. It runs through a thinly settled territory and we have plenty of open country through which we might acquire right of way to construct an open cut. However, that is entirely undetermined.

"The Brooklyn crosstown line will meet the Queens line at this station in Nott Avenue, turning then through Long Island City to the westerly, going under Newtown Creek and into Manhattan Avenue, where it will pick up a part of the route that has already been validated. We anticipate it will follow Manhattan Avenue to Union Avenue, through Union Avenue to Broadway, and from that point forward is not clearly settled, but the probabilities are that it will be determined to be either in Gates Avenue, or pass from Broadway through Throop Avenue, we anticipate, and then continue either to Gates Avenue, or to Putnam Avenue. We have not fully decided upon that. We are talking to the community representatives. Thence to the Borough Hall section, and through back to Manhattan, joining this line at either Fulton Street or Wall Street."

Mr. Delaney added that this program called for two East River tunnels, one at Fifty-third Street, Manhattan, and one at either Fulton or Wall Street, and that two more tunnels probably would be necessary ultimately.

"For the later development," he continued, "our immediate plan is to lay down this Brooklyn crosstown line that I have described, the Queens line and the Bronx Concourse line, and make one system out of those. Of course, our plan map and our studies also include a connection from the downtown tunnel with the Culver line, which may be recaptured out of the Brooklyn system later on. That, however, would not come in the first stages of construction."

Mr. Delaney said that the board's general plan provided for the construction of a comprehensive system and lines that would avoid competition with any rapid transit lines heretofore built, particularly those owned by the city. He added that the new lines were planned to intersect with existing lines so that passengers might "exchange from one line to another."

"But so far as the operation of the new lines is concerned and so long as they are operated independently of the dual system, then at the points where passengers may change from the new system to either one of the old systems, they would have to pay an extra fare, would they not?" asked Mr. Sherman.

"Yes, undoubtedly, unless some traffic arrangement could be made later," replied Mr. Delaney.

The Prospect of Three Fares.

"Would you ask him whether a passenger who now transfers from an Interborough line to a B. M. T. line pays a double fare?" asked Mr. Mooney.

"Yes," Mr. Delaney replied.

"With the new line, he will, if he transfers to the other two, have to pay three fares," said Mr. Sherman.

"He will be dead by that time," said Mr. Mooney, causing a laugh.

"It will be worth fifteen cents," was the comment of Mr. Delaney, causing another laugh.

Mr. Delaney said it would take five years after beginning construction to complete the Washington Heights subway, a reservation of $10,000,000 for which was made Monday by the Board of Estimate. Upon the suggestion of Mr. Shearn, it was brought out that this $10,000,000 was not an appropriation or a legal commitment and that the Board of Estimate might rescind it at any time before an appropriation for actual construction was made.

Mr. Sherman then questioned Mr. Delaney concerning rejection or failure to approve by the Board of Estimate for half a dozen contracts Mr. Delaney had sent the board while he was Transit Construction Commissioner. The most important of these contracts was one for the second addition of the Interborough shops on West 149th Street, Manhattan. Contracts for the construction of this addition were sent to the board three times, and the last one was approved by the board after Mr. Delaney had been succeeded by the Transit Commission. Mr. Delaney testified that the lowest bid had fallen from $436,191 to $313,154, and it was brought out that there was a delay of two years as compared with a money saving of $143,000.

Mr. Delaney was questioned concerning the uncompleted part of the Fourteenth Street-Eastern line, contracts for which aggregating more than $9,000,000 were approved by the Board of Estimate Monday.

Asked concerning the time that would be required to complete the line, he said that the B. M. T. had not signed the agreement to substitute a subway for the elevated structure specified in its contract but that he thought the city would go ahead. He said it would take about three and one-half years to complete the line and get it ready for operation and that the engineers estimated that it would cost $15,000,000 more to build a subway than an elevated.

Adjournment was taken with Mr. Delaney's examination presumably unfinished. He will not testify today, as Mayor Hylan is expected to be the only witness, but probably will be recalled later.

CRAIG'S 4 BUS BILLS PASSED BY ALDERMEN

Mayor Expected to Sign Them at Once and Then a Court Test Is Looked For.

The Board of Aldermen approved Controller Craig's four "home rule" bills yesterday providing for municipal ownership and operation of bus lines. As the Board of Estimate had already passed the bills, all they need is the signature of Mayor Hylan to become laws.

It is taken for granted at City Hall that the Mayor will sign the bills at once. The Board of Estimate and the Mayor are expected to grant temporary bus permits to private corporations without delay.

After this a fight on the constitutionality of the laws is expected. The bills were passed by both houses of the Municipal Assembly with the knowledge that injunctions might be sought to prevent the city from operating bus lines under these laws.

The vote for the bills in the Board of Aldermen was 48 to 2. It was argued that it would be best to establish experimental routes at once in order to force an early test of the law. The two opposition votes were cast by Alderman John Wirth of Brooklyn, Republican leader in the Board of Aldermen, and Alderman George U. Harvey, Republican, of Queens.

HYLAN ON STATEN ISLAND.

Tells What He Has Done for It in Commerce Chamber Year Book.

The Staten Island Chamber of Commerce issued copies yesterday of a special number of its Bulletin, containing the thirtieth annual year book of the Chamber of Commerce, with an article by Mayor Hylan on what he had done for Staten Island. The Mayor said in part:

I have been accused of spending large sums to develop the outlying sections of the city. I plead guilty. I have done this for the benefit of the city. I found the parent Borough of Manhattan and the adjacent sections of Brooklyn bearing the burdens of government, while the outlying sections contributed little to the tax rolls. It is good business for a corporation to develop its resources. The resources of a city are chiefly its taxable values. I set out to develop these values in the Isle of the parent corporation which is the City of New York.

"It is interesting to note the effect of this policy of businesslike development on real estate values in the five boroughs.

"The increases over the 1917 levels have been: Manhattan, 25.82 per cent.; the Bronx, 38.35 per cent.; Brooklyn, 50.18 per cent.; Queens, 58.74 per cent., and Richmond, 70.68 per cent.

"Staten Island, it will be seen, has made the greatest relative gain of all the boroughs.

"It is only fair to state that there have been no considerable factors especially making for development in Staten Island other than the improvements effected by the City and Borough Administration and the spirit of progress and enterprise engendered in the people of Staten Island by the efforts of the Administration to make up for the neglect of previous administrations.

"I think I have demonstrated what may be made of Staten Island—a thriving, prosperous shipping and industrial centre, an attractive, healthful, populous home section."

THE MAYOR WAITS AN HOUR

But Craig Fails to Appear at Sinking Fund Meeting.

A meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission, which was scheduled for yesterday, was abandoned because of the non-appearance of Controller Charles L. Craig. Mayor Hylan, who waited vainly more than an hour for the Controller, declared that because of the Craig's absence several important matters, including the retirement of $500,000 in old Brooklyn City bonds, had to be postponed.

The Mayor and his associates on the commission made several vain attempts by telephone to bring the Controller to the City Hall. Mr. Craig afterward explained to reporters that last Thursday, when the meeting was mentioned in the regular meeting of the commission, he protested against calling a special meeting almost on the eve of Christmas when it was possible to act immediately on the retirement of the issue of Brooklyn bonds, which are scheduled for retirement on Jan. 1.

"The Mayor refused to act on Thursday when I was ready," said the Controller. "His refusal then was deliberate contrariness. Now I don't propose to neglect important business in my office to gratify a whim of the Mayor."

"I can do nothing with this man Craig," commented the Mayor as he left the meeting room. Another meeting was called for next Friday.

POPE SAYS JUBILEE WILL FOSTER PEACE

PILGRIMS THRONG ROME

Thousands Will See the Holy Year Inaugurated—Illness of Pontiff Is Denied.

ROME, Dec. 23.—Pope Pius today received the entire College of Cardinals, who offered him their Christmas greetings, and later Cardinal Pompili, who presented to him the golden hammer, studded with precious stones, which the Pontiff will use tomorrow at the ceremony of opening the holy door in the basilica of St. Peter's.

The Vatican today issued a positive denial of reports published in American papers that Pope Pius is ill. The Pope, it was stated at the Vatican, is perfectly well. Today he received the usual number of visitors and pilgrims in addition to the Sacred College.

The Pope, when the report was brought to his notice, it is said, recalled that the same rumor was circulated in America on the eve of the consistory at which he presented the red hat to Cardinals Hayes and Mundelein. The Pontiff turned to his secretary, Mgr. Zampini, and declared:

The Pontiff's private physician had the same story to tell. The Pope is perfectly well, he said, and there never has been any question of his not being able to perform the ceremony of opening the sacred door tomorrow.

Though Rome is filled to overflowing with strangers from all parts of the world, comparatively few Americans will see the Pope inaugurate the jubilee year. Practically all of the hotels report that they are filled to capacity, but that the percentage of Americans is rather lower than is usual at this time of the year. The explanation is advanced that American pilgrims probably preferred to avoid the crush that is inevitable in the days following the opening of the holy door and will be visiting Rome later when the crowd is not so great.

All arrangements, meanwhile, have been completed for the ceremony which will mark the beginning of the jubilee year. Workmen have removed the wall which has closed the holy door for the last twenty-five years, leaving only a partition of bricks and plaster, which will be torn down tomorrow after the Pope has struck it three times with the golden hammer.

Four tribunes decorated with red damask and gold have been erected to accommodate the distinguished guests, and wooden barriers have been erected across the outer steps of St. Peter's basilica to prevent the crowd from rushing forward at the first appearance of the Pope.

Pilgrims Present Strange Sights.

Rome, which always has been a cosmopolitan city, harboring visitors from every part of the world, presents a strange sight these last few days with scores of cavalcade of pilgrims who have been attracted to the Eternal City from far away countries by the special spiritual favors which the church grants to the faithful every twenty-five years. Romans in the streets, many of them in their native costumes, these pilgrims attract widespread curiosity wherever they go and are followed around by bands of street urchins, who stare at them open-mouthed.

This jubilee year is the twenty-third recorded in history, although it is known that other jubilee years have been celebrated before at irregular intervals. The first was proclaimed in 1300 by Pope Boniface VIII., distinguished ancestor of the present Italian Ambassador in Washington. He decided that the jubilee years should be held at regular intervals, once every hundred years. This period was reduced to fifty years by Pope Clement VI., to thirty-three by Pope Urban VI., and to twenty-five by Pope Paul II. in 1475, the idea being that every man should have an opportunity of assisting in at least one jubilee year in his lifetime.

The bill proclaiming the first jubilee year under Pope Boniface VIII. was published throughout Christendom and contemporary historians tell us that no less than 2,000,000 pilgrims visited Rome that year, an enormous influx when it recalled how much smaller the population of the world was in those days, and how inadequate were the means of transportation. We also are told that the pilgrims' contributions amounted to 50,000 gold florins in small copper coins alone. Two attendants were placed in St. Peter's to rake the contributions into heaps as the pilgrims threw them on the floor.

The greatest number of pilgrims ever recorded visited Rome for the holy year in 1600, when 3,000,000 journeyed to the Eternal City. 200,000 being present on Easter Day. After that the numbers fell off sharply, until the jubilee year of 1900 attracted only about 300,000 persons. In the coming year, however, it is expected that between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 pilgrims will come, which would set the record in attendance.

Pontiff Emphasizes Need of Peace.

ROME, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—The reception of the Cardinals today by Pope Pius, in order that they might present their usual Christmas greetings to him, was unusually solemn, because tomorrow will mark the opening of the holy door and the commencement of jubilee year.

In his address Pope Pius emphasized the necessity for true peace, especially at the present time, when the Christmastide joined with holy year.

"We hope the words 'Glory to God and on earth peace, to men of good will' will come true," the Pontiff said. "May this holy year bring peace to them and peace to the heart and peace to the will; to the mind, to give mankind through knowledge of their rights and duties, together with a large vision of truth; to the heart, so that men may forever more love each other as brothers, both individually and between the classes and peoples; to the will, because therewith man can put into practice the necessary means to reach peace."

The latter part of the speech laid emphasis on the meaning of holy year, which, the Pontiff said, should be a year of "purification, elevation, santification, redemptions and remission, thus becoming the dawn of that holy peace which we wish should reign in the Kingdom of Christ."

Says Pilgrimages Foster Peace.

Pope Pius ended by saying that the meeting in Rome of so many pilgrims from all parts of the world would contribute toward facilitating universal peace. After his address, the Pontiff distributed to all those present medals commemorating the jubilee year. The medals have on one side an image of the Pontiff, and on the other side a reproduction of the dome of St. Peter's.

Pope Pius not only looked well, but was strong, alert and vigorous. The address of the Pope required twenty minutes in its delivery, the Pontiff all the while standing on the throne. Afterward he conversed with all the Cardinals and many of the Bishops and Archbishops.

Pope Pius tonight had a long interview with Cardinal Merry del Val, Archpriest of the Basilica of St. Peter's, to make sure that everything was ready for tomorrow's picturesque ceremony of opening the Holy Door of St. Peter's, which the Pope will perform by striking three times upon the door with a little golden hammer. The ceremony will be one of singular impressiveness and color, and thousands are expected to try to see it either from places reserved in the basilica for ticketholders, or from the great square in front of the Vatican.

One of the last preliminary rites performed tonight for the ceremony was that of blessing a large basin of water which will be used to sprinkle the Holy Door. This rite was performed by Mgr. Sampini, the Papal sacristan.

The city tonight is filled to overflowing with advance contingents of pilgrims who are expected to flock to the fountain head of Catholicism by the million during the new year. Not only were all hotels filled to capacity, but many pilgrims were housed by the Vatican in what was once the hospice of Santa Marta.

Germany to Run Special Trains.

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—Chancellor Marx and Cardinals Faulhaber of Munich and Schulte of Cologne are among the prominent German Catholics who have expressed their intention of making a pilgrimage to Rome during Holy Year.

Arrangements were perfected today between the Catholic Central Committee headquarters at Wurzburg and the Italian authorities to provide for weekly special trains to arrive in Rome on Wednesdays, and also for the reservation of beds every night for the use of German pilgrims.

The first special train, with about 400 pilgrims, left Germany Dec. 16, the travelers planning to attend the formal opening of the sacred door at St. Peter's tomorrow. The German special trains will be arranged on the basis of direct cars from Berlin, Cologne, Konigsberg and Frankfort weekly, these cars to be combined into one train at the southern frontiers.

One of the greatest problems faced by the Middle European Travel Bureau, which is officially in charge of arrangements, is to take care of American pilgrims arriving in German ports who have neglected to make definite arrangements before leaving the United States, trusting to luck on their arrival in Europe. The Berlin office believes that one chance for such travelers, arriving via Hamburg or Bremen, is to be included on the German quota in the event of vacancies on the weekly German train.

SAYS HORTHY SOUGHT HONOR FROM CHARLES

BERLIN, Dec. 23.—That Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary, tried to make the late Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary pay him a high price for abdicating the Hungarian Regency in Charles's favor is the accusation made by Karl Werkmann, the late Emperor's secretary, in a book just published at Munich.

A conversation is printed therein purporting to have taken place between Horthy and Charles when the latter suddenly appeared at Budapest in 1921 in an endeavor to mount the Hungarian throne as the stepping-stone to the Emperorship of Austria-Hungary.

"What will your Majesty give me if I hand over power to you?" Horthy is alleged to have asked Charles.

The latter is said to have answered he would make Horthy commander of the Hungarian Army. The conversation then is said to have continued thus:

"What else will you give me?" asked Horthy.

"You may keep the ducal title you have granted yourself," replied Charles.

"I want still more," said Horthy.

"What?" asked Charles.

"To be commander of the Hungarian fleet, also," declared Horthy.

"Well, if I have a fleet again you shall be its commander."

"But I want still more."

"What?"

"Your Majesty must decorate me with a medal of some very exalted order."

"You shall have the Order of the Golden Fleece."

At that it is alleged Horthy was delighted and apparently acquiesced in Charles's return to power, but later demanded membership in the Theresa Order, one of the most exalted of the old imperial regime. Charles agreed to this also, declared his secretary, but Horthy, instead of furthering Charles's plans, caused him to be taken over the Hungarian border and betrayed the plans to the Entente Ambassadors.

BELGRADE, Dec. 23.—Violent fighting is reported from the Albanian-Yugoslav frontier between the revolutionists and Albanian Government troops. The Yugoslav Government has consequently ordered the frontier closed.

Large military forces are guarding the border to prevent spread of the struggle into Yugoslav territory.

BELGRADE, Dec. 23.—The Belgrade newspapers today print advices stating that a column of Albanian insurgents entered Tirana last evening. They also state that Scutari has fallen.

The occupation of Tirana, according to the advices, followed a battle at Chafamour in which the troops of Premier Fan Noli were beaten by the rebels under command of ex-Premier Ahmed Bey Zogu.

Another column of insurgents, the messages declare, has occupied Kreya (Kruja) and has cut the Tirana-Durazzo and Tirana-Scutari roads.

GENEVA, Dec. 23.—No answer has been received by the League of Nations from Yugoslavia with regard to the disturbances in Albania. The latter country recently requested an inquiry into alleged Yugoslav raids in Albanian territory.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Discussion of the colonies budget in the Chamber of Deputies was suddenly upset this afternoon by a young and comely negress in the visitors' gallery, who shouted, "Liar, liar." The young woman, who was immediately ordered ejected by the President of the Chamber, was Mlle. Marcelle Bolmont, daughter of the former Deputy from Guadeloupe, who, following his recent defeat, was accused by his successful rival of campaign terrorization, including bomb throwing.

The scandal created by the elections in Guadeloupe has been the subject of official investigations and was brought up in the Chamber again this afternoon by Deputy Candace who read a long list of charges against his political enemies.

IRELAND OPPOSES BRITAIN TO LEAGUE

MEMBERS GET BERLIN PLEA

BRITISH PROTOCOL PARLEY

London Sounds Dominions and India on an Imperial Conference to Decide on Policy.

GENEVA, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—The delicate problem of the relations of the component parts of the British Empire has been raised anew by Ireland's throwing down the gauntlet of diplomatic revolt to the London Government.

Ireland today added to the strenuous schedule of Christmas events already before the League, through the Albanian and German problems, by notifying the Geneva peace organization that she entirely dissents from the views of Great Britain denying Ireland's right to register with the League the famous Anglo-Irish Treaty, which transformed Ireland into a free State.

Ireland, in diplomatic phraseology, told the League that she does not desire to pursue the controversy with Great Britain, yet makes it perfectly clear that she cannot be restricted as to League prerogatives by any limitation imposed by Downing Street.

Ireland's defiance has created an extraordinary interest in League circles because it is believed here that it may be the precursor of similar movements by other parts of the empire, especially Canada and South Africa.

The question involved is held to be far deeper than a ruling as to whether the Irish treaty is an international instrument capable of registration with the League. Ireland's move involves the entire relations of the various units of the British Empire with the League, and, in the judgment of officials in Geneva, may settle how much independence of action can be expected from the colonies and permitted by the League itself.

Question for Imperial Conference.

England's initiative concerning Ireland, it is thought, will furnish a subject for debate at the forthcoming imperial conference, which at its last meeting laid down the principle of diplomatic independence of the component parts of the empire, with mutual consultation, as the guiding rule in foreign policies.

Irishmen contend that no agreement exists authorizing England to speak for Ireland or the other dominions without first obtaining their assent. They argue that Mr. Chamberlain had no right to take his recent stand against Ireland's liberty of action; they remark that Canada refused to be bound by the Turkish treaty, in the negotiation of which she was not represented, and declared that not one dominion would have accepted League membership except upon the condition of independence.

Ireland's communication indicates clearly that she stands by her right to register the treaty. Registration gives that document validity before the World Court and Ireland's right to appeal to that court should any effort be made to infringe the treaty or detract from her independence.

The reply of the Free State, which is moderate but firm in tone, declares that the Dublin Government cannot see that any useful purpose would be served by the initiation of a controversy as to the intentions of any individual signatory of the covenants. It continues:

"The obligations in Article XVIII. are, in their expression, imposed in most specific terms upon every member of the League. The Irish Free State is unable to accept the contention that the clear and unequivocal regulations of that article are susceptible of an interpretation compatible with the limitations which the British Government now seeks to read into them. We accordingly dissent to the point of view expressed by the British Government that the terms of Article XVIII. are not applicable to the treaty of Dec. 6, 1921."

The Irish note ends the controversy, so far as the League is concerned, because neither the British nor Irish Government has requested any further League action. It is pointed out here that if the Dublin Government had wished to make an international issue of the affair it might have demanded an interpretation by the World Court of Justice at The Hague on the legal status of the Irish treaty as an international convention, a point of view which Great Britain declines to accept.

The registration of treaties at the League, however, comes under the supervision of the World Court and it is evident that the Dublin Government, by its communication today, insists on its right to appeal to the Court at any time the terms of the treaty may be brought into question.

Germany's Note Sent to Members.

Germany's note to the League touching on the question of that country's joining the League was sent to all the members today for their comments or suggestions and it is being discussed here with the keenest interest.

The note, which shows that Germany desires an exceptional position as a member of the League because of her lack of armed strength, is regarded in some quarters as an appeal to the League as a whole over the head of the Council, which failed to give Germany satisfaction in previous direct negotiations. While Germany denies any intention of asking for special privileges, she maintains that if she is obliged to participate in all of the League's military sanctions she would be compelled to waive her right to neutrality—"the last defense of an disarmed people."

In discussing the note today, League circles regarded several lines of action as possible. It was believed that the question might go before the new League Commission on Coordination. The commission, which is to meet on Feb. 16, was to prepare for the projected disarmament conference. It was also thought that the German question might be forced on the Council at the March session, or it might even be debated at a special session of the Assembly, which any State may recommend to be convoked.

The general view of League observers here is that the German note is special pleading, which fails to recognize that, as a potential member of the Council, Germany would have a powerful voice in deciding what her military obligations would be in the event of an international conflict involving mutual assistance among League members.

It is remarked also that the second Assembly adopted a resolution stating that the Council should be guided by a pending amendment to Article XVI. of the covenant, which provides that the Council may postpone the enforcement of sanctions for specified periods in the cases of particular members whose special military and geographical situations were recognized.

The opinion is expressed by some that Germany is determined to obtain a heavy reduction of her neighbors' armaments, especially of France and the Little Entente, before subscribing to the Geneva peace protocol, which all admit must be revised. Others believe that Germany probably fears the possible transportation of troops over her territory for use against Russia, with whom she is particularly desirous of remaining on good terms.

London Government Proposes to Discuss League Protocol With Them.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—The British Government sent telegrams today to the Dominions and the Indian Government to ascertain their views as to the feasibility of holding a special conference in order to discuss the Geneva Protocol of Arbitration and Security.

In matters which may involve the issues of peace and war for the empire, the Foreign Secretary is understood to be particularly anxious to have personal and not merely telegraphic or documentary discussions with responsible representatives of the Dominions, the implications of the Geneva Protocol being wide and not too clearly defined.

It is hoped consultations may be held very early in the new year.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23.—The British Government today asked the Dominion Government to agree to a special meeting of the Imperial Conference to consider the League of Nation's Protocol.

While there has been no official statement from the Canadian Government in reply, it is understood Premier King does not favor such a meeting. He thinks an arrangement can be reached by correspondence and without a round table conference in London.

IBANEZ WOULD FIGHT ALFONSO AND RIVERA

Says Threats of Duels Will Not Deter Him From Continuing His Campaign.

MENTONE, France, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—"Alfonso and Primo de Rivera, whom I have attacked in my writings, are the only two men I will fight in a duel," said Vicente Blasco Ibañez, the Spanish author, to The Associated Press today when informed of the numerous challenges emanating from Spain from various personages mentioned in his book who are desirous of seeking satisfaction by arms.

"I need not fight all these people to prove my courage," Ibañez continued. "I have already fought nine duels either with pistols or swords and two of my opponents were seriously wounded, one of them being at the point of death for several days."

The writer remarked that he had received no official challenges either directly or through third parties officially appointed by General Aguilera, General Aizpuru, Viscount d'Eza, former Minister of War, or Benigno Varela, editor of the Madrid Royalist newspaper La Monarquia, all of whom have expressed their intention of seeking a duel with Ibañez of meeting him in some kind of physical encounter.

"I am not acquainted with Señor Varela," continued Ibañez. "I know the others slightly. Refusal to fight them is not due to a feeling that they are unworthy of my steel. But I have struck at the heads with my writings and am prepared to strike at them with weapons on the field of honor."

The Spanish author has taken up his residence in his villa, Vontana Rosa, and intends to spend the better part of the Winter here. He declared that threats of duels or sentence of death by court-martial in Spain would not deter him from continuing his campaign in favor of the liberty of his country. He is preparing another book, in which he promises veritable revelations concerning the régime actually in force in Spain.

"Under Alfonso and the Directorate," declared Ibañez, "Spain has ceased to exist; she has been choked and has lost all the liberty of the press. Writers are no longer permitted to write their free opinions. I am not a politician, but I have abandoned remunerative literary work to assist my country to regain its freedom. When Spain has recovered its liberty I shall re-enter the rank and file and devote myself anew to my chosen profession."

BALKAN MINISTERS TO CONFER ON REDS

Ninchitch Returns With French and British Approval for Anti-Bolshevist Plans.

BELGRADE, Dec. 23.—The anti-Bolshevist front in the Balkans is beginning to take definite shape. The latest phase is marked by the triumphant return of the Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Ninchitch, from Paris, where he was invested, as it were, wit hthe sword and banner of the new anti-Soviet crusade both by the French and British Governments.

In an interview in this morning's papers the Foreign Minister declares that Yugoslavia's position has been tremendously strengthened and her desires and demands find increasing appreciation with the great powers. He added that Albanian complaints against Yugoslavia will be disregarded and that he has reached an agreement with Mussolini pledging both countries to respect Albanian independence.

M. Ninchitch further declared he had an opportunity to discuss the situation thoroughly with MM. Painlevé and Loucheur and Austen Chamberlain regarding anti-Bolshevist action in the Balkans. M. Ninchitch said a similar movement was at present on foot in all Europe. This will greatly influence Yugoslavia's domestic politics, he said. The Government, he added, would proceed with full severity of the law against those who work against the safety of the country with support of the Third International.

This last part of the Minister's statement is interpreted as an indication of the Government's intention to crush the Opposition. A similar policy is being followed by the Bulgarian and Rumanian Governments.

It is reported that M. Ninchitch will meet the Rumanian Foreign Minister, M. Duca, early in January at Temesvar. This, of course, will be in connection with the anti-Bolshevist bloc.

The Bulgarian Premier, M. Tsankoff, will arrive in Belgrade on Dec. 28, it is announced.

This means that, having got the sanction of Great Britain and France, the Balkan States will get down to brass tacks in dealing with the Bolshevist problem.

ALLIES WILL DRAFT NEW NOTE TO BERLIN

PLEA TO GENEVA RESENTED

French See in It Another Example of Bad Faith on the Part of Germany.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Marshal Foch, as President of the Versailles Interallied Military Council, today handed to the Secretary of the Ambassador's Council a partial report which he had received from the Commission of Military Control in Germany on the extent to which the commission has to date found that Germany has conformed with the disarmament conditions of the Peace Treaty and the last demand of the ambassadors.

This report has been in turn aumbitted by the ambassadors to their Governments and on Friday, if replies are received from the Governments the ambassadors will meet to register their decision whether or not the Cologne zone shall be evacuated.

It has already been made clear for the time at least the British troops will remain. A report from Berlin says definitely that Germany has not satisfied the Allied demand for the demilitarization of the police and that as long as this action is not taken the strength of "mobilizable forces must be reckoned 200,000, twice the amount permitted by the Treaty of Versailles.

Except on that point the report is understood to be not altogether unfavorable. In comparison with the amount of disarmament work that has been done the discoveries of concealed arms and other instances of infringement of the treaty stipulations are said to be not very great. Both the Control Commission and Foch's committee, however, underline the importance of the fact that the police continue on a military footing under the direction of the General Staff and against repeated formal requests by the Allies that the police formations be put under civil authority.

Treaty Stipulations Not Fulfilled.

The text of the Versailles Treaty lays down very definitely in Articles 428 and 429 that evacuation of the Cologne bridgehead will be carried out Jan. 10 only if the conditions of the treaty have been faithfully fulfilled by Germany. And in view of her attitude taken first on the reparations question and now on disarmament there is considered here to be no chance whatever that even M. Herriot's Government can interpret the German attitude and action as faithful fulfillment.

About the condition of German disarmament the Allies have still the last word. They can on Friday decide to maintain the occupation of Cologne. But profiting by experience of the benefit of outside opinion Germany has on the eve of the allied decision about the Cologne area laid her case against disarmament indirectly before the neutral members of the League of Nations. The skill of that move is well appreciated here but it is commented that it is a kind of skill which only increases distrust of Germany and hardens opposition to any concession.

Looked at from the allied point of view Berlin's note to Geneva has this appearance, that Germany is pleading to be allowed to break one engagement so that she can accept another. But what proof is there, asks the Temps tonight, that Germany will abide by a second engagement? It is no annulment to public confidence in her written promise, it says, that she should deliberately seek to avoid one responsibility because promising to accept another which is not even definitely framed.

British Would Like to Withdraw.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—It is possible that the Council of Ambassadors at its meeting in Paris this week, after considering ad interim reports from the allied military authorities on armament conditions in Germany, will send a communication to Berlin on the subject, giving the allied views, it was learned in British official circles today.

In this connection it was pointed out that Great Britain had no wish to continue the occupation of the Cologne area for a longer time than that stipulated in the Treaty of Versailles, under which the evacuation date would be Jan. 10 next. Reports from the Allied Military Commission on German disarmament required under the treaty had been delayed, however, because the Germans for a considerable time had not given adequate facilities for inspections.

Great Britain, it was added, considered the decision to move out of the Cologne bridgehead so important that it should not be made until mature consideration was given to the final report on disarmament conditions, and this probably could not be had until after Jan. 10.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—M. Charles Benoist, until last week Ambassador to The Hague, has returned to Paris ready to join the anti-Government forces. He is one of half a dozen Ambassadors whom Premier Herriot "retired from active service" in what is declared by his opponents to have been an unjustifiable attempt to give all official plums to his own party.

The Ambassador in a letter to the Premier published this afternoon, says:

"The polite formulas in which you wrapped up your decision of Oct. 16 have not concealed its character. You have not as Minister of Foreign Affairs retired a collaborator. It is as chief of the Radical Socialist Party that you have chased a former Deputy of the Seine Department from his post as envoy of France at The Hague."

SAVED BY CRIPPLED DOG.

Family in Monticello Awakened by Animal When House Burns.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Although unable to get about because of injuries sustained when run over by an auto, Rover, a dog belonging to Mr. Mendelson of Monticello, saved the family from being burned to death when their home was destroyed last night.

The family was awakened by the dog's loud barking and the house was found to be in flames. The parents and children barely had time to escape.

The family had decided to kill Rover, but now they declare he will be permitted to die of old age.

WILL ASK US TO JOIN REPARATION BOARD

Allies Want United States to Help Collect as Well as Share Reparations.

SUGGEST FULL MEMBERSHIP

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—It is understood that the Allies will suggest to the United States Government that it name an official member of the Reparation Commission if it wishes to share in the money the commission expects to collect from Germany through the Dawes plan.

This reported intention to make such a move is thought to have been back of Mr. Chamberlain's suggestion in his recent note where he referred to the advisability of an adjustment of responsibilities in case of the American damage claims being admitted to share in the Dawes annuities.

Under existing arrangements Washington assumes no responsibility for any acts of the Reparation Commission, the Dawes plan included. While seeking to share in its collections to the extent of the American damage claims the United States has no official connection with the commission, it being a body deriving its being from the Versailles Treaty, which the United States did not ratify.

However, there are already twice as many members of American nationality on the commission as representatives of allied nationalities. They have one delegate each, while the United States has two. There is Delegate Thomas N. Perkins, unofficial official American member of the Reparation Commission, and there is Delegate James A. Logan, official unofficial member, or observer, as the Colonel is better known.

Mr. Perkins's job exists by virtue of the London agreement last June, which provided that an American citizen should sit upon the commission when it considers matters relating to the Dawes plan. He is an official member so far as the commission is concerned, but he is unofficial so far as Washington is concerned.

Colonel Logan has been American observer on the commission since the retirement of Roland W. Boyden. He is unofficial so far as the commission is concerned, but he is official so far as Washington is concerned.

But Washington takes no responsibility for what the Commission does, either by the vote of Mr. Perkins or the advice of Colonel Logan. As the Allied delegates see it, if they do well America points with pride, if they do not do well, they are only unofficial. It is alleged that if the Commission with which they are connected succeeds in collecting money from Germany America wants a part of it; if it does not succeed America will leave to others the job of doing something about it.

Colonel Logan's position at times seems specially paradoxical. Most times he is unofficial but sometimes he is official. For example, while unofficial on the Reparation Commission which collects from Germany he is the American official delegate at the finance ministers' meeting to divide up what is collected.

It is pointed out here that he is quite official when there is a discussion of the Quai D'Orsay issue dividing the Dawes annuities, but when he goes up the street to the Hotel Astoria, where the Reparation Commission meets to consider how to oblige Germany to meet her obligations, a quick metamorphosis makes him suddenly quite unofficial again. Unkind jokers have said that when Colonel Logan enters the meeting the Chairman has to halt the proceedings to ask him if he is official or unofficial this morning.

However bizarre the nature of his position, it has not prevented Colonel Logan doing excellent work, and if his situation sometimes appears undignified for the representative of the richest and most powerful nation on earth it is agreed that it is not his fault.

But the position of the American Government toward the Reparation Commission is sometimes irritating to the Allies. It is felt here that so long as America took the position that she had not ratified the Versailles Treaty and so long as she had not asked for reparations under that treaty, it was within her rights to say she need have no member on the Reparation Commission. But now that America seeks to collect her reparations through the commission some allied statemen think she should have one whole member instead of two half members, or, in other words, that if she wants German money she should help to collect it.

YANGTZE GOVERNORS RESIST DISMISSALS

Kiangsu Hears That Lu Plans Invasion—Other Provinces May Oppose Peking.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Dec. 23.—Chi Hsueh-yuan, the Military Governor of Kiangsu, is opposing his dismissal by the Peking Government, and remains at Nanking, evidently endeavoring to resist his successor, General Lu Yung-hsiang, his defeated rival in the Chekiang-Kiangsu war.

"Lu is mobilizing a Mukden army for the occupation of Kiangsu, and the Kiangsu people are said to be alarmed. It is said that the neighboring Governor of Chekiang also is on the alert to fight an Anfu nominee. The Hupeh Governor likewise is in doubt as to his position, while those of Anhwei and Kiangsi already have been summarily dismissed.

If the Peking Government represented a military combination these personages would have little hope of success, but present indications are that they will hold on, and further fighting in the Yangtze Valley is possible if wholesale changes in high officials are persisted in, unless compromises are made.

KATO ASSURES AMERICA OF JAPAN'S FRIENDSHIP

Premier Denies It Is Contemplating War or Preparing in Secret to Attack any Country.

TOKIO, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—Responding to official expressions from the United States and American editorial opinion, as cabled here regarding Japanese-American relations, Premier Kato tonight told The Associated Press of his appreciation of the newest aspect of the situation between the two countries.

"Japan is keenly appreciative of the earnestness displayed by President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes," said the Premier, "in denouncing efforts of naval propagandists to embroil Japan and America; we are hardly less grateful for the extraordinary expressions of cordiality used in welcoming the new Ambassador to the United States.

"America has thus given further assurance of the realness of her friendship toward Japan. We are not misled by the vicious activities of irresponsible groups of individuals in either country. We know the United States desires peace; we know Japan desires peace.

"Japan is not contemplating war with any country nor preparing in secret, nor overtly, for war. She maintains her national defense as best she can, and in doing so is comforted by the knowledge that American authorities have repeatedly affirmed their confidence, in spirit and in fact, of American adherence to the principles to which both countries have committed themselves."

In conclusion the Premier said earnestly:

"We expect to conduct our relations with America, in all their developments, in the faith that we are striving toward that goal, and that we shall attain it only through honest cooperation. In this belief we are unable to regard any question between the two countries as incapable of an amicable and satisfactory solution."

Published reports to the effect that a protest had been lodged by Japan with the United States against the erection of wireless stations in China by American concerns brought an official denial from the Foreign Office here today.

The Foreign Office said the Government had no intention of injecting the radio matter into the present situation, with which Washington agrees.

Japanese objection to the Federal Telegraph Company and the Radio Corporation of America opening in China was heard when Richard P. Schwerin, President of the Federal Company, announced that a contract had been signed with the Chinese Government granting the two companies a franchise to erect and operate five powerful wireless stations in that country at a cost of $13,500,000.

The Japanese objection was based on the assertion that American radio operation in China constituted an infringement of the agreement of the Chinese Government with the Mitsui Company of Japan, which carried a monopoly for wireless construction in China for thirty years. The Chinese Government did not yield until the American Government had sent a note on the subject of the "open door" policy.

The "present situation" referred to in the foregoing dispatch probably refers to the internal situation in China.

CONFLICT OVER TROTSKY AS RIGA HEARS OF IT

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

RIGA, Dec. 23.—Zinovieff, President of the Third International, and dictator of the Leningrad district, narrowly escaped with his life on Monday according to reports reaching here, when a band of workmen raided a resort, beating Zinovieff and his companions in the process. Only the timely arrival of troops saved the occupants from death. Two workmen were shot before the military succeeded in staging a rescue.

The workers — supporters of Leon Trotsky—enraged by Zinovieff's attack on their leader, had made previous attempts to find Zinovieff at resorts where he entertains delegations of foreign Communists. During the past week workmen had raided two of the most notorious of these in Leningrad, severely beating the occupants in searching for Zinovieff. On both occasions the militia was compelled to fire on the crowd.

According to the story Madame Ellilina, Zinovieff's sixth wife, finally informed the Trotskyists of her husband's whereabouts. She is reported to have divorced Zinovieff, and to have given Trotsky and his followers a long account of her husband's and other important commissars' misconduct.

Trotsky is said to be using this information to strengthen his position and already the workers arrested following the raid have been released upon a special order from Moscow.

Travelers arriving here from Moscow report that the city is in ferment, several open clashes have resulted between special Cheka troops and the Red army which has remained loyal to Trotsky, whose present whereabouts are unknown.

The report that student officers of the Moscow Military Academy arrested Stalin, detaining him in their arracks several hours, and that he was released by a special cheka detachment, is confirmed here. Several shots were fired during the rescue, but the total casualties are not known.

While the Soviet Government is redoubling its propaganda against Trotsky and the press is publishing pages filled with resolutions of condemnation, supposedly passed by Red army garrisons and workers in various factories, the popularity of the War Commissar continues to grow.

Trotsky's picture has again been removed from the side of Nicolai Lenin's in the reception room of the local Soviet legation and the Soviet Press Bureau reports that this action is the result of a general order sent all Russia to remove Trotsky's pictures from all public gathering places. The Soviet press also is instructed not to print further articles by Trotsky and all his books and pamphlets are being confiscated wherever found.

Shipping Board to Ask New Liners.

Congress will be asked tomorrow by the Shipping Board for permission to construct two new Atlantic liners of the type of the George Washington, E. C. Plummer, Vice Chairman of the board announced at the annual reunion of the Veterans' Association of the steamship Leviathan on board the vessel here last night. This, Mr. Plummer said, was the answer of the Shipping Board to reports that American shipping was vanishing from the seas. Shipping men said that the money required to build the proposed liners was already in the hands of the Shipping Board, realized from the sale of obsolete vessels. They said that permission of Congress was the only step necessary before starting actual construction.

HUNGARY HEARS ZITA PLANS RETURN SOON

HORTHY'S POSITION DUBIOUS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUDAPEST, Dec. 23.—There have been indications lately in Hungary that the Legitimist Party, which has for some time kept itself in the background, again mean business.

Hard on the re-entrance of the veteran Legitimist statesman Count Julius Andressy into the political arena comes the news that ex-Empress Zita, who for the last two years has lived in the quiet fishing village of Le Queitio, on the northern coast of Spain, wishes to return to Hungary.

Zita, who shared with her husband, the unhappy Emperor Charles, his Madeira exile, has never relinquished her claim for the Hungarian throne, which she maintains belongs rightfully to her twelve-year-old son Otto.

Hungarian Legitimists speak openly of King Otto, if, and the boy "King's" photographs may be seen in all the shop windows in Budapest. It is reported from quarters supposed to be close to the ex-Empress that she plans to return to Hungary in the near future to live at the old royal hunting castle of Godollo, about an hour's distance from Budapest, which is now the Summer palace of Regent Horthy. Zita maintains that there is no legal reason or obligation imposed by the peace treaties to prevent her from returning to and residing in Hungary with her family. She points out that no other member of the Hapsburg family is under similar interdict.

She recently addressed a note to the Council of Ambassadors at Paris, demanding the restoration of the Hapsburg family property in the succession States, and announcing her intention to take up residence in Hungary. This communication, it is understood, has not yet been answered.

Nevertheless, it is highly unlikely that Zita's wish will see fulfillment, as neither Austria, Czechoslovakia nor Yugoslavia would permit Zita to travel through their territory to Hungary.

A great gain has been scored by the Legitimist movement in the recent Judgment of the Supreme Court of Hungary approving of the confiscation of Count Michael Karolyi's property on the ground that he committed high treason and lese majesté. Count Karolyi, as is well remembered, extracted from King Charles his abdication in the revolution of October, 1918. The Legitimists have always held that according to the Hungarian Constitution the abdication has never been valid, and for the first time this contention has received legal sanction by a decree of a Hungarian court.

This decision is generally regarded as a hard blow to Regent Horthy, whose whole position rests on the assumption that Charles's abdication was valid. It will be remembered that in October, 1921, when Charles made a last attempt to regain the throne, Horthy had Charles's train shelled, had the King imprisoned and turned him over to the Entente Powers. This was no less high treason and lese majesté in the legal sense than Count Karolyi's act.

Horthy was put into power by a counter-revolution which had the effect of a revolution. Thus Horthy's title is legally no less dubious than Bela Kun's. He is the regent of a kingdom without a king, and it is generally believed that his power daily loses ground, while the Legitimists' strength is gaining. The two other Hapsburg princes, Joseph Francis and Albrecht, both of whom were raised in Hungary, have also been mentioned as possibilities for the throne. It is understood that in the near future they will sign a declaration pledging themselves never to dispute Otto's claim.

Premier Bethlen's position is also somewhat ambiguous. No one really knows how he stands, but the general view is that he will come through on the winning side. He is Regent Horthy's Prime Minister, but he is known to cherish good relations with the Legitimists.

EDITH KELLY MUST PAY BILL FOR STOCKINGS

Court Agrees With Gould's Attorney that No Woman Needs 70 Pairs a Month.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Miss Edith Kelly must pay for seventy pairs of silk stockings which she bought during a month's time when she was still the wife of Frank J. Gould, a Paris court decided today. Should she win her appeal pending in Versailles against the decision of another court, which held that she was not entitled to claim half of Mr. Gould's French properties, Miss Kelly will then be permitted to bring action against her husband to have the price of the stockings refunded by him.

The price of the stockings—the sum involved in the suit was 3,000 francs—was not the point at issue so much as was the question of whether the defendant was unduly extravagant. Mr. Gould's attorney argued that, howsoever beautiful might be the lady's ankles, she could not possibly urge that it was necessary to buy seventy pairs of silk stockings to adorn them for the short term of one month. The learned Magistrate acquiesced.

COOLIDGE BARS RECEPTION.

Will Permit an Inaugural Ball, but Won't Attend It.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—President Coolidge put his foot down today on suggestions for an inaugural reception. He doesn't object to a ball held in connection with the inauguration, provided he does not have to attend.

The President believes that those who like to dance should be permitted to do so, but he doesn't care for dancing and consequently will not attend any balls where he might be expected to take part in that pastime.

box from which Harriet Mosier of Olean, N. Y., is said to have eaten, contained poison, was made today by Mrs. George B. Ensminger of Columbia, Miss., who assisted in preparing the candy.

"The candy was home-made and shipped to George B. Ensminger Jr., who is with his grandmother," said Mrs. Ensminger. "There must be some mistake, because I know the candy was not poisoned.

She declared that the cook had helped her to prepare the candy and "that while there was some poison in the kitchen she was positive that none of it could have gotten into the candy."

Efforts were being made to reach Mr. Ensminger, who is said to be in Gulfport.

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 23.—Marion County authorities said tonight in a telephone message from Columbia that they had received no instructions from the Olean police to arrest Mrs. Ensminger of Columbia, charged in a warrant in Olean with having sent poison through the mails in a box of candy, alleged to have caused the illness of Miss Harriet Mosier.

statement of the Ambassador. It became known that President Coolidge's attitude was that until the French position with respect to the war debt was communicated to the American Debt Commission no cognisance could be taken of it. It was in this connection that the intimation came from the White House that the Ambassador had addressed himself to the American people rather than to the Government or the official body which has been entrusted by Congress with arrangements for the funding of the allied war debts.

The President was represented as believing that as the position of the United States in connection with the funding of the debts had been made clear in the act of Congress any proposal of the French Government for a funding arrangement should be made to the commission.

It was pointed out that the debt-funding law had to be modified by Congress to obtain a settlement with the British Government and the inference was obtained that any suggestion of modification by France could be properly communicated to the commission. Until that was done, it was indicated, the President was not in a position to comment on the French debt situation or to say whether he would communicate the French proposal to Congress should it embody a suggestion for modification of the terms of the existing statute.

Secretary Mellon, the head of the Debt Commission, and Secretary Hughes, a member of the commission, according to the understanding in French diplomatic quarters, had heard the suggestion of the moratorium, not formally, but in sufficiently plain terms to make them cognisant of the trend of French official ideas on the subject. It was surprising, therefore, to those having knowledge of the French position to hear that the remarks of Ambassador Jusserand about a moratorium had been construed as addressed to the American public rather than to the Debt Commission.

In these circumstances the statement of the Ambassador is looked upon in circles acquainted with the French attitude as not embodying a plea to the American public as much as a public statement of the representations that had been made to the American officials concerned, even though these officials were not officially and formally approached.

NEW DEFENDS BILL FOR HIGHER POSTAGE

He Tells Congress Committee Publishers' Statements Concerning Costs Are Wrong.

CLAIM OF PROFIT DENIED

Publishers Ask for Delay, but Chairman Moses Refuses the Request.

Special to the New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—A joint subcommittee of the Senate and House Post Office Committees began hearings today on the Sterling bill, which authorizes increases in postal rates sufficient to insure a $68,000,000 salary rise for postal employes, and prepared to rush the measure through Congress before the Senate can act, on Jan. 6, on the President's veto of the postal salaries increase bill.

Against the opposition of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, on whose shoulders would fall a large part of the burden under the Sterling bill, Senator Moses of New Hampshire, Chairman of the committee, announced that he would hold hearings Christmas Eve, Friday and Saturday and would do his best to make a report to the full committee by the end of the week.

Postmaster General New, who replied to the recent accusation of the publishers that the bill was not based upon scientific conclusions, and Joseph Stewart, the expert who made the cost ascertainment of postal operation, occupied the stand all day today. Representatives of the publishers are expected to appear tomorrow, and will reiterate the opposition stated today that the bill is not correctly framed and that there is no need for such frantic haste for legislation in the matter.

New Replies to Publishers.

Practically all of Mr. New's testimony was in the form of a prepared statement in which he said a letter recently written by the Publishers' Association to Senator Dale of Vermont, criticising the cost ascertainment report, "advances theories of cost accounting, which are fundamentally wrong and contrary to the recognized authorities, and uses statistics in a manner misleading, and does not offer an excuse for ignoring the opinions of the accounting firms" who had approved the Post Office Department's methods.

"The Publishers' Association claim that second-class mail show a profit over transportation expenses is incorrect," said Mr. New's statement. "They claim they received no service to be charged for in the post offices and the railway mail service, while, as a matter of fact, they receive a very extensive service there.

"The Publishers' Association's theory of dividing cost of rural delivery is indefensible, when they claim that the cost of this service had not been paid from postal revenues. The association complains that 40 per cent. of the cost of rural delivery was allocated to second-class and that this is unjust because it is based on pieces, number of stops and weight. Weight does not enter into it, nor do number of pieces.

"Although enjoying the free-in-county privilege, the association does not want to be charged with its cost. The cost is only an incidental feature of second class and the cost of the whole must be charged somewhere."

Mr. New also asserted that the publishers were wrong in asserting that second-class mail matter was charged with a vast account of overhead expense. He said the overhead named was really the entire post office service.

"A casual examination of facts leads inevitably to a conclusion of loss on second-class matter," continued Mr. New, arguing that the revenue was too small and the service too large for it to be otherwise.

"No Desire to Raise Rates."

"The Post Office Department has no desire to raise the rates of any one," said the Postmaster General, when he had concluded his formal statement. "We would get no satisfaction from that. But if we are required by an act of Congress to raise $68,000,000 to pay employes we must get the money from somewhere.

"There are two alternatives. One is to take the money directly from the taxpayers. The other is to tax users of mails sufficiently to realize the money. In trying to do this the Postmaster General had only favorable prejudices to every one. No one likes the draft on his pocketbook to be enlarged, but sometimes it is necessary."

Representative Ramseyer of Iowa remarked that Mr. New had legal authority to act with the Interstate Commerce Commission in raising fourth-class rates. He asked why, if that was so, Mr. New had submitted the fourth-class increase to Congress, where it would be "made a political football."

Mr. New said he thought it best "for the purpose of a better understanding" to let Congress know of all contemplated increases.

The Post Office Department, Mr. New said, was gradually working to a place where it would be self-supporting. He quoted deficiencies of the department in former fiscal years as being in 1919, $33,000,000; 1920, $39,000,000; 1921, $80,000,000; 1922, $68,000,000; 1923, $37,000,000, and 1924, $24,000,000.

"But," he said, "we estimate a loss of only $10,000,000 in 1925, and if the department continues at its present receipts and expenditures I hope we will be on a self-supporting basis, and a little better, in 1926. But we cannot do this if there is an added cost of $68,000,000, because that would be a burden for several years."

May Increase Consumer's Costs.

Senator Oddie of Nevada asked whether the Postal Department had considered the proposition of users of parcels post passing on the increased costs to the consumers.

"The department has thought of it," was Mr. New's reply. "I am an old-time publisher myself, and I realize that anybody in business must readjust selling prices to meet heavy increased expenses. Something occurs, a wage raise and so on, and a readjustment may be necessary. That may be true in the case of the newspapers or the parcels post users. But that matter is their business."

The sum of $66,390,740 may be raised through the increases suggested in the Sterling bill, Mr. Stewart told the committee.

"The recommendations we made are designed to be practical," Mr. Stewart said. "If we raise the rates on the special classes of mail we may ruin our business."

Under the bill, he continued, first class letters mailed in drop boxes would need 1½ cents instead of 1 cent to carry them. Post cards and private mailing cards would go at the same rate. Reading matter in publications except newspapers would be charged at 2 cents per pound under the second class program. Reading matter in newspapers would cost 1½ cents and reading matter in religious and scientific papers maintained by organizations not established for profit would be charged 1¼ cents.

Rates on Advertising Matter.

Zone.	Present Rate. Cents.	Proposed Rate. Cents.
8	10	10

If advertisements constituted less than 5 per cent. of a publication the rate for the whole would be at reading matter rate. Trade journals would be charged 2 cents on reading matter and zone rates on advertising.

"I am afraid you'll find the committee afloat on a sea of percentages. Can you not state what the Sterling bill means in terms of dollars when it comes to revenues from advertising?" asked Senator Moses.

Mr. Stewart replied that daily newspaper advertising would realize $4,729,064 and weekly newspaper advertising $624,319. Reading matter would bring in $762,682.

On third class matter the bill proposes 1½ cents for each ounce below eight ounces, against 1 cent today, but books, catalogues, seeds and plants remain at 1 cent. Discussion of this adjustment led to a statement by Representative Kelly of Pennsylvania that the huge catalogues of mail order houses were favored in the proposed schedules.

Stating that 60,000,000 of these catalogues, weighing four pounds each, were mailed annually, Mr. Kelly held that they should pay a higher rate, but Mr. Stewart pointed out that if too much of an increase was placed on the catalogues the mail order houses would ship them by freight to centres where they could be distributed.

"We would lose the business. It's said it's near that point now," he added.

Senator Harreld of Oklahoma argued that the catalogues should be encouraged because they made for increased parcel post business.

Publishers Ask More Time.

The publishers, as represented by John Stewart Bryan of The Richmond News-Leader, asked for thirty days in which to analyze the cost ascertainment statement, which, the publishers said, had taken more than two years to prepare "in secret," yet they had not obtained the statement until last Saturday afternoon. It was not until Friday that the publishers were notified that the subcommittee proposed to hold hearings today to rush the bill through by the end of the week.

"Thus we come here today," said the publishers' statement, "faced with the necessity of answering in a few days' time, including a Sunday and Christmas, a finding against our business by a great department of this Government after an investigation extending over a period of two years' time.

"It is our feeling that no emergency confronts Congress at this moment which compels such hasty legislation with regulation of postal rates, and, being of this opinion, we respectfully request that your committee, before acting on the Sterling bill, which substantially doubles the cost of delivering newspapers by mail in near-by zones, grant to all users of the mails affected by these proposed rates sufficient time to study this report of the Post Office Department and submit to you our arguments, supported by ample evidence, to the effect that the increases in rates on daily newspapers, based upon the conclusions of the report, if enacted into law, not only will fail of their purpose to produce additional revenues, but will cripple and unquestionably destroy in part one of the most vital businesses of the country, without any corresponding benefit to the National Government.

"As it has taken the Post Office Department more than two years to prepare its case in support of the Sterling bill rates, the publishers of daily newspapers, as well as their subscribers affected by those rates, are not unreasonable in asking an opportunity to make themselves acquainted with the voluminous provisions of this report and its theories of allocation, as well as time to prepare and submit evidence.

"In the brief time that this report has been in our hands we have found many discrepancies in its statement of facts, and we have found conclusions based on those alleged facts which we have challenged. At the proper time we will set forth our reasons more specifically for challenging them."

URGES PAY REFORM FOR OFFICE WORKERS

Special to the New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—More equitable adjustment of office workers' salaries in proportion to their positions and better fitting of positions to the abilities of office workers are two of the aims of a survey made by Professor F. A. Kingsbury, University of Chicago psychologist, and reported as a part of the work of a special research committee on salary administration.

The report was presented to a conference of executives which met recently in New York City and which included in its membership the office managers of representative big business.

A report compiled by the committee followed the analysis which Professor Kingsbury and others made in grading positions in the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago. It outlines general principles involved in standardizing office workers' salaries, and the technique practiced in the cases where such standardizing has been undertaken.

Scientific standardization is designed to replace guesswork in grading positions held and in determining the personal efficiency and experience of the incumbent, according to the report.

Too many incumbents of office positions have obtained their places through "pull" or employment emergencies and remain in the job even though they are unfitted for those positions, Professor Kingsbury points out. The report of the committee is intended to point out a remedy for such inequalities.

SHEARER JUDGMENTS FILED.

Total Involved in Three Obtained by Default Is $13,403.

Three judgments by default were filed in the Supreme Court yesterday against William B. Shearer, aggregating $13,403. The papers were served on Mr. Shearer at the Shelton Hotel on Nov. 24 last but no answers were filed. It was said at the hotel last night that he left soon afterward. One judgment, for $5,624, obtained by Albert T. Swords, was based on two notes given by Shearer to Charles H. Sabin, one for $2,500 in 1919 and one for $2,000 in 1922, which were transferrred to Mr. Swords.

In a suit by Emil H. Haupt, a jeweler of 11 Maiden Lane, to recover $3,890 for jewelry sold in 1920, the complaint alleged that Mr. Shearer falsely stated that sums were due him on accounts in excess of the value of the jewelry. Judgment was entered for $4,789. The third judgment, for $3,060, was obtained by George H. Carnahan on a note made Aug. 20, 1922.

Bans Mummers' Jibes at Gen. Butler

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—General Butler, Director of Public Safety, and his police force must not be caricatured by participants in this New Year's mummers' parade, captains of clubs planning to march in the affair were told today in a communication from a City Council committee. Heretofore, the parade, a peculiarly Philadelphia institution, has been marked by special divisions in which burlesques of current events have been featured. The ban against jibes at General Butler was supplemented by the admonition that "no malicious humor is wanted." Female impersonators were instructed to wear adequate wraps.

Missing Ontario Tug Safe in Port.

Christmas is but one day away and the HUNDRED NEEDIEST CASES will remain the neediest unless you help.

NAVAL COURT HEARS SHEARER 3 HOURS

WANTS ADMIRALS CALLED

Capt. Osterhaus Said to Have Admitted That He Wrote the Letter Revealing Facts.

William B. Shearer, civilian naval expert, testified voluntarily yesterday before the special court of inquiry convened by the Secretary of the Navy, Curtis D. Wilbur, to investigate a leak of confidential naval data.

Although the proceedings of the court were guarded even more strictly than on Monday, when it began its sessions, it was learned that Shearer was the first witness of the day. He was questioned for three hours.

Shearer's presence here was caused by the publication on Nov. 15 of a letter from which criticisms of a Cabinet officer were only thinly veiled by the deletion of his name. The letter also told of a war game being played out by the Board of Strategy at the War College at Newport, and asserted that a spy in the British service as an enlisted man was present at the game.

Mr. Shearer, accompanied by a naval officer, went through the gate unchallenged and proceeded to the office of Admiral Charles L. Plunkett, where the court is meeting. There Shearer was presented to its members, Captain Orton P. Jackson of the War College, Newport, Chairman; Captain André M. Proctor, Captain G. P. Stone and Lieut. Commander Spenser S. Lewis, Recorder, all of them of this naval district. There were also present in the room Captain Hugo W. Osterhaus of Newport, a son of Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, retired, and Captain Robert L. Berry, in charge of recruiting here. Both of the latter, it was said, were called to testify after Shearer had been heard.

According to the information of a TIMES reporter, these things happened at yesterday's hearing.

Shearer was first made to swear that he would not divulge what transpired in the room. A newspaper story containing a letter said to have been written by Captain Osterhaus from Newport to Captain Berry here was then shown to him. He was asked whether he had authorized its publication, and he said he had. He was asked from whom he got the letter, and replied that Captain Berry gave it to him. He was then conducting a campaign to improve the condition of the navy, which he said had fallen below the strength authorized under the 5—5—3 treaty. In this campaign he had sought to prevent the scrapping of the post-Jutland battleship Washington. On the day the Supreme Court decided against him he gave out the text of the letter. This letter, he said, was given to him in a personal way by Captain Berry and he alone was responsible for its publication.

Shearer said that the letter merely told the truth about the navy and he could not see how its publication could be fairly criticized.

Wants Admirals Summoned.

Shearer challenged the court to call several witnesses whom he named. His list included several Admirals. All these officers, he declared, would not only back up his assertions but would corroborate the statements of fact made in the letter that brought about the inquiry.

"I am not at liberty to tell what happened," he said when he left the hearing. "I was asked to appear and I did appear. I was questioned at great length and I answered all the questions put to me. I went there in the belief that the whole thing was a frame-up and that the department had decided to make examples of certain officers that it might forever muzzle others who wanted to speak out in the interests of the national defense. I was cordially treated and when my testimony was over I shook hands all round. I only hope my testimony will be submitted to Secretary Wilbur in its entirety instead of in summary form."

Captain Osterhaus a Witness.

At the afternoon session Captain Osterhaus was questioned about the letter to Captain Berry and admitted writing it. Captain Osterhaus, it was reported, went to the Commandant of the Naval War College after publication of the letter and admitted that he was the author. The facts were brought to the attention of the department and the department thereupon requested Captain Osterhaus to submit a statement in writing, which he did. This statement is in the possession of the court.

The findings may be discussed today and may be reduced to writing at once. It was not believed that there would be any more witnesses, one reason given being that to go into the other matters disclosed by Mr. Shearer would involve calling officers who are so widely scattered that the inquiry would be prolonged into months.

WILL EXHUME BODY OF M'CLINTOCK HEIR

have indicated they might contest the probating of the document, and a hearing has been set for Feb. 18.

The will left the entire estate to Shepherd, providing only that he should pay an annuity of $8,000 to Miss Pope, the youth's fiancee. The manner and time of that payment was left entirely to Shepherd, who was made executor of the will. Thus he is left, after the formalities of probate are complied with and after the cousins' claims are disposed of, in complete control of the estate.

McClintock and Miss Pope were childhood friends. The young man went to Dartmouth University for a few years, but dropped out so that he might come to Chicago and make plans for his wedding with Miss Pope.

The plans were arranged when he became ill with typhoid. After a period of treatment he seemed to have a good chance of recovery. He and Miss Pope, unwilling longer to postpone their wedding, decided on an immediate ceremony and the girl went to obtain a marriage license. The Shepherds declared they had no objections to the match.

After obtaining the license Miss Pope returned to her fiancé's bedside, only to find him in a coma. He died a few hours later.

William D. Shepherd said over the telephone from Albuquerque, N. M., tonight that the youth died a natural death and there was no reason for an investigation.

Ill fortune or short life has followed the possessions of the fortune left young McClintock. An English nobleman, whose name has been lost, sent it to America years ago through his widow who married William Hickling, a commoner, and emigrated with him. The Hicklings established themselves and an almost priceless collection of antiques in a mansion here. Mrs. Hickling died soon after coming here. Hickling married Sarah Gensler, who outlived him and took the fortune she inherited to Iowa, where, through some land deals, she became acquainted with William McClintock. They married and came to Chicago. Mrs. McClintock did not live long and McClintock married Emma Nelson of Le Mars, Iowa.

The second Mrs. McClintock gave to the fortune its first natural heir in generations in 1903, when William Nelson McClintock was born in the old home here. Five years later the boy's father was killed in an automobile accident.

About this time the Shepherds and the McClintocks became acquainted, the former later becoming members of the McClintock household. Mrs. McClintock lived only two years after her husband's death and when she died the Shepherds took care of the little boy, who soon became known as the "millionaire orphan." He died after being in possession of the fortune eight months.

Last June Mr. Straus returned from a four and a half months' trip to the Near East in the interests of peace. He went to Palestine, accompanied by Mrs. Straus and their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Straus, at the request of the Federated Council of the Churches of Christ of America, to help restore harmony among the religious sects, the invitation having been sent by Sir Herbert Samuel, British High Commissioner.

ONE CABINET CHANGE ALL COOLIDGE SEES

Hopes to Have New Secretary of Agriculture Act as Gore's Assistant First.

WORK SILENT ON RETIRING

President Will Ask Davis to Remain and Expects Others to Continue.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—President Coolidge, in making the one Cabinet change he now contemplates, the selection of a new Secretary of Agriculture, hopes to make his choice before March so the appointee may serve for a time as Assitant Secretary under the retiring department head, Howard M. Gore of West Virginia.

With this unique experiment in Cabinet making in mind, Mr. Coolidge has decided not to fill for the present the vacancy in the Agricultural Department resulting from the elevation two months ago of Mr. Gore from Assistant Secretary to Cabinet rank. Service for a time as Assitant Secretary, Mr. Coolidge believes, would be valuable training for the man chosen to succeed Mr. Gore, who will be compelled to retire March 4 to assume the West Virginia Governorship.

Consideration is being given by the President to a dozen or more suggestions for the Secretaryship, but he has made no decision. Meanwhile, indications have increased that no other Cabinet changes are in prospect.

The Executive, in response to inquiries based on recurring rumors as to the possible retirement of Secretary Work, has told friends on several occasions that he had received no intimations that the Interior Department chief desired to retire and that he greatly hoped his health would not make it necessary for him to give up his portfolio.

Secretary Davis, who informed the President immediately after the election that he would like to return to private life on March 4 to give his attention to duties in connection with the fraternal organization of which he is the head, will return next week from his South American trip, and it can be said on good authority, that Mr. Coolidge then will ask him to remain as head of the Labor Department.

As for the other members of Mr. Coolidge's official family, it is regarded by those close to the President as most likely that all will remain after March 4, although some may not be able to retain their posts for business reasons or because of health through the full four years.

The theory on which Mr. Coolidge is approaching the beginning of his elected term of office is that in the present Cabinet he has a smoothly working machine and no good engineer would tear apart a piece of machinery that is operating satisfactorily and without unusual friction.

ASSAIL NAVAL JINGOES HERE AND IN BRITAIN

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—"Naval jingoes" were attacked tonight by The Star. It describes how the Old World tried to reduce the burden of armaments and it looked to the United States to redress the balance. It continues:

"The United States Government in calling the Washington conference made some advance, but the campaign first to induce the United States Supreme Court to enjoin the scrapping of one of the agreed warships and secondly the declarations of Mr. Shearer that Great Britain had broken the resolutions of the Washington conference are very discouraging.

"Mr. Shearer has admitted that this campaign—openly anti-British—was financed by that tireless enemy of this country, W. Randolph Hearst, but the serious thing is that American naval officers have been secretly supplying alarmist information to prime the agitation.

"Thus the naval officer, Captain Hugo Osterhaus, who may be '100 per cent. American,' has written a letter in which he tells Shearer that British battleships have superior deck armor and generally takes the German view of 'British perfidy.'

"The Star notes that President Coolidge has ordered an inquiry into the disclosure of confidential information by naval officers and recognizes how difficult it is for the latter to resist the intrigues of armor-plate manufacturers. But it expresses the hope that "the United States people will in this matter remember the election slogan, 'Keep cool with Coolidge.'"

Writing on the same subject The Morning Post's naval correspondent says:

"The United States seems to have found in one Mr. William Shearer a second Sir Percy Scott. It is true that the latter never ceased to decry the value of the battleship whereas the former seems to think his country is in grave danger because he finds the United States battleship strength is not up to that of Great Britain or even of Japan. But the resemblance between the two personalities lies in their perfect genius for discovering mares' nests, for distorting facts and for misleading those without technical knowledge.

"In the case of Mr. William Shearer there at least appears to be the excuse that he knows nothing about the navy, otherwise he could not have accepted assertions and rumors which are not a little ridiculous to any one with a modicum of naval knowledge."

FIND GERMS IN PASTRY.

Bakery Allowed to Reopen After Health Department Inquiry.

Analysis made yesterday at Williard Parker Hospital showed that the cream filling used by a Brooklyn bakery contained germs which had resulted in the illness of forty-five persons who had eaten cream puffs purchased there. No fatalities were reported yesterday and the Health Department gave the baker permission to re-open his shop provided no more cream filling was used.

The case was brought to the attention of the health authorities on Friday by a physician who treated two of the victims and the investigation that followed disclosed that other customers of the bakery were confined to their homes through illness. The bakery was closed on Saturday. An investigation showed that the place was operated under sanitary conditions and that only the best material was used. It was thought that the germs were carried by rats or mice and an effort is being made to rid the place of these vermin.

ANTI-DRYS PICTURE A WET CHRISTMAS

Declare That Federal Activity Has Not Stopped the Inflow of Holiday Liquor.

MADE OWN INVESTIGATION

Association Against Prohibition Says Assertions of Law Enforcement Are Groundless.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—This Christmas will be as wet as ever, according to an announcement issued tonight at the national headquarters of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The association declared that it had conducted an investigation, which convinced its officials that increased activity by the Federal prohibition unit had not stopped the flow of liquor into the country. The investigation was conducted during last week, the announcement explained, as a result of statements of the Federal unit and dry organizations to the effect that it would be almost impossible to obtain liquor this Christmas because of the success attending Federal prohibition enforcement.

"Liquor seems to be plentiful and not unusually expensive," the announcement read. "A report from the Middle West gives the following quotations, subject to delivery:

"Scotch whisky, White Horse, King George VI., Green Stripe, Long John (sixths) and Spey Royal (fifths), ranging in price from $85 to $90. The same brands cut with alcohol under scientific formula, $60 to $65.

Pommery and Pol Roger at $115.

"Champagne: Genuine Pommery Sec, one pint, ten-ounce bottle, and genuine Pol Roger, pint, $115. Domestic or 'cider' champagne, $35.

"Real gin is quoted at $65, but fake gin can be obtained in fancy bottles at $20. Bacardi rum is quoted at $35.

"Reports from Bristol, Tenn., tell of increased activity on the part of moonshiners to supply the Christmas demand. Stills are working day and night, they say, and one moonshiner, operating six stills, is said to have predicted that he will be $2,000 richer by Jan. 1. The moonshine in this section will sell from the still at from $7 to $12 a gallon.

"Moonshiners in Virginia and Kentucky are likewise working overtime, and prices correspond to those demanded by the Tennessee moonshiners.

"Here at the capital of the nation, police, who have had to take the responsibility of prohibition enforcement, are closely watching the roads leading to the city. Reports from near-by Maryland tell of the passage of large rum trains headed for Washington. That their entry here has been successful is evidenced, by the small number of arrests of runners crossing the District of Columbia line.

Points to Deadly Liquor Here.

"Reports from New York City tell of large quantities of poisonous liquors on sale. As a result twenty-six persons have been killed and twenty more blinded. Large quantities of genuine liquors and liquors cut with alcohol under scientific formula are also reported to be on sale in New York City. Some of the poisonous stuff, which has reached the city proper, has got into Batavia, N. Y., where four deaths have been reported.

"Reports from nearly every large city indicate that liquor will be plentiful this Christmas, but in some places it is rather high, owing to great demand. Prohibitionists deliberately lied when they told of a shortage of wet goods this Christmas.

2 MORE INDICTMENTS IN 2 JERSEY CITIES

authorities had been obliged to come into the State. A census in the "Horse Shoe" section, he said, showed that all the old saloons were still doing business.

Mayor Hague replied that the Director of Public Safety had closed thirty saloons but that the courts had enjoined further action. Mr. Wilson retorted that "there was a right way and a wrong way and the Director of Public Safety did not go at it in the right way." Russian methods could not be used in New Jersey, he maintained, for legal evidence was necessary.

Michael I. Fagan, Director of Streets and Public Safety, interjected and declared that the case had gone far enough, as he was "not going to listen to any more abuse." The city officials, he said, stood for law and order and opposed spying. They also opposed having policemen risk their sight by drinking poisonous liquor. Jersey City, he asserted, was one of the most law-abiding places in the country. He protested against "being asked to stop watching gunmen and thieves in order to have policemen look through keyholes to see if a man was taking a drink."

"If the United States Government has fallen down on the job how do you expect the Jersey City officials to close the saloons?" he asked.

Mr. Wilson replied that detectives were "spies to bring evildoers to justice."

Then Commissioner A. Harry Moore, Director of Revenue and Finance, took a hand in the argument. He denounced Mr. Wilson for publishing an article in a magazine asserting that the bootleggers were interested in nominating him as Governor.

Commissioner William Quinn suggested to the reformers that "the whole army and navy of the United States could not enforce prohibition." While the saloons may have been bad, he said, the "blind tigers were worse." Dr. Parker attempted to say that the law was being enforced by the Federal authorities in Philadelphia, and Commissioner Quinn interrupted to assert that as the saloons in Philadelphia were being closed "dives were being opened."

David J. Allen, former assistant purchasing agent for the Atlanta Penitentiary, and John G. Coyle, former Hudson County Assemblyman, were held for extradition to Schenectady yesterday by Acting Judge McGovern in the Second Criminal Court, Jersey City. They were indicted on a larceny charge as the result of the statement of Rocco Peretta, who said he paid them $6,300 for their assistance in getting 630 cases of liquor out of a New York warehouse. They were liberated on $10,000 bail each and the Schenectady authorities have twenty-six days in which to complete extradition proceedings.

VAN RIPER BAN CONTINUED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—A further delay in the adjustment of the troubles between the Department of Justice and Walter C. Winne, United States Attorney for New Jersey, over the New Jersey liquor disclosures developed today at a long conference in which the two sides to the controversy were represented.

With Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition enforcement, at his side, Attorney General Stone listened for nearly two hours to Mr. Winne and his assistant, Walter Van Riper, both of whom emphatically denied the charges made by the Anti-Saloon League that they had been lax in the administration of the Volstead act in New Jersey.

Mrs. Willebrandt summarized the charges against Mr. Winne and Mr. Van Riper and took the position, it was said, that she was not satisfied with the conduct of Federal liquor cases in New Jersey. Mr. Winne defended his administration and Mr. Van Riper discussed the circumstances that prompted Mrs. Willebrandt to direct Mr. Winne not to assign Mr. Van Riper to prohibition cases.

After the conference, in which Senator Walter E. Edge took part, the Attorney General announced that the New Jersey case would be given further consideration next week, when Mr. Winne would return to Washington with additional data bearing on matters that were under consideration today. In the meantime, Mr. Stone said, his investigation of Mr. Winne's office would continue, and that the order barring Mr. Van Riper from prohibition cases would stand.

The Attorney General declined again today to throw any light upon the specific charges that have involved Mr. Winne and Mr. Van Riper in their difficulties with the department. The two New Jersey officials, as well as Senator Edge, were equally reticent. It was learned, however, that the Weehawken rum-running charges are only a minor issue in the controversy, and that Mrs. Willebrandt made it clear that she had long been dissatisfied with prohibition enforcement in New Jersey.

It is expected that Attorney General Stone will bring the New Jersey cases to a head at the close of his conference with Mr. Winne next week. Agents of the Anti-Saloon League in New Jersey are determined to have Mr. Winne and Mr. Van Riper removed. Friends of Senator Edge assert that his political enemies are handed with the Anti-Saloon League in an endeavor to humiliate him by visiting punishment upon two men who were active supporters of the Senator in his campaign for renomination and re-election.

HAT TRAPS MAN AS ROBBER.

Gray Fedora Lost in Flight Leads to Suspect's Arrest.

Two pearl-gray hats dropped by the robbers who held up Samuel Sobel and a customer in his cigar store at 748 St. Nicholas Avenue Sunday led to the arrest last night of Michael Higgins, 2,854 Eighth Avenue. He was lodged in the West 152d Street station on a charge of assault and robbery and, according to the detectives, admitted his implication not only in the cigar store hold-up but in four other robberies in the neighborhood. With the other hat as the clue, the detectives continued their search for his companion.

When the two men fled from Sobel's store, they were seen by Policeman Murphy. He chased them through Colonial Park and fired four shots at them. While dodging the bullets their hats blew off.

Among the stores which Higgins was said to have confessed to robbing were the drug stores of Bernard Barst, 1,641 Amsterdam Avenue; Samuel Freeman, 2,017 Amsterdam Avenue, and Bernard Weller, 958 St. Nicholas Avenue. The druggists will be on hand to identify Higgins when he is arraigned in the Washington Heights Court this morning.

TO ARREST ANDERSON AS HE LEAVES PRISON

May Quash Indictments.

This was taken to mean that Anderson would not be called for trial until the full period of his maximum sentence on the forgery conviction had expired, and, although no official announcement was made in the matter, it was understood that the indictments eventually may be quashed, much of the evidence in connection with them having been brought out at the forgery trial.

Mr. Pecora, in discussing Anderson's expected arraignment today, explained that the two extortion indictments alleged that in 1920 and 1921 Anderson extorted $3,875 from O. Bertsall Phillips, former financial agent of the league, and that the grand larceny indictments charged that he obtained $4,000 from the Anti-Saloon League of the State in 1918 through false representation.

"The alleged misrepresentations," he added, "consisted in Anderson's assertions to the Board of Directors of the League that he had mortgaged his home to raise money and had spent this sum in 'confidential publicity' work for the League in 1913 and 1914. Through this alleged misrepresentation Anderson succeeded in getting the Board of Directors to acknowledge an indebtedness to him of $24,000, which he subsequently proceeded to collect at various times. It was alleged by the people and later proved at his trial that Anderson did not mortgage his home and did not spend moneys belonging to him to obtain 'confidential publicity' for the League in 1913 and 1914."

Anderson's release from Sing Sing by the Parole Board was contingent on his future good behavior, a stipulation having been made that he will cease his attacks on the courts and prosecuting officers in connection with his conviction and sentence for a crime of which he insisted in his petition for release he was innocent. Up to the filing of this petition Anderson at intervals issued statements to the public from his cell picturing himself as a martyr to the cause of prohibition.

Anderson refused to make any comment in the prison last evening on his arraignment today. It was reported that his wife, whose visits to the prison ceased several months ago, was ill at her home.

YOUTH QUESTIONED IN HERRY MURDER

PISTOL SOUGHT IN STREAMS

Officials Refuse to Comment on the Prospects of an Arrest Soon.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 23.—The investigation of the mysterious murder of Paul Herry and the wounding of Mrs. Florence Stillwell as they were seated in an automobile in an isolated section just outside Asbury Park on Thursday afternoon centred about Leslie Eichenburg today. Eichenburg is the young man who took Mrs. Stillwell to a private sanitarium in his automobile, and who, according to the information given to detectives, conversed freely with the woman during the ride.

Eichenburg was grilled for three hours in the afternoon in the office of Prosecutor Sexton at Long Branch by Detective Charles O. Davenport and Detective Jack Smith of the prosecutor's staff relative to a remark said to have been made by Mrs. Stillwell to the effect that she saw a Chevrolet touring car following their car through the woods not far from the spot where the attack occurred.

The young man was asked if the woman had said to him:

"Don't tell any one about this. This is the first time I went out with him."

In an interview the young man is said to have used this language, and the detectives were anxious to ascertain if he knew more about the case than he had told them when questioned previously.

At the close of the examination young Eichenburg was taken to the private hospital where Mrs. Stillwell is recovering. The detectives afterward said they could make no statement. They refused to deny or confirm a report this afternoon that an arrest is soon to be made in the case. They referred all inquiries to the prosecutor.

Several streams in the neighborhood of the crime were dragged yesterday unsuccessfully in the hope of finding the weapon with which Herry and Mrs. Stillwell were shot.

LONGWORTH IS CONFIDENT.

Says He Is Assured of Being Speaker of Next Congress.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 23.—Representative Nicholas Longworth, who is here to spend the holidays at home, said today he had been assured by his friends in Congress that he would be elected Speaker of the next House.

"They informed me that considerably more than the required number of Representatives have indicated that they would vote for me," he said. "While the new Congress will not convene until next December, there will very likely be a caucus for organization purposes by the Republican members before March 4, as practically all of them, including some fifty new Representatives, will be in Washington to attend the inauguration of President Coolidge."

CITY'S CELEBRATION OF YULETIDE BEGINS

CAROLS IN TIMES SQUARE

New York's public Christmas activities got well under way yesterday and this morning will be at full tide, when organizations and individuals will set about in large numbers to care for the poor, the unfortunate, the neglected and the lonely.

The financial district did the first of its Christmas celebrating when Wall Street turned out in the afternoon to attend the second annual Christmas tree and carol singing festival. Broad Street, directly opposite the New York Stock Exchange, was crowded, and clerks, runners, stenographers, bankers and brokers joined in singing carols.

The celebration was officially opened with the playing of the chimes in Trinity Church tower, at the head of Wall Street. Meantime, the United States Navy Yard band from Brooklyn marched up from the Custom House, on Broadway, through Wall Street and into Broad, to a place in front of the big tree.

Following a brief band concert, the Christmas tree was officially lighted and there followed the Community carol singing.

A supplemental program has been arranged for noon today. This will take place on the steps of the Sub-Treasury Building, and will consist of a concert by the New York Police Band and Glee Club.

Times Square had a celebration of its own when the Christmas tree erected by the New York Electrical League at Forty-third Street was dedicated. Six radio loud-speakers have been placed among the branches of the tree, and for the next two weeks the theatre crowds may hear Christmas carols and New Year songs by a quartette singing in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor.

Tree at Washington Square.

A living evergreen set up in Washington Square, was officially accepted yesterday on behalf of the city by Park Commissioner Gallatin. The specimen spruce, 35 feet tall, stands temporarily beneath the Washington Arch. Next Monday the tree will be planted in the square, to grow there permanently and to be used year by year.

Tonight from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock the tree will be illuminated with 1,500 amber, green and red incadescent lights. The words of carols will be thrown directly on the arch, so that all present may read and sing.

Five thousand employes of the Boomer-Du Pont chain of hotels and restaurants learned that they would receive a Christmas present in the form of $5,000,000 group insurance. The system operates the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, the New Willard in Washington, the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia and other large hotels.

Besides announcements of gifts there were many Christmas parties yesterday.

School Children Celebrate.

Two thousand school children attended a good health Christmas party in Mulberry Bend Park, Bayard and Mulberry Streets. A health caravan, in buses provided by the Fifth Avenue Coach Company, each covered with Christmas decorations and health posters, toured the neighborhood before the Christmas party.

Four hundred children living between Sixtieth and Eightieth Streets and Avenue A and Madison Avenue were guests of the Presbyterian Hospital at Seventieth Street and Madison Avenue yesterday afternoon, where a real, live Santa Claus and a 50-foot tree laden with gifts awaited them.

Two hundred Italian children of the kindergarten and day nursery groups at God's Providence House and their brothers and sisters entertained their mothers at a Christmas party yesterday at the Settlement House, which is maintained by the Episcopal City Mission Society at 330 Broome Street.

Facing a $10,000 deficit in the Christmas dinner fund, the Volunteers of America, headed by General and Mrs. Ballington Booth and a host of stage celebrities, invaded Fifth Avenue yesterday and collected a considerable sum. At Madison Square Garden today the Volunteers will distribute 25,000 Christmas dinners.

In almost every part of the city today there will be festivities.

At 3 o'clock the Visiting Committee of the Junior Auxiliary, will distribute gifts to the children in the Post-Graduate Hospital, at Twentieth Street and Second Avenue, from four Christmas trees.

Derelicts who gather nightly at the old Chinese Theatre, 5 and 7 Doyers Street, will be greeted by the novelty of a bedtime story, on Christmas Eve from Thomas J. Noonan, known as the "Bishop of Chinatown," and superintendent of the Rescue Society. The "Bishop" will give his guests a sunrise breakfast on Christmas morning.

A Party at Ellis Island.

Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A. will go to Ellis Island this evening to assist with the Christmas party for children who are forced to spend Christmas there.

The Christmas carol service of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company will be held at 11 o'clock this morning in the rotunda of the company's building at Twenty-third Street and Madison Avenue. Bishop William T. Manning will talk.

Seventy-five children of officers and men at Fort Hamilton will receive gifts from Santa Claus at a Christmas tree celebration on the reservation at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Two thousand Christmas baskets will be distributed today by the New York Chapter of the Knights of Columbus from five different stations, so that those receiving them need not travel long distances. Each basket will contain a dinner for five.

Starting at 5 o'clock this morning a fleet of automobiles will leave the Salvation Army's headquarters at 122 West Fourteenth Street loaded with 25,000 dinner bags and 5,000 packages of toys, which will be delivered direct to the homes of the poor.

Holiday festivities for seamen in New York begin today at the Seamen's Church Institute. A Christmas tree celebration, a vaudeville and movie show on Christmas Eve, a free turkey dinner Christmas Day for the 1,000 seamen at the institute and the distribution of comfort bags to every sick seaman in the marine hospitals of New York will be a part of the program.

After the close of business today the members of the New York Curb Market Association will join in giving 1,000 poor children of lower Manhattan a Christmas entertainment. At 3 o'clock the Hohner Harmonica Orchestra, obtained through the courtesy of William J. Hausaler, will play popular music, followed by a vaudeville show, including the Jersey City Police Quartet, Kathryn and Elvira Rayman and the Be Bee Sisters in song and dance acts. The children will receive toys and candy. Two Christmas trees, each 60 feet in height, will be decorated, one on the lawn in front of the Trinity Place entrance and the other on the trading floor.

Gives Dinner to Little Cripples.

William J. Gallagher, owner of the Monte Carlo Restaurant, at Broadway and Forty-first Street, will give a Christmas dinner to 350 crippled children on Christmas Day at 2 P. M. Besides a show and music there will be little presents and favors. Tickets have been distributed in the Twenty-sixth and Twenty-eighth Precincts.

The Girls' Service Club has issued an invitation to all girls who are alone in the city to come to the clubhouse, 130 East Nineteenth Street at 5 o'clock Christmas Day for a party, which will last until 10.

When leaders of the Thomas B. Wanamaker Post of the American Legion set out to learn what the veterans desired most this year the reply showed unmistakably that the puzzle craze had reached the bedsides of even the most distressing cases. The Wanamaker Post will send a puzzle book and cigarettes to all the wounded veterans in local hospitals as follows: The U. S. Veterans Bureau Hospital, No. 81, Kingsbridge Road and Sedgwick Avenue, 350 veterans; Seton Hospital, Spuyten Duyvil, 95; Manhattan State Hospital, Wards Island, 275; Neurological Hospital, Welfare Island, 30, and the U. S. Marine Hospital, Stapleton, S. I., 25. The gift packages have been made up by employes of the John Wanamaker store and their friends. The puzzle books were donated by Simon & Schuster, publishers.

The Children's Aid Society is instructing Santa Claus, when he appears at its various branches, to get from the children a promise that during the coming year they will stop and look carefully for automobiles when they are about to cross the street.

On Monday, when Santa called for Louis Braccio at the Sullivan Street School Christmas party, Louis failed to answer. It was found that he had been run over on his way to school and was in the hospital. Santa instantly turned to the rest of the children and asked them to promise to use extra care.

GIFT OF $200,000 TO HELP CRIPPLES

Jeremiah Milbank, Who Gave $50,000 Endowment of Institute, Makes Another Donation.

A gift of $200,000 from Jeremiah Milbank to the Institute for Crippled Men, 245 East Twenty-third Street, was announced by Walter Ewing Hope, President of the Institute, at a Christmas party held yesterday. The income from the sum is to be used in the work of the organization.

The institute, according to Mr. Hope, had its beginning through the vision and generosity of Mr. Milbank. It was founded in 1917 under the auspices of the American Red Cross in anticipation of the effects of the war in crippling soldiers and sailors.

It was said at yesterday's meeting that the number of persons permanently disabled each year in industrial and public accidents is greater than the number of men seriously disabled in the American Army during the recent war and that the enforced idleness of this great army is costing the nation millions of dollars yearly. The institute has found 4,430 jobs for disabled men and saved $66,450 in employment fees; more than $1,000,000 a year is earned by 840 men trained in its classes. The report of the organization also states that 614 homebound cripples have been helped; 1,885 artificial limbs and appliances have been turned out at a saving of $48,500 to the crippled.

At the Christmas party yesterday the Santa Claus was an armless man, Lou Young. By the dexterity he showed in handing out presents one could well believe that he was capable of cracking a whip over the backs of a team of reindeers. Mr. Hope and Dr. John C. Faries, director of the institute, were the only speakers.

When the institute was organized under the War Council of the Red Cross Mr. Milbank donated toward its endowment $50,000 and the use of the building. He has maintained the People's Palace, a club and recreation for the poor of Jersey City, and has been a friend to many charities. Jeremiah Milbank, a grandfather of the present Jeremiah, was known as a generous giver to charities and individuals. His father founded the People's Palace and his aunt, Miss Elizabeth Milbank Anderson, gave $65,000 to the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor in 1917, and has made other donations to other organizations.

The Board of Trustees is made up of Walter E. Hope, Harry C. Taylor, Frederick C. Munroe, Jeremiah Milbank, Miss Florence S. Sullivan, Mrs. Oliver W. Bird, Mrs. Guy Fairfax Cary, E. Trubee Davison, Mrs. J. Magee Ellsworth, John H. Finley, Mrs. Artemus L. Gates, James Gould, E. Roland Harriman, Russell A. Hibbs, M. D., Mrs. Seth Low Jr., Douglas C. McMurtrie, Miss Gertrude B. Pardee, Mrs. Mortimer L. Schiff, Frank P. Shepard and Louis Morris Starr.

TORRID BUENOS AIRES HAS CHRISTMAS TREE

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—The municipality of Buenos Aires tonight introduced a novelty in Christmas celebrations when it opened a big Christmas fair in the Plaza Congreso.

The four sides of the plaza were bordered with gayly decorated temporary booths of merchants who did a thriving business with toys and other holiday articles.

A lofty, brilliantly lighted Christmas tree was a much-admired feature of the decoration scheme. The wintry appearance of the tree on the prevailing hot Summer night seemed to appeal greatly to the fancy of the perspiring crowds which gathered at the plaza.

"Reveries of Christmas Eve" will be the topic this evening of the Rev. Dr. S. Edward Young in the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Nostrand Avenue and Dean Street, Brooklyn.

A special Christmas preparatory service will be held this evening in the Throop Avenue Presbyterian Church, at Macon Street, of which the Rev. Dr. William Carter is the pastor. Christmas carols will be sung.

Tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock and again at 10:30 the full choir of 122 men, women, boys and girls of St. George's Episcopal Church, Stuyvesant Square and East Sixteenth Street, will march with banners around the church. Anthems will be sung.

At the Episcopal Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and Twentieth Street, there will be a celebration of the Holy Communion tomorrow at 8 and a festival service at 11. At the latter the Rev. Dr. Henry Motter, the venerable rector, will preach.

One of the few Presbyterian congregations which will have Christmas Day worship will be the Rutgers, now worshipping in West End Collegiate Reformed Church, Seventy-seventh Street and West End Avenue. This will be at 11 o'clock, and the Rev. Dr. Daniel Russell, the pastor of the Presbyterian flock, will preach. The quartet will render carols and anthems.

The Christmas service at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 128 West Sixty-ninth Street, will be at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The music at the Christmas service at 11 o'clock tomorrow in the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, of which the Rev. Dr. H. Percy Silver is the rector, will consist of carols and anthems by the choir.

A Christmas Eve mass will be sung at the Episcopal Church of the Resurrection, 63 East Seventy-fifth Street, of which the Rev. E. Russell Bourne is the rector. There will also be a service tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

$60,000 IN WOOLENS STOLEN IN WAREHOUSE

More than $60,000 worth of worsteds and woolens have been stolen from the warehouse at 143 West Fifteenth Street, it was learned yesterday. The robbers apparently forced their way in early last Friday night, soon after the warehouse had been closed, and took the goods away in four or five trucks.

J. M. Lowden, head of the Warehouse and Trucking Company, which has been in existence for more than forty years, said last night that goods belonging to about thirty woolen mills had been stolen. Among the heaviest losers are the William Whitman Company, the Pontoosuc Mills, Alfred C. Gaunt, the Waskanupp Mills, the Perseverance Woolen Mills, the Lippitt Woolens Mills, the Clover Worsted Company, W. E. Tillotson, the Berkshire Woolen Company, E. E. Hilliard, the International Worsted Company and the Brightwood Woolen Company.

REFUSES $25,000 GIFT VOTED BY DIRECTORS

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 23.—Frank A. Furst, President of the Board of the Arundel Corporation, turned down a gift of $25,000 voted to him yesterday by the other directors of the corporation.

"How does it feel to turn down that much money?" he was asked.

"All I can say is that there's no feeling at all on my part," he replied. "I've got plenty of money, and I have not any more hurdles to go over. I just didn't need it. I'd rather see my company that I've helped to build up into a big corporation have the money than have it myself.

"I don't mean to say that I don't appreciate the offer. I was deeply touched by it; but I shall not accept it. At my age money does not mean so much."

Negro Woman Who Died at 90 Worked Long for Pastor's Family.

The will of a former slave who died Sept. 20 last at the age of 90 years was filed for probate yesterday. She was Mrs. Julia Washington, whose history is set forth in an affidavit by the Rev. Father Charles R. Danforth of 105 East 105th Street accompanying the will. He said that she was a slave in the South until the close of the Civil War, when she came North and was employed in his family. She has no relatives that he knows of, the clergyman said.

Mrs. Washington left more than $1,000 to Lee Clayton, his wife, Emma; his son, George, and the latter's wife, of 1,737 Van Buren Avenue, the Bronx. These negroes were close friends of the former slave. Mrs. John Colton Wells, wife of a physician at 126 East Sixty-seventh Street and sister of the Rev. Father Danforth, said that she believed Mrs. Washington was born in Alabama in 1835 and that she married George Washington, a slave on the same plantation. She was employed after the war by Charles R. Dainforth, father of the clergyman, as nurse for him and Mrs. Wells, and served the family more than a quarter of a century. She was pensioned about twenty years ago, and spent the last years of her life at 454 West Fifty-fourth Street, where she was active in church work among the members of her race.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—Miss Margaret Thayer, who went to Africa on a hunting expedition, is suffering from typhoid fever in Cairo, according to dispatches from abroad. She sailed from New York Nov. 12 on the Mauretania.

Miss Thayer and her party went from Paris to Rome, where she received a third anti-typhoid inoculation. The party sailed from Brindisi Nov. 22, and Miss Thayer was ill during the voyage to Alexandria. She became worse and was taken to the Cairo Hospital. As soon as her condition warrants, she will be moved to Upper Egypt.

Miss Thayer is well known as a crack shot. In 1923 she brought down the only moose killed by a woman that season in upper Ontario, Canada. She also is a golfer, swimmer, tennis player and amateur actress. For a time she conducted a perfume shop in Rittenhouse Square.

CHILDREN ENLISTED TO HELP ST. JOHN'S

ARCH DEDICATED TO THEM

Special Drive Being Made During Holidays—Schools Invited to Attend Vespers.

Bishop William T. Manning made known plans yesterday for the cooperation of the young people and school children of the city in the campaign for the completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. He said children would have one of the most important tasks in the building of the great nave of the cathedral, work on which will be started in the Spring.

"The first arch that is to be built, without which the rest of the nave cannot be built," he said, "is to be the Children's Arch. It is to be built of beautifully carved stones, set one upon the other, towering straight up high above the heads of the people."

Bishop Manning said the Children's Arch would cost $207,000 and that it was hoped it would be built entirely from the contributions of children. The arch will be inscribed as the gift of the children.

A special drive for the children's arch is being made during the Christmas holidays, when many young people are home from school. There will be a young people's vesper service at the Cathedral on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 4, under the sponsorship of Mrs. John Henry Hammond, President of the Parents' League of New York City; Mrs. W. H. Merrill, Principal of the Oaksmere School at Mamaroneck, and Frank S. Hackett, Principal of the Riverdale Country School at Riverdale.

The young people will assemble with their parents, teachers and friends in the synod house and will be shown through the Cathedral, where Bishop Manning and Canon H. Adye Prichard, acting dean, will address them. The program will include Christmas music and hymns. Small banks bearing pictures of the proposed children's arch will be distributed. These are already being distributed to all the Sunday schools of the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of New York. An attempt will be made to obtain contributions from children of all denominations throughout the city.

Invitations to attend the vesper services have been sent to all the Sunday schools of the diocese, all the private schools in New York, and the following out-of-town schools: Oaksmere School, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Riverdale School, Riverdale, N. Y.; St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H.; Lake Placid School, Lake Placid, N. Y.; Rumsey Hall, Cornwall, Conn.; Deerfield Academy, Deerfield, Mass.; Westminster School, Simsbury, Conn.; Fawling School, Kent, Conn.; Groton School, Groton, Mass.; Hillside School, Norwalk, Conn.; St. Timothy's School, Catonsville, Md., and Milton Academy, Milton, Mass.

WOMAN GIVES $20,000 TO THE SMITHSONIAN

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 23.—The Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, may be appealed to in order to ascertain the legal last will of Miss Anna S. Hall, who died here a few days ago. She was the daughter of Charles F. Hall, the arctic explorer who was never heard from after he went on his third expedition in 1870. Her estate, estimated at about $20,000, is what remains of the $25,000 awarded to her mother and other members of the family by the Government.

What purported to be copies of her will, with several codicils, were filed in Probate Court today by the Central Trust Company. The original will is with the Smithsonian Institution, it is stated in Miss Hall's handwriting on one of the copies. Excepting for two money gifts and the disposition of her personal belongings, her entire estate is given to the Smithsonian Institution.

Attorney Joseph L. Meyer, representing her brother, Charles F. Hall, said he probably will contest the will.

Four Rob Inmates of Orange Billiard Parlor of $6,000.

ORANGE, N. J., Dec. 24.—Four New York gunmen held up thirty-five patrons of "Whitey" Long's billiard parlor here early today and got away with cash and jewelry valued at between $5,000 and $6,000. One of the victims who did not step lively when the bandits ordered him to get to the wall, was struck over the head with the butt of a pistol and had to be attended by an ambulance surgeon of the Orange Memorial Hospital. This man was Fred Meyers of 355 Fifteenth Street, Newark. Another victim tired of holding his hands aloft while the search of pockets was going on. A bullet shot through his hat caused him to put his hands up again.

The hold-up men came in a taxicab owned by a well-known New York company and bearing a New York license plate. Lieut. Thomas Riley of the Orange police spread the alarm to nearby towns and to New York, giving a description of the cab and the four men.

The committee had asked the board to act under a provision of the Transportation act allowing it to do so when wage or salary rises tend to increase rates.

A new Calvin Coolidge is introduced by Charles Willis Thompson, who finds the President a master of rare literary style—the Attic style. This student of expression endeavors to show that Mr. Coolidge is the most literary man who has occupied the White House since 1865. "If Coolidge does not use the ordinary weapons of the literary man, it is not because he cannot. For epigram he has as little use, in general, as he has for quotation."

Whether it was a love pact and the bullets self-inflicted or whether hired assassins did the work has never been known, but the causes which may have contributed to either hypothesis are discussed.

TESTIMONIAL SENT TO NEWTON D. BAKER

"Christmas Gift" Volume Contains Letters and Editorials Controverting Criticism.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, will receive as a Christmas gift tomorrow a morocco-bound volume containing a country-wide compilation of letters and editorials controverting the allegedly inaccurate biographical sketch of him published by the Encyclopedia Britannica in its postbellum volumes, and revised in later edition.

Prominent merchants, clergymen, financiers, statesmen and soldiers were included among the sponsors of the testimonial who sent this telegram to Mr. Baker from New York last night:

"With hopes for a happy Christmas we are forwarding to you a bound collection of the comments which came from throughout the country upon the appearance of an unfortunately inaccurate biographical sketch of yourself in the generally authoritative Encyclopedia Britannica. Despite your indifference to the content of the article, and despite the fact that it has already been hitered and partially corrected, we ask that you examine these distinguished service citations from your fellow countrymen. Most of the authors of them do not share your political affiliations, but they share citizenship with you in a Republic that can ill afford to ignore such distinguished capacity as you have brought to its affairs. So we send you this volume, which does more than carry to you our affectionate admiration. It is a token of the esteem of that increasing company of people everywhere who comprehend the fine integrity, the eloquent zeal, the enlightened liberalism, and withal the simple modesty that you have put into the service of your country and your time."

The signers of the telegram were Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President, the Cleveland Trust Company; General Tasker H. Bliss, Washington, D. C.; Joseph S. Cullinan, President, the American Republic Corporation, Houston, Texas; Edward A. Filene, President, William Filene's Sons Company, Boston; Raymond B. Fosdick, New York attorney; James G. Harbord, President, the Radio Corporation of America; Ralph Hayes, director, the New York Community Trust; Stanley King, Vice President, the International Shoe Company, Boston; Walter Lippmann, chief editorial writer, The New York World; Benjamin L. Namm, President, A. I. Namm & Son, Brooklyn; Colonel Arthur O'Brien, Washington attorney; George Foster Peabody of Saratoga Springs; Julius Rosenwald, President, Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago; Harold Ross, former editor of The Stars and Stripes, A. E. F. newspaper, and of The American Legion Weekly; John D. Ryan, Chairman, the Anaconda Copper Mining Company; Frank A. Scott, President, the Warner & Swasey Company, Cleveland; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, New York, and Owen D. Young, Chairman, the General Electric Company.

The Britannica's originally published article stated that Baker's "career generally as Secretary was widely condemned throughout the United States as lacking in energy, foresight and ability." The sketch was unsigned and the identity of its writer never has been disclosed. The more recent version, printed after the appearance of the letters and press comment now constituting the presentation volume, while repeating that Baker's pacific leanings and his administration of the War Department were criticized, adds that "He was largely responsible for the centralization of industrial affairs; he insisted upon the selective draft, and he prevented any political interference with the conduct of the war."

Following the first publication of the biographical material, General Peyton C. March, war-time Chief of Staff, carried a protest to the editor in chief of the Britannica in London, and in America a group of the Britannica's editorial contributors, including President E. M. Hopkins of Dartmouth, Dr. Irving Fisher of Yale and Dean Guy Stanton Ford of the University of Minnesota assailed the article.

Others Who Wrote Testimonials.

Others whose testimonials were bound into the volume sent to Mr. Baker included General John J. Pershing, General Hugh Scott, General Frank Hines, Edward R. Stettinius, Dr. Harry A. Garfield, former Justice John H. Clarke, Daniel Willard, Frederick P. Keppel, Colonel Leonard P. Ayres, John R. Mott, Livingston Farrand, Dwight W. Morrow, Richard T. Ely, Harry Pratt Judson, Senator James W. Wadsworth, Sir Arthur Salter, Dr. John R. Commons, Dean Roscoe Pound, Gertrude B. Lane, President W. H. B. Faunce, Dr. John M. Glenn, Frederick Palmer, Admiral Sims, Bishop Charles H. Brent and the late Samuel Gompers.

"Maligned and misrepresented," General Pershing's statement says, "Mr. Baker held consistently to a policy which had for its sole purpose the prompt and effective overthrow of the Central Powers. His support of the Commander in Chief of our forces in France was complete, whole-hearted and unswerving. As to this, my testimony must be accepted as determining."

Samuel Gompers, lately deceased President of the American Federation of Labor, writing from New Orleans in October, 1922, shortly after a prolonged correspondence with Mr. Baker over the open-shop issue, joined vigorously in the protest against the Encyclopedia's article. "Before, during and after the close of the war," he said, "I know of no man among all of our people who could more efficiently, faithfully and unremittingly conduct the affairs of our War Department, and though we are 'on the outs' upon another issue, I feel it only a fair modicum of justice to express my contempt and indignation that so unjustifiable an attack should have been made."

MONTPELIER, Vt., Dec. 23.—The old Concord-type stage coach, which, according to tales still told, has figured in exciting hold-ups, has been sold to Henry Ford and will be shipped to Dearborn, Mich., in the near future. The coach was placed in service between Middlesex and Waitsfield, Vt., seventy-five years ago. Announcement of the sale was made today by Charles A. Smith of Montpelier, who for seven years has owned the relic.

The conveyance carried sixteen passengers, inside and on top. The body is hung on leather braces. Until about ten years ago the old coach was used for regular trips up the Mad River Valley. It was constructed in Concord, N. H.

TRANSFER GOLD IN SAFETY.

The $2,700,000 in gold which arrived at Hoboken on Monday night was removed safely by ten armed guards in armored vans from the Pan-American liner Southern Cross yesterday to the several New York banks to which it was consigned by the Banco de la Nacion of Buenos Aires.

Clifford Shepherd Jr., one of the ship's junior officers, who guarded the gold on the voyage, shot himself and Quartermaster Gleson Pierce fired before the vessel docked. Intense nervousness, due to the responsibility of watching the money, caused the discharge of the weapon. Both men will recover.

COOLIDGE FOR REWARD TO THE WORLD FLIERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—When Congress reassembles President Coolidge will recommend the passage of a bill providing a suitable reward for the army officers who recently encircled the globe in airplanes.

Whether this reward should take the form of advancement in rank or the payment of a gratuity or bonus or both is a question that the President has not yet decided. Accordingly, he has asked the Secretary of War to request the General Board of the army to consider the question and make a report at the earliest possible date.

Army officers are agreed that their fellows who flew around the world are entitled to recognition for what is regarded as the biggest achievement of the year, and much satisfaction was expressed today when it became known among them that the President had decided to take appropriate action.

A multiplicity of bills have been offered in Congress authorizing recognition of the army world fliers, but they have not been seriously considered even in committee thus far.

A spokesman for the Administration said today that the President is exceedingly regretful that Congress had not rewarded the world fliers so that it might have been bestowed as a Christmas present. As the movement in Congress in behalf of the world fliers is unorganized the President felt that if anything was to be accomplished for the army aviators the objective in mind would stand a better chance if placed before Congress in concrete form with his endorsement.

The bill to be prepared by the Army General Board, which is certain to recommend promotion for the five army aviators and possibly a lump sum appropriation for each of them, will be forwarded to the Military Committees some time in January.

ASKS JUDGE'S RETIREMENT.

Lawyer Says Henry V. Borst Has Passed Age Limit.

A petition has been filed with Attorney General Carl Sherman asking the retirement of Justice Henry V. Borst of the Supreme Court on the ground that he has passed the age limit. Under the provisions of the Constitution "no person shall hold the office of Judge or Justice of any court longer than until and including the last day of December next after he shall be 70 years of age."

The petition was filed by the Sylvia Lake Corporation through its President, Herbert G. McLear, who is a lawyer with an office at 141 Broadway. The corporation owns chalk mines in St. Lawrence County and has been involved in a law suit which was decided against it by the Appellate Division.

Mr. McLear refused yesterday to comment on the petition except to admit that it had been filed with Attorney General Sherman. He would not say what evidence he had to show that Justice Borst, who is from Amsterdam, N. Y., declared he had not passed the age limit, was over 70.

Attorney General Sherman said that the petition had been filed, but he added that he had not yet had time to investigate it.

Tenor Is Heard in Songs of the More Classic and Intimate Sort.

Theodore Karle, possessor of a high tenor voice of manly quality and for some years a popular soloist at musical festivals the country over, appeared last night, as he has for two seasons now, in a song recital of the more classic and intimate sort. His friends, despite the approaching holiday, filled a large part of Aeolian Hall to hear him. Frank LaForge accompanied fine old Italian airs of Mozart and Paradies and especially two of Purcell, the "Dog Star" air and that from "Dido and Aeneas."

The singer has refined his style, while retaining his usually good tone, which at fortissimo tends to a bleat; here, however, the lack of resonance may have been temporary only, militating against a full richness of voice. There was appreciation of German lyrics of Brahms and Strauss, as well as of the "Little Star" of Moussorgsky and two folksongs from Little Russia adapted by Zimbalist. In a final group by LaForge and Bridge was the "Lament of Ian the Proud," by the late C. Th. Griffes.

DR. KAMMERER ARRIVES.

Reports New Steinach Experiments to Rejuvenate Women.

Dr. Paul Kammerer, Biologist of the University of Vienna, arrived here yesterday on the United States Lines steamship America with reports of new experimenst by Dr. Eugen Steinach of Vienna concerning the rejuvenation of women by the "diathermic" or heat-ray method. Dr. Kammerer said he was ready to reply to critics who have attacked his proofs of the theory of the transmission of acquired characteristics as set forth in a recent work.

During the Summer Dr. Kammerer completed a book on the fauna and flora of the islands in the Adriatic, the material for which he gathered before the war. He said that Dr. Steinach was busy with further experiments on rejuvenation, particularly concerning the effect on of X-rays on the glands and that great progress had been made.

Christmas is but one day away and the HUNDRED NEEDIEST CASES will remain the neediest unless you help.

ROBINSON PLEADS CAUSE FOR THE NAVY

SAYS CONGRESS IS SLOW

Theodore Douglas Robinson, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, championed the navy and attacked its critics in a speech made last night on the Leviathan when several hundred of those who served on that ship during the war held their first reunion. He denied that the United States was "dishonored" at the Washington Conference and said that if the navy was not what the country wanted it to be the blame attached to Congress for the dilatory way in which it made appropriations. He was careful to add, however, that he did not criticize any individual Congressman.

He concluded by reading a letter written by his uncle, Theodore Roosevelt, when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, in which Mr. Roosevelt asserted that to neglect the navy would be to expose the country "to the possibility of the bitterest humiliation." This, he said, "applies pretty well today."

The reunion took the form of a dinner, followed by a dance, and William Seward Allen, who served on the Leviathan as an Ensign during the war but who is now a lawyer and is President of the U. S. S. Leviathan Veterans' Association.

Takes Secretary Wilbur's Place.

Mr. Robinson came in the place of the Secretary of the Navy, Curtis D. Wilbur, who at the last moment had to go to Los Angeles. He was introduced by Spencer Van B. Nichols, Vice President of the veterans' organization.

"When Secretary Wilbur found he could not be with you," said Mrs. Robinson, "and asked me to represent him here I inquired as to what he would like me to say to you and reply was 'Say anything that comes into your head, but don't get us into war.' Of course I have only been in the Navy Department for four weeks, but I have been in politics for a long time, and politics is war, so that I have got to watch my step.

Mr. Robinson then held up a voluminous copy of the hearings on the Naval Appropriation bill.

"For many years I have served in Legislatures, and when people came for appropriations I used to look upon them with suspicion and wonder what they were trying to put over. Now, for the past month I have sat on the other side of the table, asking Congress for appropriations to run the navy the way Congress should want the navy run. I have no criticism to make of any individual Congressman. Congress represents the United States and if you don't like a Congressman you can change him. So I say, if the navy is not what the United States wants, it is the fault of the United States.

"In these hearings," he continued, "we put the cards on the table and told Congress what the navy wanted and why they wanted it. Don't forget those trained officers had told just as much to the budget and the budget had said 'No, revise your figures' and the navy did that and revised its requests to approximately $290,000,000.

Jealousy Over Autos.

"I have no criticism of the procedure. Congress spends your money and mine, but it does seem that it takes a long time. I listened to the debate on the bill. Again with no criticism of any individual Congressman, one of the high spots debated was the number of automobiles commandants at navy yards had. It didn't seem to me to affect the 5-5-3 ratio to know whether Admiral Plunkett has a 1917 Packard or what. Some seemed a little jealous that a Commandant had a 1917 Packard while he, the Congressman, had a 1924 Ford.

Mr. Robinson read the following letter written to the Secretary of the Navy by his uncle, Theodore Roosevelt, on Sept. 30, 1907, when he was Assistant Secretary:

"We cannot justify ourselves for retaining Alaska and annexing Hawaii unless we provide a navy sufficient to prevent all chance of either being taken by a hostile power; still less have we the right to assert the Monroe Doctrine in the American hemisphere unless we are ready to make good our assertion with our warships. A great navy does not make for war but for peace. It is the cheapest kind of insurance. If through any supine or false economy on our part we fail to provide for ships of the best type, thoroughly fitted in every way, we run the risk of causing the nation to suffer some disaster more serious than it has ever before encountered, a disaster which would warp and stunt our whole national life, for the moral effect would be infinitely worse than the material. We invite such a disaster if we fail to keep both our material and personnel up to the highest conditions.

"We are now in a situation to build up a navy commensurate with our needs, provided the work is carried on continuously, for the era of experiment is passed. But if the work is interrupted and new vessels are not begun, we shall soon find it necessary to start all over again and to reconstruct the men and manufacturers and re-educate the officers and designers and re-experiment with designs. It would be difficult to calculate the course we should incur by such a proceeding, and meanwhile we should be exposing the country to the possibility of the bitterest humiliation."

President Coolidge sent his best wishes to the veterans in the following letter to Mr. Allen:

"The Leviathan Veterans' Association strikes me as one of the World War veterans' organizations that is certain to make a particular appeal to those who are fortunate enough to be entitled to membership. The wonderful work of the Leviathan during the war will make the vessel one of the traditions of the service for all time.

"I send my best wishes to the members of the association."

Hulbert Offers a Plan for Upkeep of City's Recreation Grounds.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday referred to a committee an amendment to a city ordinance, sponsored by President Murray Hulbert, whereby fees collected for the use of municipal golf links, tennis courts, baseball fields, bath houses and bathing beaches and for other athletic activities, would be set aside to the credit of the respective sports for the maintenance, repair and improvement of the facilities utilized in the sport, instead of being covered into the general treasury as at present.

The board redesignated for another term the members of the Board of Elections, John K. Voorhis and James Kane, Democrats, and Charles E. Heydt and Jacob A. Livingston, Republicans.

Alderman Edward J. Atwell, Sheriff-elect of Richmond County, bade farewell to his colleagues in the board, in which he has served for seven years. Tributes of esteem were paid him by President Hulbert, Vice Chairman William T. Collins and other members.

Mr. Hulbert congratulated the board upon its accomplishments of the year and predicted that it would achieve greater things next year because of its newly acquired home rule powers.

HIGHT-SWEETIN JURY CONSIDERS VERDICT

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Dec. 23.—The fate of Elsie Sweetin and her former pastor, Lawrence H. Hight, whom she accused of poisoning her husband, Wilford and he his wife Anna because of their infatuation for each other, tonight is in the hands of the jury.

The twelve men who are to decide their future retired to deliberate after hearing a demand for the death penalty for both man and woman.

In the closing arguments made during the day the State had demanded the death penalty.

Counsel for Mrs. Sweetin appealed to the jurors to send her home to her children, but added, "Whatever your verdict is, she will take it with a smile, for innocence meets death with a smile."

State's Attorney Allen, speaking for the State, urged the jurors not to let the fact that one of the defendants was a woman sway them in their decision.

"Hang them—hang them both!" he demanded. "You men as jurors said under oath that you would inflict the death penalty if the seriousness of the offense warranted. Gentlemen, we think that this is a crime so terrible that it warrants the death penalty, and we ask you to do your full sworn duty."

Special Prosecutor Frank G. Thompson, who closed for the State, painted Mrs. Sweetin as a cold-blooded woman administering potion after potion of poison to her husband.

When Height stood at the door of his church "and grasped the hand of Elsie Sweetin," Prosecutor Allen exclaimed, "he thereby laid the foundation for one of the most dastardly murders ever committed in Southern Illinois.

"And when Sweetin lay dying from the third dose of arsenic Hight knelt there and prayed. What for? For Sweetin's life? No, no, for his soul's salvation. He knew Wilford was going to die."

Robert E. Smith, attorney for Mrs. Sweetin, asserted the testimony showed Hight had been with Wilford Sweetin frequently before his death and had opportunity to administer poison to him. Mrs. Sweetin's alleged confession, he said, was simply what Hight had told her to tell.

"If Sweetin did die from poison there is no testimony that Elsie had anything to do with it," he said.

"They want you men to believe she poisoned Wilford, and yet within five minutes after she found he was sick she sent for a doctor. That doctor went away. Elsie wanted to send for another one. Wilford said, 'No, I'll get better.'

* * * Without his knowledge she did call Dr. Harper and the testimony of the doctor shows that when he got there Wilford said, 'Why, hello, Doctor. I didn't know you were coming.'

$300,000 FEE ASKED; LAWYERS GET $2,000

Court Decides Law Obliges City to Pay Only Lesser Sum in Acquiring Water Plant.

Although the reasonableness of the $300,000 fee asked by Ingraham, Sheehan & Moran, attorneys of 14 Wall Street, for assisting the city in condemning the property of the Citizens' Water Supply Company in Flushing and Douglaston, Queens, was unquestioned, according to Samuel F. Moran, a member of the law firm, only $2,000 was awarded yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Faber in Long Island City.

According to the interpretation placed on the statute limiting lawyers compensation in such proceedings, the smaller amount was all that the city was obliged to pay. Mr. Moran said, however, that his firm is planning to prove that it is entitled to more money and that the interpretation does not apply in this case. He said the services of the firm extended over a period of three and a half years.

The Court awarded the company $112,-246 for expenses, including $25,000 for engineers' compensation. The company filed a claim of $147,664 for expenses, including $31,964 for engineer's work.

Several weeks ago the company, after demanding $9,608,871 for its land, consisting of 290 acres, received an award of $4,758,954.

SAILOR ADMITS GUILT.

Trapped After Sending Blackmail Letter to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt 2d.

Bern Sirro, 20 years old, who described himself as a seaman and gave the address 41 Third Street, Hoboken, was held in $5,000 bail for the action of the Grand Jury when he was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Moses R. Ryttenberg in the Tombs Court on a charge of attempting to extort $50,000 from Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt 2d of 660 Fifth Avenue. Sirro pleaded guilty to having sent a threatening letter demanding the money to Mrs. Vanderbilt. He was arraigned on the complaint of Detective Sergeant Murphy, who, with seven other detectives, trapped him on Monday night when he was awaiting the delivery of the money near the entrance to the Aquarium at the Battery.

Assistant District Attorney William F. McKenna had intended asking the Court to hold Sirro in higher bail, but when he observed the prisoner in court he told the Magistrate that he thought nominal bail for such a case would be sufficient. Sirro, the son of a farmer in Fresno, Cal., was seized after he had accepted a package, which Sirro supposed contained the $50,000, from a 15-year-old messenger, Jerome Halloran of 22 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn, who had been employed by Henry A. Keegan of 11 Raymond Avenue, Rockville Centre, L. I., representing Mrs. Vanderbilt.

While Sirro was under guard of Detective Sergeants McCoy, O'Hara, Browne and Murphy before his arraignment he wept. He was alleged in an affidavit made by Detective Sergeant Murphy to have admitted sending another letter to Philip K. Rhinelander of 18 West Forty-eighth Street, demanding $20,000.

Both letters were shown to the Magistrate. After reading them the Magistrate asked the messenger if, as had been ordered in each letter, he had worn a red band around his hat and a white ribbon on the umbrella he carried as a means of identifying him to Sirro and the boy replied with a smile that he had complied with every detail. Sirro admitted that the name signed to each letter by him was fictitious. He said that he came to this city from San Francisco last July and made two trips to China as a seaman.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Dec. 23.—An additional $1,000 reward for information leading to the capture of the murderers of State Trooper Robert Coyle, who was killed on Chimney Rock Road last Thursday, was voted by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders today. The total reward for the arrest of the men was thus raised to $2,500, as the State offered $1,000 last week and Henry L. Schaefer of this city announced that he would add $500 "to further the cause of law and order."

EIGHT SHIPS ARRIVE CRUSTED WITH ICE

HUGE CHRISTMAS MAIL

Eight North Atlantic passenger vessels arrived in New York yesterday with their bows, forward deck and foremast rigging artistically decorated with ice and frozen snow, which were all from one to three days late through the series of storms they had encountered. The eight steamships brought 3,502 passengers and another 51 arrived from South American ports via the Panama Canal, making a total of 3,553 for the day, and 10,000 sacks of Christmas mail.

Among the fifty-two first-class passengers on the Atlantic Transport liner Minnetonka, from London and Cherbourg, was Miss Mary Howard, a cousin of the British Ambassador, Sir Esme Howard, and another was Antoine de Geofroy, a Frenchman. S. L. Jones, manager of the Bank of Montreal, was also a passenger.

Among the Americans on the Minnetonka was Percy V. G. Mitchell, President of the Red Star Line at Antwerp; Miss Mary Keogh, daughter of Judge Keogh; Harry S. Goldy, London manager of the Guaranty Trust Company, and Murray McMullen, brother-in-law of the Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon.

Girl Brings 7 Children.

The White Star liner Cedric, from Liverpool and Queenstown, was twenty-four hours late and brought a large number of children among her 601 passengers. Rose Farley, 16 years, had in her charge seven brothers and sisters, the eldest being 14 years and the youngest 18 months. The children had been visiting their uncle, Thomas Brennan, at Ballinlough, Ireland, and were met at the pier by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Farley of 439 Davis Avenue, Arlington, N. J. They said that Rose had looked after the family since last July, when Mrs. Farley returned home.

Among the passengers on the Cedric was Dr. Charles K. Webster, Professor of the University of Wales, who comes to attend the Anglo-American Historical Conference to be held in Richmond, Va., on Dec. 26. He will go later to lecture at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Webster is a firm supporter of the League of Nations.

The Republic of the United States Lines was three days late from Bremen, due to fog and stormy weather. The vessel had a good deal more ice on her decks than the other steamships which arrived yesterday and the carpenters had to play the hot water hose on the hatches before he knocked the wedges out to get the tarpaulins off the covers.

Friend of Queen Maud Arrives.

The Bergensfjord of the Norwegian-American Line, which docked in Brooklyn, brought a heavy mail from Northern Europe and 373 passengers. Among them was Mrs. Sophie Gram, a friend of Queen Maud of Norway, who is coming to visit her daughter, Countess Per Sparre, at 35 Slocum Crescent, Forest Hills, L. I., for a few weeks. Mrs. Gram has lectured in the Scandinavian countries upon the history of art and interior decoration.

On the Volendam of the Holland-America Line, coming from Rotterdam via Havana, was Dr. Alfonso Goldschmidt, professor at the National University of Mexico City, who is going to Europe to deliver a series of lectures on Mexico. He is the author of the book "Moscow 1924."

Two historians arrived yesterday on the Anchor liner Cameronia at the invitation of the American Historical Association and will attend the conference on historical matters at Richmond, Va., on Dec. 27. One of them, Sir Richard Lodge, Professor of History at the University of Edinburgh, is a brother of Sir Oliver Lodge. He will be the guest of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

His colleague, C. Grant Robertson, professor of the University of Birmingham, England, said that it would be at least a quarter of a century before the world can expect to have a complete history of the war in the sense that histories are compiled.

During the storm on Sunday Mrs. Eleanore Stammers in the third class gave birth to a girl baby. The other vessels which arrived were the America from Bremen, the Royal Mail steamer Ohio from Hamburg and the Essequibo of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company.

GOULD HEIRS WIN POINT.

Children by First Wife to Have a Separate Decision.

Supreme Court Justice Levy handed down a decision yesterday on the application by the children of the late George J. Gould for an order directing James A. O'Gorman, referee in the Jay Gould estate accounting case, to decide independently of the other issues in the case the amount which the children of George J. Gould are entitled to receive as his sixth interest in the estate, which became payable to them upon his death. The Court granted the application but directed that the trial of the other issues shall not be delayed because of the separate hearing on this question.

The petition of the George J. Gould children by his first wife stated that it was necessary for a determination as to whether his second marriage was in violation of the terms of his father's will and whether or not the children of his second wife were entitled to share in the sixth interest.

The hearings in the $82,000,000 accountancy suit in connection with the Jay Gould estate were continued by Referee O'Gorman in the office of Taylor, Knowles & Hack, 165 Broadway. Walter B. Walker of counsel for Frank J. Gould, the principal objector to the accounting, announced that his client claimed all moneys due to the George J. Gould estate. The announcement was made during the testimony of Schuyler Nelson Rice, formerly secretary to George J. Gould.

Mr. Rice's references to books he kept for George Gould from 1914 down to the present disclosed that George Gould advanced more than $172,000 to his son, Jay Gould, and that Lady Decies, daughter of George Gould, was indebted to the estate in the sum of $201,800. Harold A. Content, counsel for Jay Gould, objected to the testimony, saying that a great part of the money advanced to Jay by his father was in the nature of gifts. He said that the question was pending in an accounting suit in the New Jersey Court of Chancery.

Mr. Walker and William Wallace of counsel for the George Gould estate read much documentary evidence into the record. Referee O'Gorman ordered a recess until 10:30 A. M. on Jan. 5.

PLATZEK QUITS THE BENCH.

Hundreds of Lawyers Participate in Tribute to Retiring Justice.

Justice M. Warley Platzek retired from the Supreme Court bench yesterday to resume the practice of law. Several hundred lawyers participated in a farewell demonstration. Henry W. Taft and De Lancey Nicoll eulogized his judicial career, saying he had won the respect of lawyers and laymen by the competent and conscientious administration of the duties of his office.

Justice Platzek, responding in a voice filled with emotion, said that his years of service upon the Supreme Court bench had been among the happiest of his life. He is retiring because of the age limit, 70 years, placed upon members of the judiciary.

How about the end of the trail?

There's a lot more to shoes than that which appears when they ar new, shiny and shapely. The real test comes at the end of the trail of servis. Hav they worn wel? Hav they kept their shape to the very end? Hav they become old frends—discarded with regret?

When this test of servis is applyd, all halfway methods in manufactur are disclozed, poorly selected lethers fall down on the job, faulty workmanship stands out in the ful light of day.

From the selection of lethers and other materials down thru every last detail of workmanship—John Ward Shoes ar bilt to endure—to serv their wearers faithfully and wel. 29 TYPHOID CASES ADDED TO LIST HERE

Dr. Monaghan Reports, However, That Most of Them Are Milder Form of Disease.

DEATHS TOTAL 157 IN YEAR

Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, Health Commissioner, announced yesterday that twenty-nine new cases of typhoid had been reported to the Health Department, but said this increase over the fifteen cases reported for the two preceding days was expected, as, like in previous weeks, physicians did not mail their reports until Monday. The Health Commissioner said the number of new cases appeared to be hovering about the average established about a week after the present outbreak of typhoid in November, and explained that the majority of the new cases appeared to be of a milder form of the disease.

Dr. Monaghan said that since Jan. 1 last 157 typhoid deaths had been reported in the city, an increase of but twenty-nine over the same period for 1923, notwithstanding that, owing to the present unusual spread of the disease, there had been almost twice as many typhoid cases reported as in 1923.

"Reports from many States indicate that there is a general increase in the number of typhoid fever cases," Dr. Monaghan said. "I therefore desire to warn all who leave the city over the holidays to be careful not to eat raw shellfish and not to drink milk and water unless they are from approved sources.

"Typhoid carriers also may be responsible for some of the cases. Hotels everywhere, especially at the Winter resorts, such as Lakewood and Atlantic City, are requested not to serve raw shellfish or other food that may convey the infection.

"Raw vegetables, such as lettuce and celery, should be washed thoroughly. The habit of putting ice into drinks or other food should be discouraged for two years. First, it is an unhygienic practice; second, ice from infected water often contains typhoid germs. Many epidemics have been traced to typhoid-infected ice. The milk should be pasteurized.

"Hotels should have their help carefully examined to guard against typhoid carriers, and by following this advice the hotels will not be responsible for many typhoid fever cases, in addition they will maintain and retain their good reputation, which always suffers when cases of typhoid are traced to them."

Commissioner Monaghan admitted that, although health inspectors had run down many clues obtained from typhoid victims who took of having eaten raw shellfish before becoming ill, no proof had been obtained through examination of beds and areas from which the shellfish were distributed that the waters were polluted. He said two forces of inspectors had been engaged in this work, visiting restaurants or hotels in which the patients reported they had eaten raw oysters or other shellfish, and the dealers from which such foodstuffs were obtained. Through this means the base of supply in each case was investigated, but no evidence had been obtained indicating the infection came from the food eaten.

NO SICK CHICKENS FOUND.

Dr. Monaghan Believes Embargo Is Now Well in Force.

Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, Health Commissioner, said yesterday that he believed the embargo against the shipment of live chickens into this city and State from eight States of the Middle West was now well in force, as reports received by him from his inspectors yesterday showed that on Sunday and Monday no live chickens had been condemned in Manhattan.

During the same forty-eight-hour period 13,050 pounds of live chickens were admitted into Manhattan. Dr. Monaghan said there were five carloads of live chickens, which had not been shipped from the embargoed States and which were in excellent condition, at a New York City terminal.

YALE'S NEW TELESCOPE IS READY FOR AFRICA

Special to the New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 23.—Yale is to be the first university to plant an astronomical observatory permanently in South Africa. Several months ago the institution decided to send a telescope, which was to be constructed especially for that purpose, to observe and photograph the southern firmament. It has been completed, will be shipped at once to New York City and placed aboard the steamship Eastern Crown, which sails on Saturday for Cape Town, Africa.

While the general design is due to Dr. Schlesinger, a large part of the work has been performed by Roland W. Sellew, a recent graduate of Yale, who has directed several similar important astronomical constructions at Amherst, Wellesley and Columbia universities.

The telescope is a 26-inch photographic refractor, 36 feet long, and is one of the most powerful of this type yet built. The optical parts were made by J. W. McDowell of Pittsburgh. The mechanical parts were made chiefly at the Yale Observatory under Dr. Schlesinger and Mr. Sellew, a new departure in the manufacture of such apparatus.

The telescope was completely erected in New Haven to test it.

Boston Judge Insists Broker Has $300,000 Hidden Away.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—Judge Morton in a United States District Court today dismissed the petition of George F. Redmond, Treasurer of the bankrupt brokerage firm of G. F. Redmond & Co., Inc., for release from jail, where he has already served six months on a contempt commitment. Redmond was adjudged in contempt when he failed to turn over to the receivers $300,000 in assets of the company.

Asking that he be released in time to spend Christmas with his family, Redmond repeated previous declarations that he was not in possession of the cash and securities claimed by the receivers, and so could not hand them over. He rejected a suggestion of counsel that he make over a business building in the financial district and his property at Natick, said to be valued at the amount claimed.

"I am sorry, but I believe you have the money somewhere," the Judge said. "I must dismiss the petition."

"PETER PAN" OF FILM, BETTY BRONSON, HERE

Her large eyes beaming with wonder at the welcoming throngs, which included girls from the Junior League, groups of Boy Scouts and young actresses costumed as fairies, Betty Bronson, the seventeen-year-old actress chosen by Sir James M. Barrie to play the title role in the screen version of "Peter Pan," yesterday hopped off the Twentieth Century Limited to the Grand Central Station platform. One was first impressed by her abundant enthusiasm, then by the smallness of her feet and hands, and finally by her diminutive stature.

To her the whole world is wonderful. She has been suddenly starred in a picture which is to be released at the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres simultaneously next Sunday, and also during the same week in 240 other motion picture theatres throughout the country.

"What do you know?" asked somebody.

"It's all so wonderful." She looked up at her mother, who kept close to the girl's elbow. Others in the party were Jesse L. Lasky and Dorothy Richardson, a writer, and an aunt of the little actress.

The photographers started exploding flashlights, and Miss Bronson, in her most Peter Panis.. mood, opened her mouth to the word "wonderful" as if she were living in a child's dream.

She wore a modest little coat trimmed with leopard's skin, without which she said she weighed nearly 100 pounds. She is not quite five feet high, she assured everybody. She actually appeared to be looking back for her shadow as she passed through the portals into the great station with Paul Helleu's blue and gold sky overhead.

It was very cold outside, especially for the girls in the fantastic costumes. So the party hurried up to the Plaza Hotel, where Miss Bronson, looking most of the time as if she were stifling an "Oooh-ah," huddled up in the corner of a sofa and prepared to answer questions.

"Isn't life wonderful?" appeared to be her chief thought. She does not seem to know the way to frown, and when she was asked to tell her questioners her hobby she readily replied:

"You see," she half mused, "things have happened so fast recently."

Miss Bronson will make appearances at both the Rivoli and Rialto during next week. She will appear at other theatres the following week. She was the guest of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at a Christmas dinner in the Plaza last night.

Eva Tanguay Has the Grip.

Eva Tanguay, the vaudeville actress, is confined to her rooms at the Hotel Embassy, suffering from the grip. Miss Tanguay was compelled to cancel a week's engagement in Providence after the matinee on Monday and returned immediately to New York. Her attempted return to the stage followed a week's illness, and the actress said yesterday that she would now be compelled to rest for another two weeks.

It was the first time in her career, she said, that she had been compelled to quit the stage because of illness.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"It's Not So" by James Gleason and Richard Taber, will open in New York on Jan. 5, at a theatre as yet unannounced. James Gleason and Robert Armstrong will head the cast.

Harry K. Morton and Zella Russell will have the comedy roles in "The Love Song."

MOTION PICTURES.

No building has ever been constructed large enough to house the Imagination of Barrie:

Barrie's writing requires all the world as a stage and the screen is the stage of the universe.

With a wave of the hand and a click of the camera, the Himalaya mountains that divide unknown Thibet from mystic China, pop up before you.

THREE PLAYHOUSES FOR THEATRE GUILD

Guild's Own New House in West 52d Street May Open With Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra."

The Theatre Guild within a short time will have three New York theatres under its control, it was learned yesterday. During the next few days contracts will be signed whereby the Klaw Theatre passes over to the Guild for its attractions, under a lease agreement, for a period of one year, with an option for extension of the arrangement.

The Guild now has the Garrick Theatre, where its attractions have played since its foundation seven years ago, and also expects to open its own Guild Theatre, on West Fifty-second Street, early in February, possibly with a production of Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra." In addition, "The Guardsmen," a Guild production, is playing at the Booth Theatre.

The first Guild attraction at the Klaw Theatre will be "They Knew What They Wanted," now at the Garrick. This play will be moved to the Klaw to make way for the Guild's production of John Howard Lawson's "Processional," which opens in two or three weeks.

The prospect of early Guild control of three New York theatres is a striking evidence of the phenomenal success of the Theatre Guild, which started its career seven years ago as an experimental theatre of decidedly problematical prospects. At the present time, however, "The Guardsman" at the Booth, and "They Knew What They Wanted," which moves from the Garrick to the Klaw are regarded as among the outstanding box office successes of the season. In addition, the Guild, through its subscribers and bondholders, owns outright the theatre now in construction on West Fifty-second Street.

PRINCETON SHOWS "THE SCARLET COAT"

Triangle Club's Musical Melodrama of the Northwest Has Several Song Hits.

Gold prospectors, gamblers and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police figured largely in "The Scarlet Coat," a musical romance in two acts, presented last night before a large and appreciative audience at the Metropolitan Opera House by the Triangle Club of Princeton University.

As the scenes were laid at a fur trading post on the Koyukuk River in Canada, melodramatic situations abounded. Robert M. Crawford, a senior, who appeared in the romantic role of Pierre, without which no story of the Northwest is complete, was the star soloist, and also wrote the music. He moved in a natural environment, for he was born at Fairbanks, Alaska, in 1905, and was formerly a miner and woodsman.

The audience liked his voice and insisted upon frequent encores. The cast throughout was well balanced, with certain realism manifested by the feminine portrayers, and a well drilled ensemble danced its way into favor from the very start. There was a lively jingle to the music, and many of the song and dance numbers got a Broadway pace.

Avery Sherry as Charline, the factor's daughter, and Lawrence Braman as Maybelle, queen of the dance hall, kept up to their stand of previous productions in this feminine roles, while F. W. Thompson as Secret W. Service, a lady-like poet of the north woods, carried the high comedy through successfully.

"Iglico," "Whisper It" and "Indian Moon" were among the song hits of the production, Crawford, the Alaskan, being the composer of the latter song.

A reminder of the 10, 20 and 30 cent days of melodrama that afforded much amusement was the singing of an illustrated ballad all about Nelly, who went to the wicked city never to return. The Triangle jazz band gave some clever and pleasing numbers.

Others in the cast who helped to put pep into the show were Day Edgar and Julian Street, who wrote the book and lyrics; William Brenton, James MacIntosh, Jack Hamilin, Irwin Thompson, Hugo Bell, who appeared as White Swan, a squaw; Adolph Schmidt, Waller Booth Jr. and Jack Evans.

"TOPSY AND EVA" APPEAR.

Chloe	Aimee Torriani
Harry	Glory Minahani
Uncle Tom	Basil Ruysdael
George Shelby	Rex Cherryman
Mrs. Shelby	Helen Case
Helen	Renee Lowrie
Ann	Lea Swan
Jane	Edith Mayhauh
Bessie	Antoinette Boots
Augustine St. Clare	Wilbur Cushman
Henrique	Harriet Hoctor
Simon Legree	Frank K. Wallace
Gee Gee	Davis Goodman
Eliza	Florence M ith
Marisite	Nydia D'Arnell
Erabuse Marks	Ashley Cooper
Ophelia St. Clare	Myrtle Ferguson
Topsy	Rosetta Duncan
Eva St. Clare	Vivian Duncan
Dansuse Premiere	Harriet Hoctor
Bertha	Rose Hinds

For one thing, "Topsy and Eva," produced last night at the Sam H. Harris Theatre, was not, after its lengthy Chicago run, what the average playgoer would expect it to be. As a matter of fact, it was not even what the very occasional theatregoer might demand of a musical show, with a considerable story and the Duncan sisters as its stars. It is in brief, a reasonably discouraging musical play.

The Duncan sisters, to be sure, do their best, and so does Nydia D'Arnell, a newcomer here. Miss D'Arnell, while she is not exactly a wonder, left the audience, nevertheless, with the feeling that she is a person it would be well to have more of.

"Topsy and Eva" is not greatly helped by its chorus, which may have satisfied Chicago and points West but can scarcely be counted upon to reconcile the more critical judgment of points East.

The Misses Duncan, as usual, were themselves. That is to say, in this instance, Miss Vivian was Eva St. Clare and Miss Rosetta Topsy. Neither twin, as may have been remarked, was terrifically amusing.

Pavlowa to Give Ballet 'Christmas.'

Anna Pavlowa and her company gave the second performance of their return engagement last night in the Manhattan Opera House. The principal ballets were "Amaryllis" and "Autumn Leaves," followed by the familiar but much admired series of divertissements. These included the "Coquetterie de Columbine," danced by Mme. Pavlowa and Messrs. Volinine and Novikoff; the Pastorale of Mme. Stuart and Mr. Oliveroff; the Warrior Dance by Mr. Novikoff, and other passages in which the beauty or dexterity of the dancers was shown. There will be given three performances relating to the Christmastide: one this evening, and two on Christmas Day. At each of these performances the ballet "Christmas" will be given.

Christmas is but one day away and the HUNDRED NEEDIEST CASES will remain the neediest unless you help.

THE PLAY

By STARK YOUNG.

The New Play by Mr. Arliss.

Sylvanus Heythorp	George Arliss
Gilbert Passey	Frederic Worlock
Bob Pillin	Deering Wells
Charles Ventnor	Stafford Dickens
Mr. Brownbee	Norman Cannon
Clergyman	Eustace Wyatt
Rosamund Larne	Irby Marshall
Phyllis	Cecile Dixon
Jock	George Walcott
Joseph Pillin	Ivan F. Simpson
Adela Heythorp	Ethel Griffies
A Director	Langford Hayes
Lotty	Henrietta Goodwin
Waller	Henry Morrell
Molly	Molly Johnson

Perhaps it was only George Arliss after all, but the first act at least of Galsworthy's new play, based on his short story, "The Stoic," at the Ritz Theatre last night seemed very well written. Certainly old Sylvanus Heythorp's speeches as Mr. Arliss spoke them seemed right enough. The Chairman of the Island Navigation Company is threatened with bankruptcy, he is around 80 and might seem to be failing. But sheer strength of will he hurles his Board of Directors into leaving him in control. The Secretary announces the arrival of the novelist with her two children. She is the widow of an illegitimate son of Heythorp's, long since dead. She needs money as always. Heythorp makes up his mind to persuade a contemporary of his, Joseph Pillin, to sell his four ships to the company for 60,000 pounds and allow him a commission of 6,000, to be settled on his grandchildren. His brownbeeks Pillin into this transaction much against the grain and then in turn brings the board of the Island Navigation Company around to buying the ships. Heythorp is not dead yet by a long sight, the curtain falls on him as he starts for his carriage. We seemed to feel again the promise of the earlier plays like "Strife" or "Justice."

The less said of Mr. Galsworthy's second act the better. Every nation has its own special kind of silliness no doubt, its own affectations and pet effects. But this second act of "Old English" seemed last night rather to go the limit for the diversion of English sentiment and coyness at its worst. The amount of archness, silly ass and sprightly young Galsworthy girl sort of thing, the forcing, the slang, the bold sallies into the region of pastor shocks, seemed at times almost beyond our national power of endurance. The son—well acted by Deering Wills—of the man who had sold the ships calls on the granddaughter of old Heythorp. She has been washing her hair, the mother needs money, they serve tea, the lawyer appears and makes unseemly advances to the mother and at the same time gets hold of information that will let him force the chairman's hand and put himself on the board of directors of the company. Old Heythorp comes, announces his settlement of the money on the grandchildren; for a few moments while Mr. Arliss is there the play picks up a bit.

By the time the third act arrives it is clear that without Mr. Arliss this event would not exist in the theatre at all. Or perhaps it might be more exact to say that in so far as "Old English" is a play of any consideration at all it is an impersonation by one actor, a reading of a dramatic story with appropriate settings of rooms, furniture, properties and surrounding characters. Fortunately the third act is all Sylvanus Heythorp, the gallant sinner, the epicurean of other years. He is cornered by the lawyer who has got hold of the facts about the breach of trust in connection with the commission on the sale of the ships. His daughter with her mid-Victorian pieties is more odious a cat in her father's eyes than ever. He orders a splendid dinner, champagne, port, brandy, sweetbreads, all forbidden by the doctor. He eats, drinks and death brings him the way of escape from the toils of finance, from his pious daughters, blackmailers and the fading of high mettle and independence from the world of men.

Since the play, then, rests, like some of the old pieces of Irving's epoch, in a single impersonation and the drama of it appears through this impersonation, and the impersonator happens to be Mr. Arliss, "Old English," except for that exhausting second act, went through on its first night course to an astonishingly absorbed and silent audience. Mr. Arliss has not a wide range; he remains in the world of men and wit and courage and manners. He is not romantically poetic or grand or soaring. But within his range he exhibits every shading and covers every possibility. His art seems to perfect itself within the passage of the years. What he did in this new play had every gradation and glamour that any one could ask. He made a poor play not only entertaining and worth while, but one of the most distinguished things of the season.

BELASCO'S SKILL PUT INTO A TAWDRY PLAY

Some Fine Acting in "Ladies of the Evening," a Meretricious Drama Handsomely Mounted.

Tom Standish	Vernon Steele
Jerry Streng	James Kirkwood
Kay Beatty	Beth Merrill
Phillips	Bernard J. McOwen
Claire Standish	Kay Strozzi
Dot Miller	Edna Hibbard
Frank Forbes	Robert E. O'Connor
Andrew Kenney	John Carmody
Daddy Palmer	Thomas Reynolds
A Waitress	Allyn Gilbyn
A Head Waiter	Joe Yorrin

Mr. Belasco has in this instance lavished his producing skill upon a commonplace and generally common play. The name of it is "Ladies of the Evening," and its advent at the Lyceum had been preceded by reports that it borrowed from the underworld for both hirsutitation and line. The audience that assembled for the first performance was accordingly on the qui vive for sensationalism, and there is no doubt that it received it. But it was, to use a paradox, an unsensational sensationalism—a mood probably induced by the fact that the entire undertaking seemed something less than honest. Distinctly, it is nothing for Mr. Belasco to be proud of.

He may, however, stick an additional plume in the hat this morning on the ground that not even this meretricious play was able to make him relax his producing standards for a second. He has mounted it handsomely, cast it shrewdly and extravagantly, and in the main has caused it to be played so well that one frequently is lured to forget just how tawdry a play it is. It would be idle for this reviewer to pretend that he was not entertained by large parts of it, but tinged with his reluctant enjoyment was always a feeling of shame.

The story that the playwright has taken is one sufficiently familiar in the theatre, but, with the license that recent seasons seem to have conferred, he has written it with an excess of frankness. Briefly, it concerns a painter, possessed of high ideals, who wagers with friends that he can successfully lift a wanton to a higher spiritual level. Given this start, almost any one can complete the scenario. In this case it was completed by Milton Herbert Gropper, previously known as co-author of "New Toys" and "Gypsy Jim."

There are several fine performances—as a matter of fact, there was only one performance that seemed to fall short of the mark. James Kirkwood made the hero a monotonous bore, but it should be added that this character, as conceived by the author, was the most terrible person ever placed on a stage. The outstanding performance of the evening was given by Beth Merrill as the wanton—a telling and truthful impersonation that fell short only when the writing of the rôle made verity an impossibility.

Ziegfeld Not to Build Theatres.

A report that Florenz Ziegfeld would build two New York theatres in association with William Randolph Hearst was denied by the producer last night. Mr. Ziegfeld said that such a proposition had been considered at one time, but that it was unlikely to come to fruition.

MARTIN IS BARRED IN HEAVIER CLASS

CHALLENGES ACTED UPON

The privilege of engaging in bouts arranged at 122 pounds was denied Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, world's bantamweight champion, yesterday by the State Athletic Commission. At its regular meeting the Empire State Boxing Board rejected an application that Martin be permitted to arrange bouts above the bantamweight class limit of 118 pounds and insisted that the newly crowned champion box as a bantamweight in all his bouts in this State.

The only exception, it was pointed out by Chairman George E. Brower, who explained the commission's regulation on this point and its application to Martin and all other champions in divisions other than the heavyweight class, was in cases where a champion is matched for a title bout against the champion of a heavier class. In that situation, it was announced, the lighter champion would not be compelled to make his class weight.

The decision came on the application of Matchmaker Frank Flournoy of Madison Square Garden, who sought information from the commission on the subject preliminary to arranging a match in which Martin would engage some suitable 122-pound rival in the Garden. Chairman Brower pointed out that in Martin's particular case the bantamweight champion has no opportunity for a match against the champion of the next highest class.

In the junior featherweight class there is no recognized title holder, and the same is true of the featherweight division, in which the commission now is conducting a tournament to establish a boxer qualified for recognition as champion to succeed Johnny Kilbane, the veteran Italian fighter, who vacated the championship some time ago by publicly admitting that he could no longer make the class weight and fight up to his best form.

Challenge Not Now Binding.

The commission accepted the challenge of Tom Gibbons, St. Paul's veteran light-heavyweight, to Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion, but declined to entertain Gibbons's challenge to Mike McTigue, world's champion of the class. It was explained that a challenge to McTigue, issued by Tunney, now reposes with the commission, awaiting the acceptance of the world's titleholder. Under the circumstances, Chairman Brower said, it would be impracticable to accept Gibbons's challenge, which was embodied in the sweeping defi the St. Paul boxer issued immediately following his knockout victory over Kid Norfolk at Madison Square Garden recently.

No other action on the Gibbons challenge was taken, Chairman Brower said, because of the fact that the challenge is not right now binding. Gibbons did not observe the commission's regulations with respect to challenges when he issued his defi and failed to post the required forfeit of $2,500. Until Gibbons forwards the forfeit money, it was announced, action on forcing Tunney's acceptance in a specified period of time, and other details in connection with the challenge, will be deferred.

Chairman Brower in discussing the light-heavyweight situation and the reports of difficulties which will be experienced in the efforts of a matchmaker to sign Tunney and Gibbons, declared that the commission was not concerned with the division of the purse to be agreed upon by the boxers, beyond compelling observance of the commission's rule placing a maximum of 50 per cent. of the receipts as the amount of money permitted to be paid for all championship matches. He added that it did not necessarily follow that an agreement whereby one boxer would receive 37½ per cent. of the purse, and the other 12½ per cent., must be effected.

Gibbons's challenge was directed solely at McTigue and Tunney, Chairman Brower said, in announcing that there was no mention in the challenge of Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion. When the announcement of the challenge first was made it was said by some that the defi extended to Dempsey also.

Sid Terris, east side lightweight championship contender, appeared before the commission to exhibit the injured left hand which caused him to withdraw from his scheduled bout last night against Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo at the Pioneer Athletic Club. Chairman Brower said that an examination of the hand by commission physicians failed to disclose any indication of serious injury.

Terris to Box Jan. 13.

Dan Caplin, manager of Terris, maintained that the east side youngster was suffering from a recurrence of an old injury to his hand, which would keep him idle, on the advice of his physician, for perhaps ten days. Chairman Brower said he advised Caplin to send Terris away for a longer rest, but when Caplin informed the Commissioners he was prepared to send Terris into the ring against Goodrich on Jan. 6 or Jan. 13, Manager Frank Bartley of the Pioneer Club accepted the latter date as suitable for a bout between Terris and Goodrich.

Caplin was informed by Chairman Brower that Terris will not be permitted to engage in a bout at any place prior to his meeting with Goodrich. This condition, Caplin said, was agreeable to him, adding that when he withdrew Terris from the Goodrich match scheduled for last night, he had also, on the advice of Terris's physician, canceled a match he had arranged for Philadelphia on New Year's Day afternoon.

A query elicited the information from Chairman Brower that the commission will officially recognize the winner of the Danny Kramer-Louis (Kid) Kaplan bout in Madison Square Garden on Jan. 2 as the featherweight champion.

George La Rue, Syracuse boxer, who was disqualified recently when it was alleged he was not boxing up to his best form in a bout in Syracuse, was suspended for thirty days. Vic Hirsch, Chicago boxer, appeared before the commission seeking to obtain his release from a contract with his manager, C. J. Cardio of Boston. Chairman Brower, however, informed Hirsch that the commission had no jurisdiction and did not care to take the responsibility of abrogating a contract.

HAVANA DASH WON BY TRUE AMERICAN

HAVANA, Dec. 23.—A track, which was muddy on the inside and slow on the outside, greeted the thoroughbreds that raced at Oriental Park here today. The program was made up of a series of sprints in which the fields were of ordinary calibre. Most of the horses that earned brackets outran their fields from the start, but at the end had to stand hard drives to win.

The feature on the card, a six-furlong sprint for three-year-olds and upward, resulted in a victory for Mrs. J. Dreyer's four-year-old chestnut gelding, True American, which beat Mrs. A. Sweake's Muskallonge and J. B. Partridge's Annie Lyle, after a hard battle at the finish.

Jockey Ball rode his first winner of the meeting when Hutchison won the third race. Hutchison made all his own pace and had to stand a drive all through the last furlong to beat out Locarno a length. Without the one to force the early pace and was a keen factor to the stretch turn, where she collapsed. This was her first start here this Winter, as she was undoubtedly short.

Hullo, an old favorite with Oriental Park crowds, won her first race at this meeting when she beat War Garden a length and a half in the fourth race. This pair raced like a team into the home stretch, War Garden began to tire at the end, and the mare drew away into an easy lead.

SUN LADY IS VICTOR IN HANDICAP RACE

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 23.—Sun Lady, Mrs. F. Farrar's three-year-old filly, this afternoon gained an easy victory in the La Fourche Claiming Handicap, which held the place of honor on the card at Jefferson Park. The daughter of Sun Briar and Irish Lady II. led a field of six all the way over the course of a mile and a sixteenth, running the distance in 1:51 1-5 over a sloppy track. L. Lang had the mount and the filly was the second choice in the wagering, backed to 11 to 5. She was in well under 106 pounds and found the going to her liking, never being in danger.

The track was deep in slop from the continued rains and the mud larks had the call. Favorites came home in front in two of the races. Montgomery took the riding honors with two victories out of four mounts. He brought home Kinsman in front in the fourth race and repeated on Smart Guy.

There was not much of a contest in the handicap. Sun Lady was away fast, was rushed into a long lead and had a four-length margin over R. J. Murphy's Thimble at the finish. Thimble dropped out of the contention after going wide at the lower turn, coming on again in the stretch and finishing two lengths in front of C. A. Coyle's Rama, the latter being the favorite. Rama followed the leader for six furlongs and then began to tire.

Wins in Stretch Battle.

Ten took the word in the opening number, a dash of five and a half furlongs for the two-year-olds. Rodeo, A. Koivula's chestnut gelding by Polymelian—Farimond, proved the winner after a hot stretch battle with C. H. Knebelkamp's Troutbeck colt Alexander Moore, B. A. Lane's Jubal Early, a 40-to-1 shot, taking third money. The winner was held at 4 to 1, Alexander Moore being the 12-to-5 favorite.

The six-furlong dash for three-year-olds and upward was a victory for E. Lutz's four-year-old gelding Boot Black, a good mud horse, which found the going to his liking, the son of Jim Gaffney and Shine outgaining Mrs. W. J. Potter's Remnant in a hard finish, to win by half a length. S. G. Baker's Muskeag took third money by a neck from Carnarvron.

An outlook the money in the six-furlong dash for two-year-olds, third on the card, the winner being Mrs. T. O. Weber's Escolane, which finished in front of a field of twelve. It was the second victory for the gelding in three starts here. He was held at 8 to 1 at post time, backed from a high of 12 to 1.

Escolane liked the footing, and the son of Escoba and Flounce showed the way from start to finish. Robbins was up, and his mount finished three lengths in front of J. T. Taylor's Wuhu with plenty in reserve. Parmachenee Belle came from far back with a great rush in the last quarter and took third money by a head from Red Squirrel.

15-to-1 Shot Scores.

H. Herron's Kinsman gained an easy victory in the six-furlong claiming dash, beating ten others at the long odds of 15 to 1. Four lengths back was J. B. McGinn's McIntosh, which came with a rush at the end to take the place from Rachel Potter.

B. F. McClain's Smart Guy was the winner of the gallop of a mile and three-sixteenths for three-year-olds and upward, in which ten faced the barrier. A 6-to-1 shot, the old Theo Cook gelding was hustled into the lead soon after the start, showed his speed in the sloppy going and held on well in the final drive, although he had a margin of a head only on Smuts. Kent L. closed a great gap after a slow beginning, to take third money by a head from Purity. Escarpolette, the public choice, bolted at the stretch turn.

Margaret Ware, the Derby Stable's four-year-old filly and the 13-to-10 favorite, gained her second consecutive victory when she beat five others in the closing number, a gallop of a mile and a sixteenth. She ran as if much the best of the lot in the going, and at the end was ten lengths in front of Blanche Mac, which took the place by four lengths from Loveliness.

RICKARD SEEKS GREB BOUT.

Talk of a world middleweight championship bout between Harry Greb, agile Pittsburgh boxer who holds the title, and Jack Delaney, Bridgeport contender, was revived yesterday when Jimmy (Roddy) Mason, manager of Greb, was discovered hovering about Madison Square Garden. This battle is sought as another championship match for the Garden's last indoor boxing season by Promoter Tex Rickard.

So far as could be learned, however, no definite steps have been taken to sign the bout. Mason indicated that Greb would be agreeable to a clash with Delaney, but declared he preferred to talk matters over with the champion before making a definite announcement.

Widener, Harlan, Wingfield and Field Also Import Thoroughbreds, Mostly From Newmarket.

The steamship Minnetonka of the Atlantic Transport Line arrived at this port last night bearing a valuable shipment of twenty-five thoroughbreds consigned to a number of owners. George Williams came on to look after the Camden lot and will ship them to the Kentucky farm as soon as possible after they have passed through the customs. This lot is made up of the weanling, a bay or brown colt by Craig-an-Eran—Pretty, while the two-year old is Glamour, a brown filly by Galloper Light-Elizalexi. There were four of the shipment consigned to Walter J. Salmon, these being the four-year-old brown gelding Crumple, by Nell Gow—Stuff; the five-year-old chestnut mare Derrsawragh, by Lochryn-Gartlandstown; the twelve-year-old bay mare Prescription, by Dinneford-M. S., and the six-year-old bay mare Sister, by Dark Ronald-Mother-in-Law.

He won as his rider pleased and at the finish was ten lengths in front of the Frozen North Stable's Full o' Fun. The latter outgamed Seth's Memory to take the place by a length.

BOSTON TO RELEASE 3 VETERAN PITCHERS

Fohl Ready to Ask for Waivers on Murray, Piercy and Quinn —Wants Young Team.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 23.—Manager Lee Fohl of the Boston Red Sox is ready to ask for waivers on Pitchers Quinn, Piercy and Murray, he declared here today, adding that few veterans will be in next year's line-up.

"I thought I could finish in the first division with a flock of stars whose brilliance was becoming dimmed," Fohl said. "No such mistake will be made next year. We are going to build up a new team instead of patching one that is not worth patching."

Pitchers Ehmke and Ferguson, Catcher Picinich, Second Baseman Wambsganns and Outfielder Flagstead will represent the veterans. Although Joe Harris batted .301, Fohl plans to start the season with Todt at first base. Prothro, acquired from Washington, will be at third, and Gross, farmed out by Boston to San Antonio last year, and Rogge, a Western association recruit, will be tried at short.

The outfield will be the same as that which finished the season—Williams, Texas recruit; Flagstead, and Boone, with Bache, a righthander from Dallas, and Collins as utility men.

Heving will assist Picinich behind the bat, with Stokes, a graduate of the Mobile Club, as their understudy.

Sharing the pitching staff with Ehmke and Ferguson will be Fullerton, Ross, Ruffing, Kaillo, Lucey, Wingfield, Wiltsie and Kiefer. All are righthanders except Wiltsie and Ross.

QUINN HAS TWIRLED FOR TEN BALL CLUBS

Veteran Has Been With Four Major League Teams During Career of 22 Years.

Jack Quinn, veteran major league pitcher, on whom the Red Sox have asked waivers, is one of the oldest players in the two major leagues in point of service. During his long career Quinn has been a member of no less than ten teams, four of them big league clubs. The major league teams in addition to the Red Sox, with which he has spent a part of his career, are the Yankees, Braves and White Sox.

Quinn has now been actively engaged in professional baseball for a total of twenty-two years. He is 39 years of age, according to the record books. He started his professional career with the Connellsville club in 1903 and remained with that team for three full seasons. There is no record of his activities during 1906, but in the following year he joined the Macon club of the South Atlantic League. While with that team that season he won six games and lost five. In 1908 he was a member of the Richmond club of the Virginia League. While with Richmond during that season he made the phenomenal record of winning fourteen games and losing none. On the strength of this record he was drafted by the Yankees at the close of that season.

During the campaign of 1909, his first with the New York club, Quinn won nine games and lost five. In the following year, while still with the Yankees, he won eighteen and lost twelve. He slipped considerably during 1911 and won only eight games while losing nine. He started the season of 1912 with the Yankees and after he had won five games and lost seven he was released to the Rochester club of the International League. He completed that season with Rochester, winning eight games and losing four.

During most of the season of 1913, Quinn was with the Rochester club and his record for that season consisted of nineteen victories and thirteen defeats. Later in that season, however, he was sold to the Braves and before that campaign came to a close he won four games and lost three for the Boston club.

At the start of the season of 1914 Quinn signed with the Baltimore club of the Federal League and he remained with that team for two full seasons. During 1914 he won twenty-six games and lost fourteen and in the following season he was credited with nine victories and charged with twenty-two defeats. Under the peace agreement between the Fedral League and organised baseball he was sent to the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast League.

In 1916, his first year with the Vernon club, Quinn won sixteen games and lost thirteen. In the next season he scored twenty-four victories to twenty defeats. In 1918, while still with Vernon, he won twelve games and lost six. Before that season ended, however, the Pacific Coast League suspended operations on account of the war and Quinn received permission to finish that campaign with the White Sox. While with the Chicago club he won five games and lost only one.

After a lapse of seven years, Quinn found his way back to the Yankees in 1919. He had been claimed by both the Chicago and New York clubs, but he was awarded to the Yankees. During 1919 he won fourteen games and lost the same number. In 1920 he won eighteen games and lost ten, and in the following year, while still with the Yankees, he gained eight victories to seven defeats. After the close of the season of 1921 Quinn was traded to the Red Sox and he recently completed three full seasons with the Boston club.

In 1922, his first year with the Red Sox, Quinn won thirteen games and lost fifteen. In 1923 he won thirteen and lost seventeen, and this year he was credited with twelve victories and charged with thirteen defeats.

During his long career Quinn has taken part in only one world's series, that between the Giants and Yankees in 1921. He pitched in only one game in that series and was charged with losing it.

REDS ABANDON DEAL.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 23.—The Cincinnati Reds have given up all hope of obtaining Johnny Neun, first baseman recruit of the Detroit Americans, who spent last season with St. Paul in the American Association. Manager Jack Hendricks said that five clubs in the American League refused to waive their rights to the youngster with the result that the Reds have dropped all negotiations for Neun.

Rube Bressler, Reds utility man, probably will cover first base, made vacant by the death of Jake Daubert.

YANKEES MAY SIGN MERKLE AS COACH

ALSO MAY BE PINCH HITTER

Barrow Believes His Hard Clouting Would Help Team—Deal Likely to Be Closed Soon.

Fred Merkle, one-time Giant first baseman and now a clouting member of the Rochester team of the International League, will be employed as a coach by the Yankees next year if Miller Huggins says the word. A deal between the Yanks and Rochester for Merkle is now in progress, it was learned yesterday. Ed Barrow, Secretary of the Yanks, admitted the fact, and it is already almost a double-riveted certainty that Merkle will be added to the Ruppert payroll.

If Barrow has his way, Merkle will be more than a mere coach. Barrow is heartily in favor of signing Fred to a player's contract, making him eligible to pinch hit or play first base when the occasion demands. Huggins, on the other hand, has the idea of confining Merkle's activities to the coaching lines, where he will collaborate with Charley O'Leary. Merkle is said to be an excellent coach of young pitchers, and it was with the purpose of getting a tutor for his twirlers that Huggins first considered the addition of the veteran.

The only hitch in the negotiations revolves around the little matter of getting another first baseman for Rochester. If the Yanks take Merkle they will be expected to buy another minor league first baseman and ship him to Rochester. This angle of the transaction is almost completed, after two months' of negotiations, and

R. B. HAINES VICTOR IN HANDICAP SQUASH

BRACKENRIDGE IS WINNER

The playing of the Haines brothers of the Columbia Club featured yesterday's second-round matches in the national handicap squash tournament at the Crescent A. C. in Brooklyn. Roland B. Haines, the low handicap man of the tournament, defeated Frances Day of the Yale Club in decisive fashion, 15—8, 15—7, while his brother, D. W. Haines, a plus 3 player, was losing a hotly contested match to Gavin Brackenridge of the Princeton Club, 17—14, 15—13. In view of the fact that Brackenridge is a minus 3 player, this was an excellent showing on the part of the Columbia Club man. He carried the first game to 14—all and the second to 13—all before he went down before the more finished playing of Brackenridge.

The showing of the elder Haines against Day was even more impressive than the score indicates. Day is a plus 8 player and Haines is handicaped at minus 10. Thus Haines overcame his big handicap and ran up his thirty points while Day was scoring three. Two of these three came in the first game before Haines had fairly struck his stride, and the last one was made in the second after Haines had the game and match won and was easing up.

The ease with which Haines scored his victory was not characteristic of the other matches played yesterday. For the most part the handicaps brought the rival players very close together and the low handicap men found difficulty in catching up in time to prevent their opponents from running out the games and matches. H. V. Crawford, a minus 4 player from the Montclair A. C., failed in his effort to do it against G. M. Rushmore of the Harvard Club and lost the match at 15—9, 15—3, 15—9.

After Rushmore had won the first game Crawford came back with great determination in the second, overcame his handicap and won, but the effort tired him out and he fell an easy victim to the Harvard man in the final and deciding game. Rushmore plays at scratch.

Another minus 4 player to meet defeat was George Davidson of the Crescents, who found that he could not give D. M. Ogilvie, a fellow club member, the limit handicap of plus 10 and beat him. Ogilvie won in straight games, 15—3, 15—8.

Play will be completed in the second round this afternoon and will start in the third round on Friday. There will be no matches played on Christmas Day.

The summaries:

Second Round—R. B. Haines, Columbia Club, defeated Francis Day, Yale Club, 15—8, 15—7; C. Tredwell, Crescent A. C., won from J. C. Neely, Princeton Club, by default; S. M. Sperry, Princeton Club, defeated Edwin Muller, Princeton Club, 15—8, 7—11, 15—10; D. M. Ogilvie, Crescent A. C., defeated George Davidson, Crescent A. C., 15—3, 15—8; J. W. Fullerton Jr., Columbia Club, defeated Clayton du Bosque, Heights Casino, 15—13, 15—7; Gavin Brackenridge, Princeton Club, defeated D. W. Haines, Columbia Club, 17—14, 15—13; C. W. Fyfe, Crescent A. C., defeated Richard Pratt, Heights Casino, 15—11, 14—17, 15—13; H. M. Rushmore, Harvard Club, defeated H. V. Crawford, Montclair A. C., 15—9, 15—13, 15—3; Arnold Wood Jr., Princeton Club, defeated W. E. Chambers, New York A. C., 15—14, 15—3; E. W. Meinert, Crescent A. C., won from P. H. Walton, Heights Casino, by default; R. F. Maxwell, Princeton Club, defeated C. H. Westfall, Crescent A. C., 15—13, 15—13, 15—11; H. S. Thorne, Yale Club, defeated R. R. Larigan, Crescent A. C., 15—13, 15—10, 15—6.

RUDELS WIN IN GOLF PLAY.

Capture Father and Son Tourney at Pinehurst With Net of 72.

PINEHURST, N. C., Dec. 23.—C. M. Rudel and his son John of Westmount, Quebec, won the father and son tournament play here today, when they returned a net score of 72 for the eighteen hole medal round. The Rudels carried a handicap of 20, their gross score being 92.

The winners were just a stroke ahead of A. S. Higgins and Charters Higgins, who belong to the St. Andrews Club in Yonkers. The cards of the latter totaled 91, 18—73.

The best gross for the day was scored by H. B. and Walter Swoope of Madera, Pa., who registered an 86. Young Swoope, who is 16, set the junior record here last year when he went out in 84. The two real youngsters of the tournament were Billy Farson, son of Don Farson of Youngstown, Ohio, and Sherburn Merrill of New York, who are both only 13.

Nurmi Predicts Mile Record If Ray Takes His Measure

A world's record indoor mile will be furnished at the Finnish-American games in Madison Square Garden on Jan. 6 if Joie Ray, speedy little Illinois A. C. middle-distance star, beats Paavo Nurmi, Finland's great runner. This prediction is credited to Nurmi after his first time trials in quarter-mile spurts, it was said yesterday at A. A. U. headquarters. Additional information on the wonderful Finn's running form was the statement of a veteran athletic follower who declared Nurmi had covered the fastest two miles indoors he had ever seen in his workout on Monday at the 258th Field Artillery Armory in the Bronx. These reports were accepted by A. A. U. followers as indicating that Nurmi has found himself in his training indoors and will take to the track in his first American appearance prepared for a spectacular race.

GOLF PLAY AWARDED TO SLEEPY HOLLOW

Met. Officials Pick Course for Junior Title Tourney—Date Not Yet Decided.

The first of the golf assignments for the 1925 fixtures in the metropolitan district was made recently when the newly elected members of the Executive Committee held their first meeting and selected Sleepy Hollow for the junior event. No date was fixed, but it is expected that four days along toward the end of June will be decided on.

In the selection of the course overlooking the Hudson the juniors are assured a capital time and a capital course for their event, for the members of Sleepy Hollow have always evidenced a great interest in the welfare of the youngsters and the course is one that is ideally adapted.

It was at Sleepy Hollow that the germ of the junior idea in golf was born. The father and son tournament had its inception there and in all likelihood it will be held at Sleepy Hollow again next year, although there has been no announcement to that effect.

No action was taken regarding the other events and it is not likely that any action will be taken before the January session of the executive body. It is intimated that at the January session a course will be named for the Lesley Cup matches, which will be held in the metropolitan district next season under the rotation plan agreed to by the three competing districts.

A new team captain was appointed for 1925, the honor falling to Findlay S. Douglas, who recently stepped down out of the position of M. G. A. President, which he held for three consecutive terms. Douglas will succeed Oswald Kirkby, John N. Kearns Jr. of Piping Rock, one of the leaders in the Long Island district, was appointed Chairman of the Tournament Committee, the other appointees being Charles P. Eddy, Merrill K. Waters and John A. Ladds.

George A. Nicolls Jr., the association Secretary, has been named Chairman of the Handicap Committee, succeeding H. Y. Barrow, who has carried the burden for several years. He will assist him in compiling the 1925 list are E. M. Wild, R. P. Waldron and Larry A. Lloyd.

HURDLE RACE ADDED TO WILCO PROGRAM

Club Has Invited Many Stars to Participate in Special Event.

Responding to the suggestion of the officials of the Metropolitan A. A. U. that games promoters cooperate with the officials in the effort to develop hurdle racers and material in other events in which this district has failed to show to advantage in the past, the officials of the Wilco A. A. have added a special high hurdle race to the already long list of special attractions which will provide the features at the organization's fifth annual indoor athletic meet to be held in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, on Feb. 7.

The distance of the race, it was announced yesterday, will be 100 yards over five hurdles, each fence to be 3 feet 6 inches in height. The foremost local hurdlers and some of the out-of-town timber-toppers who were members of the last American Olympic team have been invited to enter the test.

Prominent among the stars invited are Dan Kinsey, University of Illinois, winner of the 110-meter high hurdle championship at the Olympic games; Ivan H. Riley, national 120-yard high hurdle champion; Carl Christiernson, Swedish champion and a place winner for Sweden in the last Olympic games; Herb Myer, national 220-yard low hurdle champion; Cadet Barkes of West Point, who established a world's record in the hurdle event at the Wilco A. A. games last Winter; Charles H. Moore, Penn State College, Intercollegiate indoor and outdoor champion, and Franklin P. Johnson of the Illinois Athletic Club, a place winner in the Olympic hurdle race and winner of the national junior high hurdle championship at West Orange last September.

KENTUCKY COLLEGES UNITE.

Four Band Together and Expect Others to Join Conference.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 23.—Organization of a Kentucky conference, patterned along the lines of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association, is virtually complete, it was announced today, following a meeting here last night of representatives of four institutions in the State. The University of Louisville, Transylvania College of Lexington, Kentucky Wesleyan College, Winchester and Western State Normal, Bowling Green, initiated the movement. Other Kentucky colleges will be asked to join the group.

Faculty committees from the four schools will act upon the by-laws prepared at last night's meeting, and acceptance of the by-laws will be reported, it is expected, at a meeting of the representatives in January.

FLANNER DIES IN THE WEST.

Sportsman Who Helped to Found the American League Succumbs.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Dec. 23.—Joe Flanner, one of the founders of the American League, died today at his home here following an extended illness. Twelve years ago Flanner came to Cincinnati and served as assistant to August Herrmann, then Chairman of the National Baseball Commission.

When Ban Johnson began to organize the American League Flanner was sports editor of a St. Louis newspaper. He assisted Johnson in establishing an American League team in the Mound City. Subsequently he was chosen assistant to Mr. Herrmann and served in that capacity until the advent of K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—Sully Montgomery of Fort Worth, Texas, former Centre College football star, lost to Jim Maloney on a foul in the third round of their scheduled ten-round boxing bout here tonight.

Maloney, who had been leading Montgomery by a comfortable margin by reason of a left jab and effective infighting, was floored after a minute of the third round had elapsed. Referee Johnny Brassil, after beginning to count, consulted Boxing Commissioner Eugene Buckley at the ringside and announced that Maloney had won on a foul. Maloney weighed 197½ pounds and Montgomery 201½.

Tom Kirby of Boston, former national amateur heavyweight champion, won from Rocky Stone, also of Boston, when the latter refused to return to the ring, claiming a foul at the beginning of the sixth round of what was to have been an eight-round bout.

Wolf Larsen, Boston light-heavyweight, knocked out Jack Hankinson of England in the third round of a scheduled eight-round preliminary. Al Mello of Lowell, welterweight member of the last American Olympic boxing team, received a close decision over Shaver O'Brien of Boston at the end of eight rounds.

HOLY CROSS HAS CLAIM.

By The Associated Press.

Analysis of Eastern intercollegiate championship honors for 1924 reveals that Holy Cross has a much stronger claim to the baseball title than Yale, which was supreme in more branches of competition than any rival over the past year.

Holy Cross, due chiefly to the great pitching of Owen Carroll, boasted an unbeaten ning which hung up a string of eighteen triumphs, including victories over Yale, Harvard, Dartmouth, Princeton, Boston College and Colgate, all among the strongest in the East. Boston College and Harvard were beaten twice by the Worcester collegians, who are coached by Jack Barry, shortstop in the famous infield of the Philadelphia Athletics a decade ago.

Yale, on the other hand, was only able to break even, winning fifteen and losing the same number of games. The Blue, however, aided by the fine pitching of Dudley Pond, lately a football hero, wound up its season with two triumphs over Harvard.

Princeton, the other member of the Big Three, shut out Yale twice and had an otherwise fine record until the Tigers stumbled against Harvard.

Balkline Challenge Matches Eliminated Till Next October

There will be no challenge match for the world's 18.2 balkline title until next October, under the rules just issued governing the championship trophy award. The tournament will be held in Chicago from Feb. 23 to March 4, and from then until any time from Oct. 1 to Oct. 10, 1925, the champion will not be asked to defend the trophy. Last season the rules stipulated that the champion must defend his title three times in a challenge match. Willie Hoppe, who retained his title by winning the play-off from Welker Cochran, defended his title in challenge matches against Cochran, Young Jake Schaefer and Edouard Horemans. The Cochran and Schaefer matches were played last January and within two weeks of each other. The Horemans match was played last April.

CONTI GAINS FINAL, DEFEATS DERBIER

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Roger Conti, French expert, tonight defeated Edmond Derbier, the French champion, in the European 18.2 balkline championship billiard contest, winning his fourth straight match of the tournament, 500 to 130. His grand average is 66.66 for 2,000 points, including three unfinished runs of 472, 296, 295.

Conti will meet Felix Grange in the final match tomorrow. While Conti has won four games and lost none, Grange has won three and lost one.

Winner to Play Mare.

In the event that Conti defeats Grange in the final game for the European 18.2 balkline title in Paris tonight he will be selected to play in the world's balkline championship in Chicago in February. It will mark the fourth straight time that he has competed here for international honors. The best showing he made was in 1923, when he gained a tie for second place with Young Jake Schaefer.

The billiard officials, who announced the plans yesterday for the world's tournament, stated that seven players would compete. While the names of the players have not been announced, the same field which took part last year is virtually certain to form the first six this season, with the seventh player coming from the junior 18.2 balkline ranks. The probable field will be Willie Hoppe, the present holder of the world's title; Walker Cochran, who finished second last year; Young Jake Schaefer, Edouard Horemans, the Belgian champion; Erich Hagenlacher, German champion, and Conti. That is the order in which the above-named players finished in the 1923 tournament, which was played at the Hotel Pennsylvania here.

The seventh player will be the one who holds the junior championship at the time the international tournament is played. David McAndless holds the title now, but he will be asked to defend it against Tadao Sugamuna next week. The last challenge match before the world's tournament will be between the winner of the McAndless-Sugamuna match and K. Suzuki, professional champion of Japan. The winner of that match will be the choice for seventh place in the international field.

The remarkable playing of Conti continues to surprise balkline followers. For his first 1,000 points in the present European tournament he turned in a grand average of 111 and for the next 1,000 points, which included two 500-point games, he averaged a fraction over 83. He has compiled his 2,000 points in thirty innings. If he can keep up this form against Grange he is certain to set a world's record for a grand average for a championship tournament. The present record is 81.36, made by Schaefer in the 1921 Chicago tournament. Hoppe held the mark previous to Schaefer's performance, turning in a record of 46.28 in the championship tournament here in 1916.

Conti will face a severe test against Grange. The latter, who won the French championship tournament a year ago only to lose the title in a challenge match to Derbier, got away to a bad start in the present tourney by losing the first game to Fouquet, 500 to 304, in which Fouquet made a high run of 235. But Grange's most important victory was over Derbier on Monday night, when he won by 500 to 407, making his total in ten innings. Grange had a high run of 213, but Derbier contributed the second high run of the tournament when he made a 305. Derbier made a run of 294 in his victorious match against Fouquet. Fouquet defeated Hackenbosch, the Belgian, on Monday afternoon by 500 to 376, making his total in twenty-two innings.

NURMI'S FIGURE ON MEDALS.

The Finnish-American A. C. indoor athletic meet, to be held in Madison Square Garden on Jan. 6, will witness a revival of an ancient Greek custom in honoring Olympic heroes, in the design of the medal prepared by Colonel Charles J. Diggs, veteran athletic official, and adopted by the Finnish-American A. C. as the design for the prizes the organization will award at its meet.

The medal shows a splendid likeness of Paavo Nurmi, Finland's remarkable runner, in action with a background relieved by entwining laurel, showing the shields of this country and Finland. The figure of Nurmi is copied from life and indicates the runner's inimitable style. In anticipation of world's record performances the committee in charge of the games has also adopted a special world's record medal to be awarded for each record broken at the games.

OTHER BILLIARD RESULTS.

Joseph Concannon, playing for Brooklyn, registered his third and fourth straight victories over Charles Harmon of this city yesterday in the competition of play in the National Championship Forest Billiard League at Lawler Brothers' Academy here. Concannon defeated Harmon in both afternoon and evening games. Concannon took the afternoon game by 100 to 62 in thirty-nine innings, making a high run of 44 against Harmon's highest run of 10. In the evening Concannon was the winner by a count of 100 to 80 in twenty-seven innings. Concannon had a high run of 28 and Harmon one of 15.

In the New York section of the N. A. A. B. P. 14.2 balkline championship tournament at Lawler's two games were played. S. Berkowitz defeated R. Edge by a score of 125 to 60 in eighteen innings, making an average of 6 17-18, with a high run of 20. C. J. Davis defeated A. J. Quinn in the other game by a score of 125 to 96 in thirty-three innings. Davis had a high run of 22 and Quinn's highest cluster was 11.

In an exhibition game at 18.2 balkline played last night at the Fourteenth Street Billiard Academy, Erich Hagenlacher, 18.2 champion of Germany, defeated Jack Savage, 250 to 14. Hagenlacher had a high run of 126 and an unfinished run of 98, going out in four innings.

F. Stern defeated George Johann last night in the handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at Daly's Academy by a score of 250 to 172. Stern had a high run of 36, with an average of 7 29-47. Johann's high run was 21.

In a special 100-point pocket billiard match at the same academy C. Lauri defeated P. Natalie by a score of 100 to 7 in thirty-five innings. Lauri had a high run of 17 and Natalie one of 14.

Jack Greenberg defeated H. Weinstein last night in their pocket billiards match at the College Inn Academy by the score of 75 to 60 in thirty-eight innings. Greenberg had a high run of 14. Weinstein had a run of 12.

COPULOS NOW IN TIE FOR 3-CUSHION LEAD

Is on Even Terms With Cannefax With Record of 20 Victories and 8 Defeats.

TO SET JUNIOR TITLE DATES

McAndless, Defending Champion, Expected to Announce Them Today—Other Cue News.

Gus Copulos of Detroit has advanced into a tie with Bob Cannefax, the world's champion, for the lead in the National Championship Three-Cushion League race. Each has won twenty games and lost eight. Tiff Denton, who surprised by taking two games from Cannefax in Kansas City last week, is in third place. Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia has begun to show the form that carried him into the Big Four division last year. Reiselt, after a poor start, has climbed into fourth place with a record of fourteen games won and ten lost. Johnny Layton is in fifth place.

Augie Kleckhefer of Chicago is the occupant of sixth place and Clarence Jackson of Buffalo is seventh. Charles Hall of St. Louis, a former amateur three-cushion star in the Middle West, has been selected to replace Pierre Maupome of Chicago. Maupome was forced to withdraw last week on account of ill health and is on his way to his home in Mexico City. Hall, who will start with the standings left by Maupome, is in eighth place, with eleven games won and as many lost.

The next league game in this city will be played at the Strand on Jan. 7, when Layton and Cannefax clash in two fifty-point contests.

The standings of the players, with the games won and lost, the high runs and best games, follow:

	Won.	Lost.	H.R.	B.G.

Copulos, Detroit	20	8	6	40

David McAndless, holder of the national junior 18.2 balkline title, is expected to announce today the dates and the city for the challenge match for the junior championship. Under the agreement between McAndless and Albert Cutler, the defeated champion, the winner agreed to meet Tadao Sugamuna of Japan before the end of December. The probable dates now are Dec. 30 and 31. The match will be at 1,200 points in three blocks of 400 points each.

Willie Hoppe, balkline champion, and Bob Cannefax, three-cushion champion, will meet on Friday to discuss final terms and post forfeits for their two matches at three cushions. It was announced by Hoppe yesterday. Cannefax was scheduled to reach here yesterday from Chicago, but when he had been detained and Hoppe immediately changed the date for the meeting.

James Maturo and Alfredo de Oro will meet in a 50-point game of three-cushions in the feature match at the opening of the new Kreuter Billiard Academy, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway, tonight. Louis Kreuter, the owner, is a former pocket billiard and three-cushion star, who also announced that he had arranged to return to the game and will meet one of the leading three-cushion stars at his academy on Saturday night.

N. Y. U. NAMES CHESS TEAM.

Kleiman to Lead Violet in Title Tourney—Kabataky to Play.

Three members of last year's New York University chess team, which finished second to City College in the Intercollegiate Chess League, are in line again for the forthcoming twenty-sixth annual tournament to be held at the room of the Stuyvesant Chess Club on the first three days of next week. Hyman Kabataky, who played first board for the Violet in 1923, is again available, despite recent fears that he might not play. M. Kleiman will captain the team, and the other two places will be filled by D. Gladstone and Leon Brown.

Besides City College, teams will be sent to New York by Cornell, Pennsylvania, the University of Buffalo and Canisius College. In order to lighten somewhat the schedule of five rounds for three days, it is planned to bring Cornell and Pennsylvania together Saturday afternoon.

Word was received yesterday from Lambox F. Beach Jr., President of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Chess Club, that it will be impossible to send an M. I. T. team to the intercollegiate meeting. Membership in the league will be retained with the object of entering a year hence.

NEW CHAMPION TO BOX.

Boxing followers of Philadelphia will have the opportunity of seeing Eddie (Cannonball) Martin, Brooklyn's aggressive Italian, in his first bout as world featherweight champion. It was announced yesterday when articles were signed for a bout between Martin and Tommy Murray, Philadelphia bantamweight, to be held under the promotion of Jules Aronson at the Ipa Palace, Philadelphia, Jan. 12. The contest will be for ten rounds to a decision.

HELPING THE COURTS.

In general, the best way to help the Judges in American courts is to let them alone. The Supreme Court of the United States in particular, so far as it figured in this year's Presidential election, was voted by the people to be doing very well as it is. Some of the proposals to change its procedure and add to its labors, while doubtless well meant, recall too vividly the offer of the kindly elephant to sit on the eggs of the hen which was troubled because they would not hatch. The Supreme Court itself is probably the best judge of the kind of aid it needs. Chief Justice TAFT has been urging upon committees of Congress certain changes in the law which would prevent so many cases of all kinds being taken to the Supreme Court that its calendar is heavily clogged.

Of Federal Judges as a whole it may be said that they are poorly paid for the work which they do, especially in comparison with the salaries received by Judges of State courts. At present, a District Judge of the United States in the City of New York receives $7,500. A brother Judge of his who happens to sit in the State Supreme Court, though having to face about the same scale of living conditions, gets $17,500. A bill now before the Senate Judiciary Committee proposes moderate increases in the salaries of Federal Judges. Their work is yearly becoming more important and exacting. Fortunately, able men have usually been found willing to take the credit of these dignified judicial positions and let the cash go; but the sacrifice asked of them is one which a rich Government ought to be ashamed to demand.

Another way of helping the courts is to facilitate, not to hinder, the selection of competent men for the bench. This means that politicians ought to be required to keep their hands off judicial appointments. If Judgeships are to be thought of mainly as party spoils, the deterioration of the courts, with a decrease in public respect for them, will be inevitable. A case in point is right here in this Federal District. A Judge is to be chosen to succeed Mr. Justice HAND, worthily promoted to the Circuit Court. It is understood that Attorney General STONE has interested himself in the naming of a fit successor, but that certain men powerful in Republican politics are insisting upon giving preference to some candidate of their own. It is to be hoped that President COOLIDGE will see the necessity of taking the advice of the Attorney General in this matter, or at least of refusing to have a judicial nomination foisted upon him by men whose first thought is politics. The best men that can be got to go upon the bench will supply the best means of raising the courts in the estimation of the people.

NEUTRALITY AND THE LEAGUE.

STRESEMANN'S note with regard to Germany's military and economic obligations under Article XVI., in case she becomes a member of the League of Nations, is no more than a restatement of the stipulation which he made last September when the idea was broached, and which Count KESSLER, his official representative at Geneva, developed in interviews with the newspaper correspondents. Germany has been historically "the battleground of Europe." Being now disarmed, and intent only upon economic rehabilitation, the first article in her foreign policy is neutrality. The doctrine that she shall stand apart from the broils of her neighbors has a historic background far more extended than our Monroe Doctrine, incomparably greater. The danger points, which STRESEMANN all but names, lie on both borders—France, Poland and Czechoslovakia, with Russia looming in the background. "In most conceivable League wars," his note says, "Germany would be absolutely predestined as the scene of conflict." He adds that neutrality is "the last defense of a disarmed people." To join in military and economic sanctions, even to permit her territory to be crossed by League forces, might place Germany at the mercy of enemy nations armed with modern weapons.

It is a strange plea, coming from the Goliath of ten years ago. But is it more strange than American trepidation at the bare thought of "entanglement"? Though separated by the Atlantic Ocean from the dagger-drawn rivalries of Europe, we made reservations no less drastic against Articles X. and XVI. When that course was barred, we stood apart from our late allies, and still find no means of official cooperation. Yet there is a logic in the situation deeper than the written words of any covenant. Germany is a member of the family of nations, and the first requisite of the economic rehabilitation upon which she has set her heart is the peace which can only come through cooperation. It was of her own motion that she made overtures to the League last September. Manifestly genuine as is the case which she now states, it is only in part addressed to the nations of the League. Chiefly it is intended for home consumption. The result may be a certain delay. The prediction that Germany would become a member before the next Assembly in September may not be fulfilled. But the chances are that a means will be found, and with no waste of time, to accede to her reservations. For as Germany needs the League, the League needs Germany.

Once more the question arises of Articles X. and XVI. The outstanding fact is that, up to the present, the League sanctions have never operated. Through all the broils of five years—territorial aggressions and, it must be added, breaches of the covenant—there have been no "automatic" military undertakings, no economic boycotts. Through two years at Geneva, the main effort was to tone down the articles. That failing, a contrary effort is now making, highly intelligent and passionately sincere, to expand the actual, operating League to the dimensions of those articles, thus effectively outlawing war. Either result would be better than the present uncertainty.

Possibly the solution of the German problem will await the outcome of this long striving. But whether the sanctions are made good or whether the slower process is adopted of insuring peace through the upbuilding of international justice and world opinion, the manifest destiny of Germany, and of some other nations, is to enter the League.

OUR NAVAL AIR FORCE.

Before a House subcommittee on Monday both Secretary WILBUR and Rear Admiral MOFFETT opposed a united air service for the army and navy. The proposal has more advocates among the land than in the sea forces. Never can the Army Air Corps forget that the German battleship Ostfriesland was sent to the bottom by their bombing planes. Yet, all that can be contended for the achievement is that army aviators must play a part in coast defense. In war many airplanes would also be needed to guard the coast. The most available machines from both services would be used when enemy ships appeared. The British Air Ministry is not an unqualified success. The Admiralty's view is that aircraft are not really a rival to surface sea-power, but an auxiliary. The demand of the navy for unhampered control of the fleet air arm is insistent. British naval men contend that the rôle of aircraft is defensive much more than offensive. One authority questions whether airplanes could ordinarily attack effectively "amid the vapors, smoke-screens, and the highly mobile evolutions of a modern fleet action." Captain T. T. CRAVEN of the United States Navy maintains:

> Only through close cooperation with ships, and in conjunction with ships (battleships, cruisers, destroyers, submarines, auxiliaries), can the development of the usefulness and the needs of the naval aviation army proceed.

Rear Admiral MOFFETT has on several occasions argued that a united air service would cramp the activities of the navy and have doubtful tactical value. On May 26 he said:

> Referring to the question of possible duplication in training and experimentation, there is very little duplication. Teaching a man to fly is but a small part of the training necessary. The Navy Department's policy is first to train the man to be a naval officer. He spends four years at the Naval Academy, and then goes to sea with the fleet for three years to acquire the practical naval training deemed necessary before he is eligible to take up the additional training to become a naval aviator. * * * Please note that we consider that it takes about eight years to make an efficient naval pilot. The training, therefore, is fundamentally different from that of the Army Air Service.
> On shore, the Admiral admits, "a certain amount of overhead could be eliminated and a certain amount of economy obtained" by putting the army and navy paper administration in the same group of buildings. Parts and supplies for both services could be bought in quantity and distributed. But "the net result" (of combining the two services) "would be inefficiency, and, in some cases, a veritable Tower of Babel condition."

In his remarks on Monday Admiral MOFFETT was most concerned about the equipment of the naval aviators. Only 224 planes of a really modern type are available out of a total of 875. Of the skill of the pilots he was very proud. "It will take the others a long time to catch up," he said. Probably the French and British Admiralties have as good an opinion of their own aviators. A navy with the best machines, swift and durable, would have an advantage. All the obsolescent American planes should gradually be replaced. On the island of Culebra during the manoeuvres last February many useless airplanes were parked. What the navy needs even more than extra modern planes is well-armed carriers of superior speed. As Great Britain has faster carriers than the Langley, we are really behind in the air.

PROHIBITION IN NEW JERSEY.

There is a great row, personal and political, between Senator EDGE and the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League. The little interchanges of amenities between the Senator and the State Superintendent of the League, however instructive to polite letter writers, are merely byplay. The Weehawken scandal brought the old troubles to a head. League representatives brought against Mr. WINNE, the United States Attorney, more or less vague charges of inefficient enforcement of the Volstead act. Mr. VAN RIPER, the Assistant United States Attorney, was forbidden by Mrs. WILLEBRANDT, Assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition enforcement, to take any part in liquor cases, the charges against him coming from the same source. Attorney General STONE has done the right thing by ordering an investigation.

It is right that determination of the facts should succeed passionate controversy. Justice to the two officials requires it. A larger justice to the people of New Jersey requires it. As between Wet and Dry it has been shown conclusively more than once with which side the majority of both parties sympathizes. Of the necessity and duty of enforcing the Volstead act there can be but one opinion, outside the ranks of the rum-running and bootlegging squads. To the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League also justice should be done, even if it has too often seemed a maker and disseminator of feverish and hasty judgments. The authoritative opinion of the senior Circuit Judges and the Chief Justice of the United States in regard to the disposition of liquor cases is known. It is one of the ingenious little peculiarities of the Anti-Saloon League that it regards itself as called to sit in judgment upon Judges and United States Attorneys, to make itself the infallible court of review and appeal.

It is suspected by a considerable part of the public that trained lawyers and Judges may be more competent in these matters than the well-meaning but perfervid evangelists of prohibition. To them its enforcement is matter of faith, morals, religion, not of law, fact and common sense. If the New Jersey Anti-Saloon League can demonstrate to impartial authority and to the public that it is accidentally right for once, it will confound its enemies and acquire merit.

RECONSTRUCTION TRIALS.

It is good news that Hungary is recovering more rapidly than had been expected. Yet particular attention should be paid to the warning of the League's Commissioner General in Hungary, Mr. JEREMIAH SMITH Jr., that the increased revenues during the last three months are due largely to seasonal conditions and should not be taken as proof that they will continue on the same scale during the later months. Hungary is primarily an agricultural country. This makes her a large importer, but gives her the greatest surplus of cash after the harvest season.

Mr. SMITH'S warning is meant, of course, for Hungarian consumption. But it is of interest to the world because it is a recognition of one of the greatest difficulties in the work of economic rehabilitation, making the politicians see that increased revenues do not in themselves justify departure from the policy of drastically cutting expenditures. This was the trouble which was found in Austria and which will undoubtedly appear soon in Germany.

The rehabilitation schemes—whether the League's plan for Austria and Hungary or the Dawes plan for Germany—have as their primary purpose not only the balancing of budgets but the reduction of expenses to such an extent that good surpluses may be laid aside in order to reduce the nation's debt. Increase in revenues comes from increased taxes—a method which hits the people at large. Decreased expenditures come from reducing the Government personnel—a method which hits the politicians in particular. Hence they look with distaste on those provisions of the reconstruction plans which call for the discharge of State employes—whether they be soldiers or railroad functionaries or clerks in the Government bureaus. Austria, Hungary and Germany all made drastic reductions at the beginning. But no sooner did the revenues exceed the expenses than they found it extremely difficult to carry out the reduction program. The reason is human and political. It is hard to have to tell a man who has spent his life working for his Government, and during the last six years has lived in great poverty and discomfort, that he is no longer wanted. Unfortunately, there is no other way out. Cutting down expenses is essential if the rehabilitated countries are to be restored to financial sanity. Only by constant supervision on the part of Dr. ZIMMERMAN in Austria, Mr. SMITH in Hungary and Mr. GILBERT in Germany will the economy programs be carried out.

POSTAL FACTS AND POLICIES.

Hearings before the Senate committee on the Sterling Postal bill will probably bring out further evidence that Senators in general are unfamiliar with its actual provisions. Senator CARAWAY asked last week if it did not increase the zone rates. Mr. STERLING admitted that its effect was "slightly to increase the zone rates" on newspapers. But if he regards an increase of 100 per cent. in the first two zones on the advertising contents of newspapers and of 66 2-3 per cent. in the third zone as "slight," he is hardly competent to enlighten other Senators. More than 90 per cent. of newspaper subscriptions are distributed within those three zones.

Even more important is the determination of the framers of the bill to perpetuate Postmaster General BURLESON'S distinction between news and advertising. The newspaper is an integral whole. Advertising is news, and the reader regards it as such. The exchange of information through advertising serves as useful a function as the exchange of information about prices in the stock or grain markets. Classified advertisements give news just as truly as do announcements of the sailings of vessels, of concerts and the theatres.

Senator STERLING might generously offer to allow news matter to go free through the mails, but if the rates on the accompanying advertising were to be raised in all zones to what they are now in the eighth zone, namely, 10 cents a pound, the newspaper would be effectively excluded from the post offices. A steamship company might as logically offer to carry cocoanut milk free when contained within the nut while raising the rates on the shell to impossible levels.

The Senate committee might well reread the message in which WOODROW WILSON vetoed a proposal for an increase in postal rates on magazines. He said:

> It must be that those who are proposing this change of rates do not comprehend the effect it would have. A tax upon the business of the more widely circulated magazines and periodicals would be a tax upon their means of living and performing their functions.
>
> They obtain their circulation by their direct appeal to the popular thought. Their circulation attracts advertisers. Their advertisements enable them to pay their writers and to enlarge their enterprise and influence.
>
> This proposed new postal rate would be a direct tax and a very serious one upon the formation and expression of opinion—its more deliberate formation and expression—just at a time when opinion is concerning itself actively and effectively with the deepest problems of our politics and our social life.
> To make such a change now, whatever its intentions in the minds of those who propose it, would be to attack and embarrass the free processes of opinion. Surely sober second thought will prevent any such mischievous blunder.

The Sterling bill would deprive the public of information. Only a few of the largest metropolitan newspapers can obtain and print the full texts of important public documents. If postal rates are made prohibitive, leaders of opinion in communities away from the larger cities who now subscribe for newspapers will not be able to get such information. The Senate hearings will be useful if they elicit the simple facts of a situation which has been much obscured—that advertising and news are inseparable. The public policy involved is not new. GEORGE WASHINGTON, in his annual message to Congress in 1792, remarked:

> It is represented that some provisions in the law which establishes the post office operate, in experiment, against the transmission of newspapers to distant parts of the country. Should this upon due inquiry be found to be the fact, a full conviction of the importance of facilitating the circulation of political intelligence and information will, I doubt not, lead to the application of a remedy.

A CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATOR.

There are losses for all our gains, as the meter prevented Mr. R. H. STODDARD from saying. A young gentleman whose Asiatic campaign made Wall Street tremble and garnered spoils that put to shame men of little faith in that cynical capital of evil, turning his genius in Paris to aleatory transactions in "bac" and other sinful games, candidly confesses defeat. He is now convinced that he has "a better chance speculating in Wall Street" than in playing baccarat." That is an opinion which we may be forgiven for doubting; but he calls the Paris games perfectly fair, and records some of the modest triumphs that preceded his Waterloo:

> He admitted it was true that he won 2,000,000 francs in Monte Carlo last Winter. He intimated that it was a conservative estimate.

As philosophical a worshiper of Fortune as CHARLES FOX, he must have had a deal of pleasure; but, as becomes a young American, he puffs the jade away. After New Year's he will come over here and "get a job." His studies of Chance are ended forever. There are plenty of opportunities here for a youth who seems remarkably endowed with the imagination necessary to the poet, the mathematician and the political or social statistician. The multitude of American versesmiths has caused too cruel a competition. Mr. BERTRAND RUSSELL has been as cruel to mathematicians. For calculators, not in BUNKER'S disparaging sense but inspired makers of "conservative estimates," this is the paradise. Senator BROOKHART, for instance, and Senator LA FOLLETTE need expert assistance. They have too many other duties to permit them to give as much attention as it deserves to the statistical department. Of the "billions" of "water" in railroad securities, the "billions" squeezed out of the farmers by oppressive deflation, the "billions" exacted by "privilege" from the people, the divers collections of "billions" wrung from the heart of toil, they can make but too cold and hasty estimates. They would welcome the services of a trained conservative estimator.

WIDE RESPONSE TO A WIDE APPEAL.

Gratification over the now assured fact that the Hundred Neediest Cases Fund this year will substantially overtop that of 1923 is made all the keener by the way in which the gifts have flowed in. Absolutely without personal solicitation, as the rule of THE TIMES in this matter has always been, the setting forth of the unadorned facts and the unquestioned need has been sufficient. It is an especial pleasure to note from what various sources and in what differing sums the money has come. Moreover, the appeal has met with many responses far outside New York. One contributor from North Carolina wrote the other day that his first impulse was to leave New York to take care of her own poor, since no obligation could lie upon one so many miles distant as he was. But his continued reading about the Hundred Neediest Cases at last left him with the feeling that he could not sit down in comfort to his own Christmas dinner without first having done something to help one of the unfortunates. An English writer used to dwell upon "joy in widest commonalty spread." Wide sympathies and humane instincts are even better. The evidence of their existence brought out by the success of the appeal for the Neediest Cases Fund this year is both heartening for the present and encouraging for the future.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Full Safety Available to Everybody.

Quite properly, our municipal health authorities, in what they say about typhoid cases, carefully refrain from giving the idea that there is an epidemic of the disease. Really there is not, for the number of patients must be considered in relation to the millions constituting the population of Greater New York. Just the same, the situation is not without its seriousness, and this it might be well for the Health Department to emphasize a little more than it has done.

It might, for instance, take more care that the nature of typhoid and its methods of transmission were made known to everybody, and to this information might be added explicit instructions as to avoidance and prevention. There is some difficulty, too, in seeing why there are not as vigorous exhortations for people to protect themselves at a time like this by anti-typhoid and para-typhoid inoculation as there would be for vaccination if there were in the city many less than 400 cases of smallpox.

In the one disease as in the other medical science can insure a close approach to absolute safety from infection, and in neither is the required "operation" one to be at all dreaded. The reaction from typhoid and para-typhoid inoculation is not exactly pleasant—it means one rather feverish and unpleasant day—but what is that in comparison with an illness which, when once well started, is of great severity in the more serious cases and dangerous even in the mild ones? What was done for most of the armies in the World War as regards this disease, that once was the terror of every military campaign, can as well be done for any civilian group, large or small.

First Find Source of Infection.

As to the origin of the typhoid cases now in the city, there still is room for doubt, but suspicion is steadily centring more and more on shellfish, and especially on raw oysters. Constant inspection of the city water and milk apparently has eliminated those two ordinary sources of typhoid infection, as daily examination of both has proved them free of the typhoid bacillus. As for the oysters, they, too, so far as the many tests made have revealed, are uninfected, but in a significant number of cases the disease has followed two or three weeks after eating these molluscs in the uncooked form, and while in medicine, as elsewhere, "afterward" is not interchangeable with "because," yet when the sequence is sufficiently frequent a real probability comes to be established.

As Dr. ROBERT T. MORRIS—a high authority—pointed out in a letter printed on this page yesterday, oysters as they come from their native beds in real salt water never, so far as known, are infected. They become dangerous only when they have been "whitened" in brackish or fresh water which carries the bacillus. This process, though it often has been denounced and in certain conditions is illegal, is very general. It is done because it improves the appearance of the oysters and also makes a given number of them measure more after they have been taken from the shell.

Another possible source of danger, Dr. MORRIS wrote, is the big piece of ice which in so many restaurants rests on the pile of oysters still in their shells. Ice sometimes carries typhoid germs, and when it does they can be transferred to the oysters on which it rests.

No really effective precautions against typhoid fever can be taken until its origin in any instance has been discovered and made known. That, unfortunately, has not been done yet here this time, and to finding the source the health authorities should devote and presumably are devoting all their energy and skill.

At Least He Is Plausible.

MICHEL ARLEN, the newly bloomed and very smart young Londoner of Armenian blood, makes in one of his recent books the statement that nothing is to be learned about women from what men say of them, but that what women say of men always is highly and accurately informative.

Whether that generalization is false, as all generalizations long ago were said to be, including the one that called them all false, is a question of no great importance. Yet the assertion does have a sort of superficial plausibility, for it is of common knowledge that a man's description of a woman and his estimate of her character depend considerably less on the facts than upon the entirely irrelevant emotions which she may have excited in him. And he is about equally likely to be mistaken when attracted and when repelled. It may be that women view their opposites with clearer, less disturbed eyes, and it is not hard to believe that they do.

After all, whoever says either "men" or "women" says nothing. Anything may be true of individuals in either group, but nothing is true of all in either, and that is what makes so untrustworthy epigrams of the sort which the writer under consideration is so fond of making.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When I received the other day the late Maurice Francis Egan's recently published "Recollections of a Happy Life" I turned first to see how he treated the unfortunate episode of Dr. Cook and the North Pole, for I have still in mind an incident which occurred on Wednesday, Sept. 8, 1909.

That afternoon I was on my way to the American Legation at Copenhagen to attend a reception which our Minister was giving in honor of Dr. Cook, momentarily the lion of the Danish capital. Just as I was entering New Market Square I met George Brandes, who proposed that we take a cup of tea on the terrace of the Hotel d'Angleterre; and when he learned my objective he informed me that on Sunday he had dined with Dr. Cook at the legation, and then he added:

"Since then I have learned something which I think Dr. Egan ought to know. You perceive that our Foreign Office, across the square there, is not decorated with the American flag, or the Danish flag either, for that matter, though in the rest of the town and on the other Government buildings the opposite is the case. Well, I have just heard on the best authority that last night our Foreign Office received a telegram from our chief official at the Faroe Islands stating that when Cook went north last year he passed a bad check on one of the local banks there."

A half hour later I was presented in Dr. Egan's crowded drawing room to the son of the Danish Minister of Foreign Affairs and I asked for confirmation of Dr. Brandes's statement, without, however, revealing the name of my informant. But the young man knew nothing about it. A few minutes thereafter, while I was still standing in the drawing room, I noticed Dr. Egan beckoning to me from the dining room, where he was entertaining some ladies at the buffet. I went to him, when he said in a rather sharp tone of voice:

"Mr. Stanton, that is a pretty bold accusation which you have just made in my house concerning my chief guest. Who is the authority for such a compromising charge?"

"A friend of yours and one of the most distinguished literary men in Denmark," was my reply.

Of course Dr. Egan found himself in a most awkward position a few days later, and his account of the unfortunate Cook affair in his "Recollections" is rather apologetic, and between the lines you can read his natural vexation over it.

Why would it not be a good idea to legalize jay-walking? For, since it is conceded that most of the motor accidents to pedestrians occur at street corners, it follows as the night the day that the only really safe place at which to cross the street is in the middle of the block. There at least there is no danger from vehicles swinging around the corners. Thus: The other day as I was crossing Fifth Avenue from the east, obeying the signal for crosstown traffic to proceed, and casting a wary eye to my left to avoid any cars turning into the avenue from the east to go north, I was struck with neatness and dispatch by a car coming down Fifth Avenue and turning east. Now, if one can't cross safely when the traffic is halted, what's the use? I suggest that when the traffic is held up at the crossings it be also halted in the middle of the block, leaving a narrow lane through which foot passengers could pass. If necessary, a policeman could be placed in charge of this crossing instead of having several at the corners. Here one would have but to watch in two directions; at the corners it is necessary to look in four ways at once.

O. HENRY IN MADISON SQUARE.

The Tree of Light is all aglow; the Star
Throws its bright beams afar;
And for one night the City drops its mask,
Forgets its selfish strife—its sordid task,
And is a Child again.

We let our hearts appear,
And wear them on our sleeves.
Oh, if tonight
The Great Unknown might deign
To let you walk among us as of yore,
Using in our behalf your magic lore,

Who shall interpret them, who bear the scorn
Of Fortune's darlings through the painful year?
O great Interpreter! Appear—appear!
I seem to sense a ghostly Presence here—
A Shadow that is like the Friend we knew;
He sits beside that wretched, ill-clad boy,
Whose shoes are worn from looking for a job;
He bends above that pitiful young girl,
He strives to tell the world their moving tale—
Explain their failure—exculpate their sin;
He knows all, so forgives all; he can win
That boy—that girl—shall bow their heads to Fate!

Ah, no; I do but dream. The hour is past.
Such visions do not last;
I, too, shall don my mask—conceal my heart;
And coldly play my self-appointed part
Only on Christmas Eve
Do living spirits yearn, departed spirits grieve!

STATE DEPARTMENT EDITOR.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Dec. 23 Tyler Dennett will assume the position of Editor of the Department of State, left vacant by the death, last Spring, of Gaillard Hunt, and recently filled by Harry S. Dwight, who has resigned.

Whatever controversies the conduct of public business by Secretary Hughes may have caused, there has never been any question about the excellence of his appointments within the department and his selections in the diplomatic field. The appointment of Mr. Dennett as Editor is in line with the Secretary's previous record of efficient choices.

The position of Editor of the Department of State is of great importance, for it is through him, probably more than any other part of the department, except possibly the Passport Bureau, that the American public comes into contact with it. The Division of Publications, of which he is chief, has custody of the laws, treaties, proclamations and executive orders, and prepares the official editions of laws of the United States. It distributes these to the public and authenticates them for official and other purposes. Aside from these routine duties, the Editor's position makes him practically the official historian of American foreign relations. It is in this capacity that Mr. Dennett is a particularly fortunate selection. No living American has done better work in the diplomatic archives than has Mr. Dennett, as his book, "Americans in Eastern Asia," testifies. Henceforth it will be he who grants to the researcher the right to consult the archives.

The Editor prepares the volumes of annual diplomatic correspondence, which are indispensable to the careful student of American affairs. The series of "Foreign Relations" has got so far behind that one could get up a good argument that the delay amounts to a suppression of information and of "secret diplomacy." The last volume published is for 1914, though 1915 has long been in type, and compiling is much further advanced.

This is not the place to go into the reasons for this delay, except to say that it is not the fault of the Department of State. The position of Editor was created for Mr. Hunt in order that he could prepare a worthy diplomatic history of the World War from the official records, illustrated with facsimiles of important documents. The concurrent publication of "Foreign Relations" was dependent upon the contents of that history, which runs parallel with the customary volumes.

Lack of cooperation in that project on the part of Congress and the Public Printer held it up and discouraged Mr. Hunt through several years. When he died, however, he had the satisfaction of knowing that the course was apparently clear, and he was planning to make up for lost time. Under Mr. Dennett, the work of publication will undoubtedly be pushed to rapid completion.

Gompers and Prison Labor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At this time when the death of Samuel Gompers has centred public thought on his great service to his fellow-workers it is only fitting to point out that Mr. Gompers also rendered signal service to the cause of the most unfortunate of all workers, the men who labor in prison.

From the time of its organization Mr. Gompers was the warm friend of the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor. He kept closely in touch with our work and was never sparing in advice and encouragement. He was also a stanch supporter of the principle—which is basic to the work of our committee—that prisoners must be employed in the production of supplies for use in State institutions and departments and that they must be paid for their work.

During the International Labor Conference of the Paris Peace Conference in 1919 Mr. Gompers brought forward the prison labor problem, establishing it as an international labor problem. For this service the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor gave Mr. Gompers one of its medals for distinguished service in prison work.

Mr. Gompers's last contribution to the prison work was in calling at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor in February of this year a conference as a result of which the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor approved the broad program for the adequate development of prisons industries and the marketing of prison products and called upon State Federations and cooperating organizations to bring about its adoption.

The first program published by the National Committee on Prisons and Prison Labor received from Mr. Gompers the commendation "Well done." No words could better express the service that Mr. Gompers himself rendered to our work to bring about sane, practical and humane conditions in the prisons throughout this country.

The Founding of the Harvard Club.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reading an editorial last week upon the late August Belmont, I was quite a bit amazed to find the statement that "he was said to have founded the Harvard Club." As it happened, on the wall just above my desk hangs a framed copy of the original statement concerning the founding of the Harvard Club (New York) with a full list of the officers and organizing members. The date of its organization was 1865, at which time Mr. Belmont would have been 12 years old. Samuel Osgood, D. D. (my father), was the first President, and such men as George Bancroft, Joseph H. Choate, Willard Parker, M.D., John O. Sargent, Francis Howland, George Blagden and Henry Whitney Bellows were among the charter members. It is after all a matter of slight importance perhaps, but the statement seemed to me so far fetched that as I looked over my desk the evidence spoke for itself, and so I write.

Throwing Refuse on the Streets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE NEW YORK TIMES is such an influential paper I am wondering if it could not support a movement with all of the other New York and Brooklyn papers to stop the throwing of scraps of paper, newspapers—in fact, anything, on the streets. My idea is that if all newspapers should print daily not only the law on the subject but state that it is the only way to keep our city clean, it would have the effect desired. Now it is done only in English and signified on the cans in the streets. This is not sufficient. There are no tops on the wagons of the private ashmen. One never sees the sidewalks washed in the morning.

The Isle of Pines.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In today's TIMES, in an article devoted to the Hay-Quesada Treaty, the writer devotes considerable space to methods and the propriety of alienation of "a portion of the public domain." The Isle of Pines is not and never has been part of the public domain of the United States. The Supreme Court of the United States has held that the island is de jure Cuban, and the proposed treaty does nothing other than to confirm this title.

HISTORY IN OUR SCHOOLS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The resolution adopted by the General Society of Mayflower Descendants on Saturday and published in this morning's TIMES echoes a sentiment entertained by many outside of that organization who are more backward in giving it utterance, and may hardly serve its avowed purpose of calling the attention of thoughtful citizens to "the cunningly conducted pacifist propaganda that raises its head from time to time in various sections of the country" and "threatens the well-being of our Republic."

Not the least, although possibly the last, item in the propaganda which the Mayflower Society asserts its intention to combat militantly is the so-called "education plan calculated to maintain world peace," by which Dr. David Starr Jordan has won the $25,000 prize donated by Raphael Herman of Washington.

This plan is chiefly characterized by its condemnation of the current method of teaching history, pursuant to which "in nearly all textbooks and school readers war has been glorified, its bravuries being set forth as the acme of heroism," and the youth of the land for generations past have been taught "that war is in itself heroic" and "that victory is a noble aim."

Dr. Jordan is of the opinion that this is all wrong. He is for "training youth in world amity," and as a means to that end he makes the suggestion that "children may be brought to sympathize with life in other lands through the promotion of correspondence between the youth of nation and nation." We are asked to believe that that will do the trick, provided, of course, such nonsense is left out of history books as Nelson's battle-signal at Trafalgar, Lawrence's "Don't give up the ship!" Nathan Hale's regret that he had but one life to give for his country and Henry of Navarre's call to his troops at the battle of Ivry to follow his white plume.

Well, we cannot all agree with Dr. Jordan. All history shows that nothing fosters the development of humanity like war and the feverish agitation and the alarms of war, that genius is not leveled but strengthened by strife and that the greatest creations of the human mind have risen out of the turmoil of stress and trouble. Never has the creative power of mankind been greater, broader, more active, more vigorous, than during the sixteenth century, and no one will deny that that century, which is destined to shine forever in the effulgent light which Michael Angelo and Raphael, Erasmus and Luther, Montaigne and Ariosto, Copernicus and Galileo have shed upon it, a century notable among all others for having given the initial spring to modern thought, is also conspicuously and preeminently a century of strife, a century of struggle, a century remarkable for the diversity of the causes which it championed and more replete with wars of all kinds, political wars, religious wars, literary and scientific wars, than any other period in the recorded annals of the world.

That is the doctrine which is being taught today in Germany, in France, in England, in Japan, and if the patriotic vitality of our people is not to be sapped and deadened, if we are not to be persuaded by the idealistic proclamations of this new wisdom to stake our national existence on the opposition of an effete civilization to the virile civilization so carefully nurtured on the other side of the Pacific, that is the doctrine we must still teach our children.

Mr. Roosevelt's Vote in the State.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was present at the meeting of the Republican Neighborhood Association last Thursday afternoon and heard what Mrs. James Russell Parsons said about my nephew Mr. Roosevelt's vote in New York City and State.

In the press accounts of this meeting I was surprised to see no mention of the point most strongly stressed by Mrs. Parsons. This was that the statements appearing in THE TIMES and other papers last Sunday morning were misleading. Your article pointed to the fact that the candidate for State Treasurer, Mr. Pounds, ran considerably ahead of Mr. Roosevelt in certain up-State counties. The implication was that the up-State Republican organization "knifed" Mr. Roosevelt and emphasized the fact that Mr. Pounds ran 40,130 votes ahead in the five counties of Greater New York as an indication of Mr. Roosevelt's unusual unpopularity in the city.

Mrs. Parsons said it was self-evident that the man running against so popular a candidate as Governor Smith would naturally get fewer votes than a man running against a less well known and less popular opponent. She thought it remarkable that Mr. Roosevelt ran only 49,130 votes behind the candidate for State Treasurer in view of the fact that in 1920, in his victorious campaign, Governor Miller, in the greater city, with a smaller total vote polled, ran 178,512 votes behind the candidate for Treasurer. In the entire State Governor Miller was 231,111 behind the Republican Treasurer in 1920.

I should like to add that Mrs. Parsons was careful to say that she did not believe any large "blocks" of votes had been delivered, as was charged after election day, but that she thought the lack of effort for and interest in Mr. Roosevelt's success on the part of certain branches of the Republican organization had materially contributed to his defeat.

Fritz Achelis Dies at 81.

Mr. Achelis soon after leaving school became a pioneer in the hard rubber industry. In 1880, on the organization of the American Hard Rubber Company, he was made its President. The firm has carried on research that has led to the production of several materials of use in radio.

On several occasion Mr. Achelis made generous donations to philanthropic objects. On April 5, 1917, a few days after the United States declared war, when Mr. Achelis was President of the German Hospital, he presented the hospital with $25,000, the gift providing almost in its entirety the first base unit supplied by the hospital to the War Department. In May, 1918, Mr. Achelis gave the Pennsylvania Institute of College Point, L. I., $50,000 for the creation of two classes in practical mechanics as a memorial to two former foremen of the American Hard Rubber Company.

He was 63 years old and was graduated from Bowdoin in 1885, taking his medical degree at the Medical School of Maine (Bowdoin) four years later. Dr. Whittier testified for the prosecution in the trial last May in Richmond County Court of Harry L. Hoffman for the killing of Mrs. Maud A. Bauer, asserting that the two shells found within three feet of the old spot where Mrs. Bauer's body was found had been discharged by Hoffman's automatic pistol.

TWICE SEEKS DEATH, MISUSED $48,000

RIPS HOSPITAL BANDAGES

Admits He Put Insurance Company's Money in Oil Stock—Ruined, Says Note.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—After failing in one attempt at suicide early this morning in his home, Caleb S. Jackson, deposed Vice President of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company and Treasurer of the Eastern Mutual Insurance Company, tried again tonight to end his life, tearing away in the hospital a bandage around veins of his arms which he had previously cut with a razor.

Prior to this he had made a statement in the hospital in which he admitted that he had invested $48,000 of the funds of the insurance company, a subsidiary of the railway, in an oil company in Arkansas. He said he also put $16,000 of his own money in the company, which he refused to name.

A nurse, returning to his bedside tonight after a short absence, found that Jackson had torn away the bandage binding the veins in his arms which he had cut with a razor in the first attempt on his life. Although he lost much blood, physicians said he would recover. He was later removed to another hospital and a policeman was stationed at his bedside.

It was learned tonight that Jackson had been separated for some time from his wife, now living in Hillsboro, N. H., and that he had brought suit for divorce against her.

Jackson's attempt was made at his Boston apartment. During the day officials of the railway had announced that he had resigned. The announcement stated that as Treasurer of the insurance company, which handled the workmen's compensation business of the parent concern, Jackson had made "certain dispositions of funds belonging to the Mutual aggregating $48,000, which were beyond the scope of his authority and, in the opinion of the trustees, a distinct breach of his fiduciary relationship."

Jackson was found with veins in his arm slashed with a razor and with gas flowing from a jet in the room. Another occupant of the house had heard a sound of a body falling and, knowing Jackson had had trouble, summoned the police.

"Dear Mabel: Try to forgive me for all the sorrow and trouble I have brought on you. I do not know how I ever came to ruin myself, but it is done and I must pay the penalty. You will know how much I have appreciated your sympathy and goodness. Please notify Alice. It will be a terrible shock to her. May you think as well of me as you can. Good-bye."

The Alice referred to is another sister, Mrs. Alice Burritt of New York. The note made no reference to the writer's wife.

Amplifying the statement made yesterday by the public trustees of the railway that Jackson, who had risen from an auditorship to the Vice Presidency because of many economies that he initiated, had made disposition of $48,000 of insurance funds in a manner to constitute "a distinct breach of his fiduciary relationship," L. Sherman Adams, a large stockholder of the road, said Jackson had placed the insurance company's funds in securities unauthorized by law. The loss in no event would exceed $48,000, he said, and would be borne by the insurance company, adding that the assets of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company itself were intact.

The Eastern Mutual Insurance Company was organized by the railway to handle its workmen's compensation business. Its books are subject to inspection every three years by the State Insurance Commissioner. Examiner Thomas H. O'Connell appeared about two weeks ago with a corps of assistants and made a preliminary general survey of the accounts. It is understood that Jackson soon afterward appeared voluntarily before the trustees and admitted irregularities.

Insurance Commissioner Monk later said that, from preliminary information he had received, the affairs of the Eastern Mutual Insurance Company "are a mess."

"In accordance with the State laws," he said, "examiners from my department began their regular triennial inspection of the accounts of the company about ten days ago. The examination was to have been up to April 6 of the present year, the expiration of the triennial period. The inspectors reported to me that they had found improper use of the funds of the company. I immediately requested that this examination be brought down to the present date. The final examination probably will not be closed before Friday.

"The examiners gave me sufficient information to show that there had been misuse of the funds of the company and that the situation is a mess."

MISSION LEGACY CUT.

Donchian Bequest Reduced to $181,657 by Order of Court.

An appraisal filed yesterday of the estate of John B. Donchian, rug merchant at 262 Fifth Avenue, who died Sept. 14, 1921, discloses that although his will left his entire estate, after the death of his wife, Evelyn S. Donchian, to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to be used in Asia Minor, only half his net estate will be used for that purpose because the courts ruled that the bequest to the extent of more than half his property was invalid. Under the court construction the missionary organization will receive $181,657. Mr. Donchian left a gross estate of $525,428, which was reduced to $363,314 by $53,901 administration expenses, $74,782 debts and other deductions.

Mr. Donchian directed that his wife receive an income of $8,000 from the estate, and also ordered that she transfer to his estate life insurance in which she was named as beneficiary. Mrs. Donchian refused to accept the will, and contended that it was invalid under the New York laws because more than half the estate was left to charity.

The appraisal shows that Mrs. Donchian received half of the personal estate and $2,000, making a total of $56,696. She was also entitled to a dower interest of $14,719 in real estate, appraised at $80,892, but Mrs. Donchian refused to accept this sum and sued for a court ruling as to her share, as the result of which a settlement was made with her, and she collected $25,575. Two brothers and two sisters each received $16,994 and eight nephews and nieces got $4,248.

POINTS OUT MAN AS SLAYER.

Chinese Accuses Prisoner in Court of Shooting His Father.

Gong Yin Sae, 20 years old, identified Mock Yink Tong yesterday in the Bronx Supreme Court as one of two Chinese who on the morning of last Thanksgiving Day shot and killed his father, Gong Chong Yoon, in his father's laundry at 1,419 Brook Avenue. Mock is on trial on a first degree murder indictment. Lee Har, who was arrested with him by civilians as they were running away from the laundry after the killing, is to be placed on trial on a similar indictment at the close of Mock's trial.

Young Gong testified that he was standing behind the counter with his father when two strange Chinese entered and, without speaking, opened fire with pistols. Two bullets struck his father in the body and the third in the face, killing him instantly. The son dropped behind the counter as though shot, and the murderers fled. He then blew a police whistle, which drew the attention of persons in the neighborhood, including Max Zalinsky of 485 East 172d Street, who pursued the fleeing Chinese and captured them. Zalinsky had previously identified Mock as one of the men whom he had seen running from the store and who threw a pistol away before he was captured.

The estate of Mrs. Helen M. Knickerbacker, who committed suicide at the age of 84 years, on Jan. 30, 1922, and was the widow of Henry Knickerbacker, was appraised yesterday at $408,233, but the sum was insufficient to pay her bequests in full. She owned real estate valued at $200,115 and had $114,906 in securities. She possessed furs valued at $17,500 and jewelry appraised at $74,220.

The bequests included $10,000 to her physician, Dr. George R. Comstock, which was reduced to $5,932 because of the insufficiency of the assets, and all other bequests were reduced proportionately. These gifts, as provided in the will, were $25,000 each to the Hawley Home for Children, the Saratoga Hospital, the Home of the Good Shepherd, and Bethesda Protestant Episcopal Church. St. Luke's Church got $10,000.

The will left $3,000 to St. Thomas's Church in New York, and also left to the church a diamond necklace, two other large diamonds, a large diamond ring, earrings and a diamond plaque containing seventeen diamonds, all of which were appraised at $17,000, to be used "for the adornment of the two golden chalices which I have directed to be bought and given to it."

MC COY'S CASE CLOSES; VERDICT AFTER FRIDAY

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 23.—The prosecution of Kid McCoy, former prize fighter, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors on Aug. 12, closed the case late today by demands that the jury return a verdict of first degree murder, punishable by death.

Court adjourned over the Christmas holidays and Judge Charles S. Crail will read his instructions to the jury early on Friday.

Deputy District Attorney C. W. Ostrom closed the arguments for the State declaring that McCoy, rouged and raked, inflamed by liquor, fired the shot that killed Mrs. Mors because he wanted to live on her money, and with her changing attitude he saw his meal ticket slipping away."

Ostrom held to the prosecution's theory that McCoy shot Mrs. Mors "as a part of a definite plan."

The defense, in final arguments, maintained that the death was suicide, prompted by a triangular motive involving smuggled gems belonging to her which had been seized by Federal agents, the actions of her divorced husband, Albert A. Mors, and brooding over her relations with McCoy, with whom she lived.

"McCoy's actions do not indicate murder," defense attorney H. L. Geisler contended. "Had he maintained silence another man would have been on trial for the murder today."

COMMITS MURDERER EXPERTS SAY IS SANE

Ohio Judge Acts After Jury's Acquittal of Man who "Forgot" Shooting Mother-in-Law.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 23.—Probate Court Judge William H. Lueders today declared Vinton Perin, 66 years old, a former grain mill operator, to be insane, despite the findings of Hamilton County alienists, who said that Perin was "now sane and always had been sane."

Perin was recently acquitted by a jury in Criminal Court of the murder of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Frances D. Rawson, on "the sole ground of insanity."

Judge Lueders ordered him committed to the Lima State Hospital for Criminal Insane. Perin heard the order without the slightest show of emotion.

Perin's contention at the hearing was that he was now sane, but that his memory with regard to the shooting of Mrs. Rawson and her daughter Nina was a blank. The alienists held that this defense was a sham.

AU QUATRIEME

Twenty woolwork ship pictures at $35

20 more of the delightful woolwork ship pictures made by British sailors a century and more ago, which were one of the most interesting features of Au Quatrieme's recent ship exhibition in the Belmaison Gallery, have just arrived from England. It is a rare last-minute Christmas opportunity for 20 fortunate people, for these ships are as colorful and gay as any shown in the exhibition. And they are all specially priced at $35.

There are large ships with white sails spread against a turquoise sky, and their red hulls gleaming above choppy waves depicted with a naive and refreshing realism. And miniature ones enframed in wreaths of flowers and looped flags. One vivacious little craft is surrounded by fuchsias worked on a moss green ground. Another delicious bit of color has white gulls wheeling around the ship. All are things of highly decorative character, almost unknown in this country, and certain of an appeal to all lovers of the charming and unusual as well as to the collector and the ship enthusiast.

GIFTS TO NEEDIEST BREAK 2 RECORDS

BIGGEST DONOR ANONYMOUS

Gives $1,000, but Bulk of Total Comes From People of Small Purses but Large Hearts.

The Neediest Cases received contributions of $18,400.80 yesterday, the largest amount ever received in any one day during the thirteen annual appeals. The previous high record was $17,746.26 on Dec. 21, 1922.

Yesterday's contributions increased the total this year to $178,067.87, carrying it above last year's fund of $177,683.67. Contributions of $22,000 are needed to pass the $200,000 mark this year and to insure provision for at least 300 cases. After that additional cases will be relieved as far as contributions make it possible.

Yesterday's largest gift was an anonymous contribution of $1,000. Abner M. Seeley gave $500, W. H. Swinney $400 and "J. L. R." $300. Gifts of $200 were received from the Nylta Club, Mrs. Jennie C. Mosier, Cora Barber Talman and Edwin C. Hyman.

The Neediest Cases benefited yesterday by a bet of £30 made in London last June on the American political situation. The loser was H. Gordon Selfridge, the famous merchant. This sum, amounting to $141, was sent to the Neediest Cases by the winner with this communication:

To the Hundred Neediest Cases:

In June, 1923, at a luncheon party in London at which a number of gentlemen conversant in English affairs were present, the complexion of the political situation in the United States came up for discussion and resulted in a little battering between myself and H. Gordon Selfridge, the merchant prince of London. Mr. Selfridge gave his estimate of the chances of some well-known Americans to become President of the United States, and I carelessly remarked that I thought a certain individual had not one chance out of a million. Selfridge, I think, said: "I will take you at those odds for £30." I stood my ground and said I would accept his proposal, treating the matter altogether as a bit of pleasantry on a convivial occasion and had long since forgotten the incident. But Mr. Selfridge is a man whose word is as good as his bond, and I was today in receipt of the following letter:

London, Dec. 8, 1924.

It only occurred to me this morning that I owed you £30 for which I send you my check herewith. I am delighted that my prophecy did not materialise as I feel that the country is in a very much safer and steadier position manned as it is at present and as it will be for the next four years. H. GORDON SELFRIDGE.

So this is my explanation for herewith enclosing Mr. Selfridge's check for £30 for the Hundred Neediest Cases. Please credit it "From a Friend."

A FRIEND OF THE 100 NEEDIEST CASES.

Her Fourth Check to the Fund.

Mrs. Philander B. Jenning, who had previously made three substantial contributions, sent her fourth from Briarcliff Lodge yesterday with a letter saying, "Once more I feel I must add my little gift to your good work. If Case 23 is supplied will you give the enclosed $40 to the mother of seven children of Case 201.

Gedney Farms, White Plains,
December 22.

Hundred Neediest Cases Fund:

Enclosed find check for $10 in the name of W. Philip Braender Jr. This check is for your worthy cause, in addition to the $11 previously sent in by the above-mentioned little boy (from the proceeds of a motion picture show which he and Tarlton Arrington gave at his house) and represents his annual contribution to this fund. Trusting this small sum will help, I remain sincerely yours,

Mrs. W. PHILIP BRAENDER.

War Savings Stamps were pledged to raise money for the neediest cases, as told in the following letter signed "Anonymous": "I have chosen 54 as my case, because I feel very sorry for old people who are in such straits as the two sisters of Case 54, and I think that the younger mothers and children are more likely to be taken care of. My mother is advancing the money until my War Savings Stamps are redeemed."

A check for $200 came with the following letter:

17 West Forty-sixth Street.
New York, Dec. 22, 1924.

The New York Times:

The NYLTA Club, an auxiliary of the New York Lumber Trade Association, paused for a moment in the midst of Christmas gayeties at the Hotel Commodore Saturday evening to request Santa Claus to hand you $200 as its subscription to the Hundred Neediest Cases Fund. The slogan of the club is "To have friends, be friendly," and from these are extended to The New York Times for its unselfish work and splendid service. Sincerely,

N. Y. L. T. A.,
H. B. Cone, Secretary.

Gives Half Its Christmas Profits.

Tyson & Brother, United Theatre Ticket Office at 1,404 Broadway, on the east side of Times Square, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, have announced a new plan to help the Neediest Cases. A large placard in the window of this firm says:

"We will donate one-half the profits on our sales of Thursday, Dec. 25 (Christmas Day) to that worthy charity, The New York Times One Hundred Neediest Cases Fund."

Auction bridge made another contribution of $30 which came with the following letter yesterday:

Dec. 22, 1924.

Hundred Neediest Cases:

Will you please use this check of $30 toward the fund of New York's Hundred Neediest Cases. This amount was received through an evening of pleasure at auction bridge and was held Dec. 18. It is with thanks and appreciation at this time of the year that we, in some little way, can share in this wonderful work.

Sincerely yours,

GUESTS OF THE FORBES.

A contribution came from the Helping Hand Class of the Teaneck Presbyterian Church of Teaneck, N. J., with a letter saying: "The enclosed check is sent to you by a class of Sunday School young girls who earned the money themselves."

203 East Broadway,

Hundred Neediest Cases:

The boys and girls of our school, located on the great east side, have established a service fund for the needy pupils of our school. At our assembly this morning we learned of your Hundred Neediest Cases. By unanimous vote the pupils of the school cheerfully agreed to send $25 to the fund for your worthy cause. We hope that our small contribution will bring some cheer to those less fortunate than we are.

Our motto is "Service," and we are trying to live up to it.

Very sincerely yours,

THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF P. S. 147, MANHATTAN.

Other schools and organizations among the contributors were the Parliamentary Law Club, U. O. T. S., Class 8A of Public School 81, Glendale, Queens County; the Alpha Phi Phi Sorority, and the Suffolk Club.

Children Eager to Give.

Other contributors wrote as follows:

Jean Sears Besselievre, Spring Lake, N. J.—I am a little girl 10 years old and have such a happy home that I cannot bear to think of children longing to be home and not able to be there.

Mrs. F. K. Z., Belleville, N. J.—Please acknowledge this as from "Little Jim." This is the first Christmas that Jim has been able to understand what it is all about, and we would like to feel that the day is made a little brighter for some poor people by our small effort.

Mrs. Jessie M. Schwartz—It is only a mite. I am praying that God will increase it a thousandfold. I am only a visiting stranger in this marvelous city. May God bless the efforts for the needy little ones a hundredfold.

Edward Weidenbach—Enclosed please find my mite toward the very worthy charity so nobly and energetically undertaken every year.

A Lapsed Mason—How any one with a heart and money can ignore such appeals is beyond me.

A Massachusetts Woman—Being myself a widow, I can well realize what it means to be a breadwinner and homemaker at the same time.

A Friend—The small contribution enclosed is sent in the hope of filling up a chink somewhere in this large and beautiful edifice of relief work. Thank you sincerely for making it possible for me to share in such a fine neighboring.

Nancy and Jane, Chappaqua—We received a little note from one of the sorties saying that the case we helped last year is quite comfortable now. We are sending you $6 for you to give to the poor dear "Frail Mother of Seven" in Case 36 and to the dear baby in Case 74 and the remaining $3 to poor little Irma and Genevieve of Case 54. We feel especially sorry for the latter because Irma is just a year younger than Jane (my sister, who is 6) and Genevieve just my age (11).

S. S. P.—While the enclosed contribution is indeed insignificant compared to the great need of the many unfortunates, still I feel that it looms rather large in the minds of the four children, Robert, Doris, Jessie Joyce, whose little savings this check represents.

Anonymous—Please use this preferably for some one who has lost or is losing his sight. That misfortune brings a black despair which needs every aid to dispel.

E. S. Payson, East Orange—Enclosed please find check for $25 for this worthy cause. I only wish I could make it larger, as I know how much good is done by these contributions.

Mrs. George M. Sidenberg Jr.—It gives me great pleasure to enclose my small contribution. All our seeming troubles and sorrows and disappointments shrink to insignificance when compared to the misery and despair and despair as outlined in your columns devoted to the Hundred Neediest Cases.

One Cripple Aids Another.

Some One, Somewhere in Pennsylvania—Enclosed find $5 for "Little Sheila," the girl with the shortened limb. Would to God I could send you the money that would care for her always. If you convey personal messages, tell "Little Sheila" that one who as a little child suffered the torture that comes with a shortened limb has a heartache when he learns of a child who must suffer that way. But tell her to be of good heart, for with the pain will come added strength to bear the pain. Tell her that the writer, who was once a crippled child, is now a man making his own way in the world. God will be kind to her too.

Philip W. Endres—I make this contribution in memory of my mother, the noblest of mothers, whom God has taken to Himself. I know were she here it would be her wish to relieve suffering and distress even in a small way.

Mrs. S. S.—Enclosed find check for $5 from my little daughter, Betty Shleuber, 9 years old. I gave her this money to buy Christmas gifts, but instead she asked me to send it to you and, as she words it, to make some poor children happy.

R. A. Cooke, First Ward Republican Club, Paterson, N. J.—The magnanimity of this appeal to assist in the alleviation of the sufferings of the unfortunate reaches everywhere. I feel honored to endorse check for $5 as my contribution to the cause.

S. G. W.—Kindly put the enclosed mite toward "Heartbreak House," with the heartiest appreciation of this great humane work.

Mollie D. Stern—Kindly apply enclosed check to Case 40. It seems to me there are no more touching appeals than those where children are denied their birthright.

C. H. V.—Enclosed is a small contribution to the splendid fund in which I believe you are so excellently carrying out the Christmas spirit.

Louise M. L. Frich, York, Pa.—When I read of the distress of the Hundred Neediest Cases I wish it were worth a mint of money. However it is better to soften the hearts of thousands than the heart of one.

Charlotte and Avery Cohan, Flushing—We want to go without something ourselves so that some poor little boy or girl may have a happier Christmas.

Mrs. C. V. W.—I am enclosing a check for $4 for my little son Donald, who is 4 years old. He was born our first year in New York and each year we have sent the amount of his age. So it will be here each year, and I hope as time goes on much more, it is a very poignant appeal this, to keep little children with their mothers. Please apply it to any such case. I don't know what Donny and I would do without one another and it makes the tears come to my eyes to think of other mothers losing their little ones. May increasing success attend this good work.

H. C., East Orange—Herewith check for $25, the first charity of Betty M. Anderson, 18 months, who expects Santa to come see her and wants him to visit other little girls, too.

A Working Woman's Bit.

M. E. S.—Enclosed please find $5, to be given to Case 44, in memory of a very dear mother. I wish I could send more. I am a working woman, but have many friends. I feel happy in doing my bit. God bless this good work and make it prosper.

A "Maniac" From Maine—Having just found this $5 bill, I know I cannot put it to a better use than toward the Neediest Fund, for the one that needs it most. It is a fine and humanizing work. May it go over the top and continue to expand and grow through all the years.

John Lucas McLaughlin, 8 years old, 464 Hawthorne Avenue, Yonkers—Please give this dollar to some little boy's mother who is poor. I saved this dollar for a Christmas present for my mother.

A Friend—In memory of my mother and for love of her and the dear Divine Infant.

A father, mother and daughter—Every year we send something at this joyous time to help along your worthy cause. It is wonderful to know that each mite we give will help to make some others happy, but, more than temporary financial help, they are able to stand on their feet again and thank God for His goodness.

Katherine and Billy Buckler, Maplewood, N. J.—Here is $25 from my brother Billy and me for the poor people of New York. There were so many that I could not pick out the one that needed it the most.

Alfred D., 6 years old—I am sending you $5 for Chester, Case 213. I want to help him because his mother died. I expect to have a happy Christmas and would like to share it with some other girl or boy.

Albert Greenberg, 370 Riverside Drive—Enclosed you will find checks from my brother and myself for your Neediest Cases. The money was given to me as a Christmas present. We are very grateful to God that we have everything we want and we are very happy to be able to help others.

Anonymous—Enclosed find my bit. The appeal is too great to resist. May this small contribution help toward alleviating the sufferings of some poor family this Christmas.

C. M. G.—This is sent in memory of Robert Willis G., a tiny boy very dear to me. Perhaps there is among your number a little boy named Robert whom it may be used to help.

Anonymous—Please find check for $10 to be applied to Case 203 of the Hundred Neediest Cases. I sincerely hope the fund will be largely oversubscribed. To my mind, this method is the finest I've yet heard of—may it meet with great success.

A New Start for Esther.

Just twelve years old—a slender figure, with soft brown hair, deep-set gray eyes and fine, sensitive features—Esther is a most appealing child. But she is nervous and fearful and starts with alarm at any unexpected noise. When the law stepped in to save her she was crouching in fear on a bundle of rags in a corner, her body covered with welts from a razor strap. She had known three years of misery before that. After the death of her mother and father an aunt took her. Illness forced the aunt to find some one else to take care of her. Since then Esther has been passed from one family to another. Each time she prayed that it might be a change for the better, and each time it proved a change for the worse. Kindness and care, food and shelter must be provided to give her a fresh start in the world.

CASE 208.
Her Two Big Boys.

In this family the mother's hope is her two big boys. If she can keep them with her instead of losing them to institutions, the family will soon get a new start. Joseph is 14 and David 11. They work hard about the house and are very good boys. But the will is a year before the law allows the older to go to work. Their widowed mother managed to keep them and their nine-year-old sister, Mary Lou, for several years, but her heart is so tired and overstrained that her doctor has told her that strenuous exertion now would mean death.

Amount needed, $750.

They Want Their Mother.

For three years the four children lived in orphan asylums, separated from their parents and from one another. They are Louise, now 12, Mary, 11, Helen, 10, and Theodore, 7. They were born into a refined home. Their parents were a well-educated and ambitious young couple. Tuberculosis forced the father to give up his work just when a bright future seemed opening before them. Under cares and trials the mother grew pale and thin, and was found to be suffering from the same affliction. Both were sent to sanitariums, and the children to institutions. The father worried about his family, his mind became affected. Discharged as an arrested case of tuberculosis, he was sent to a hospital for the insane. But the mother has regained her health. She has the doctor's permission to have the children with her, and they are pathetically eager to be home again. All the children are frail and will have to be watched closely. The older girls are learning trades and with help through this time of hardship, the family should soon be self-supporting.

Amount needed, $1,100.

They Grew Too Fast.

When influenza ended the husband's life the wife went to work with a will for her four little ones. She took care of them, went out to do housework and took sewing at home. Her neighbors said that she did two days' work every day. As the four children grew they needed more food, more clothes and more of everything. Work as she would, she could not keep pace with their needs. Her children are Belle, 10; Truman, 9; Claude, 7, and Peter, 6. Her health broke down under the effort to provide for them. When she returned to work after a short rest it was found that she was suffering from an internal tumor. An operation is necessary. They will require liberal help for a year at least.

Amount needed, $800.

CASE 206.
A Soldier's Breakdown.

Matthew had a slight heart trouble for many years. It did not prevent him from serving in the army during the war, and since then he had worked to support his young wife and their two babies, Fay, 5, and John, 1. But in the last year the heart trouble became serious. It made it impossible for him to do any hard work. He found a position as a doorkeeper, but had been there less than a week when a heart attack caused him to faint without warning at his post. He lost the place. Now his doctor has forbidden any exertion. Louise, his wife, who had never worked outside of her own home, is now at a factory bench. Being untrained, she can earn but little at present, but she is intelligent and determined to succeed. They will be greatly in need of help during the year ahead.

Amount needed, $500.

Sarah's Responsibility.

Left with four children, the mother found work as a janitress. The oldest girl, Sarah, took a place in a pleating factory, and helped to do the household work and care for the younger children besides. She denied herself everything for the sake of the others. Her serious and interested attitude was recognized by her employers, and now, at 17, she has been promoted to a more responsible position, taking care of orders. But she is frail and overworked. Her mother can no longer toil as a janitress, because the latter's internal tumor may be threatened with tuberculosis. Morris would be old enough to work, but he has a cardiac condition, and poor eyesight has retarded him at school. Harry, 7, too, has a heart condition and is threatened with loss of sight in one eye. Martha, 13, is seventeen pounds under weight. A critical year is ahead of them.

Amount needed, $900.

CASE 231.
Once They Gave to Others.

Two aged sisters are living alone in the twilight of life with their memories of days of independence when they gave to others. Margaret, now 70 years old, was for many years a happy wife, and at her husband's death was fairly well provided for, but Alice, age 66, was blind. She had been made welcome in Margaret's home. After the death of her husband Margaret performed the work of janitress. She has been obliged to give up, her savings are gone and the two gentle old ladies are in need.

Amount needed, $360.

Their Home in Doubt.

Their father had been earning a fair living for them with his small repair shop. Pneumonia ended his life. Six children, the oldest one, Harry, 10, were left with only their mother to help them. Their small bank account was soon eaten up. The mother cannot think of working, with her six children to care for. The oldest girls are Bessie and Annie, 8 and 6, and then come Willie, 5; Mabel, 3, and Grace, 2. There has been talk of institutions, and the children are in dread of being taken away from their mother. There is a long time of uncertainty ahead for them.

Amount needed, $1,100.

The question whether the stock market would submit to the vigorous check which it received on Monday, or would attempt to resume last week's activities, seemed to be settled yesterday. It was very much the least active day since the "bull movement" began. Until this week, no five-hour day had been marked, by sales of less than 1,000,000 shares. Monday's total fell below that figure, and yesterday showed up for only 1,074,000 shares. Some Saturday markets in November, and an occasional full day in October, have done as well as that.

Movement of prices was again generally downward, although not as a rule with losses of such violence as Monday's. There were, however, more than a dozen declines of 2 to 5 points; mostly occurring, as was to be expected, in stocks which had escaped the reckoning of the day before, or which had been driven up on Monday with the futile purpose of stopping the general fall in prices through one or two isolated demonstrations in the opposite direction. A few demonstrations of the kind occurred in yesterday's stock market, but this time they attracted no serious attention. It was noticeable that the standard investment shares nearly all dropped off fractionally, and that the "averages" of typical stocks lost more ground than they did on Monday. But as a whole, the day's changes were not important.

Call money rose to 5 per cent.; the highest price since it crossed that mark on the decline on April 8. No one was greatly surprised at yesterday's advance and, while it may have encouraged the spirit of aloofness in the speculative community, it was hardly the governing influence. A year ago this week, call money rose to 6 per cent. and the stock market advanced in the face of it. After the turn of the year the rate dropped at once to 4½ per cent. and had reached 4 before January was over. Yesterday's apathy on the Stock Exchange came in the face of various "dividend announcements" which might have set the market wild a week ago. But it is not only possible to "discount" events so that no capacity for "response" to the actual news is left, but it is also possible to overdiscount.

Wheat prices recovered a cent or so: in that market as on the Stock Exchange, the action and reaction of prices at a climax of speculative excitement has no close connection with the actual situation. Sterling lost ground slightly, but not enough to suggest any change in the general character of its movement. At this time in 1922, when it had long been mounting toward parity, it declined 5 or 6 cents in the last weeks of December, but it rose 10 at the beginning of the new year.

Yesterday's railway car-loading returns for the second week of December continue the story of other weeks since freight traffic passed the season's normal climax at the end of October. Of yesterday's showing it can again be said that it again far surpasses all previous weekly achievements for December. During the first half of the month, more loaded cars by 111,339 were moved than in any corresponding period on record; an increase of 6% per cent.; which is actually a greater increase, both in number of cars and percentage, than has occurred in any previous full month of the present season.

It fairly indicates, therefore, that except in so far as operating expenses may be affected by winter storms, the net railway earnings for the current month ought to make better comparison with 1923 than in any of its predecessors. It also shows that general business, as measured by consumption of goods or preparation for such consumption, must be in solid shape, whatever the verdict of the trade reviews may be.

MONEY.

TUESDAY, DEC. 23, 1924.

Heavy withdrawals by local and interior banks stirred the Stock Exchange call loan market to 5 per cent., highest since April 8. Renewals were arranged at 3½, but at 11:30 came the first advance to 4, followed by a jump to 4½ at noon and to 5 per cent. at 12:45. Trading in time money was confined almost exclusively to four-six months' maturities at 4 per cent. No 60-90 day trades were reported. Market was quiet and unexciting, dealers said, despite the sharp rise in demand loans. Call loans against acceptances advanced ½ to 5 per cent., but the futures, as well as merchants' notes, discounted without change.

HOLIDAY AFFAIRS SLOW UP MARKET

DECLINE IS ALSO SHARP

The market had very strenuous opposition in the Christmas celebration yesterday, and as a result attention was diverted sharply away from it and into other channels and speculation declined to a low ebb. The day's sales at 1,074,942 shares were the smallest since the bull market started with the election. Taking into consideration both the railroad and industrial shares, the decline was the sharpest, too, since the election. A total of 498 issues were dealt in, and the railroad shares at 78.92 reflected a decline of .66, while the industrials at 129.53 were off 1.13 for the day. The entire market closing at 104.22, reflected a decline of .90.

The days' trading was desultory in character and entirely lacking the buoyancy and snap of the previous days. The declines, which in some cases ran as much as 4 or 5 points, were not hurried or excited, but rather represented the offering down of stocks by those who wished to balance their books before the holidays. There were plenty of buyers to take the stocks which were offered, but plainly at concessions, and there was very little bidding up of issues throughout the entire list.

The day's news did not appear to have very great effect on the market. Some speculators had mesmerized themselves into the belief—despite official statements to the contrary—that the General Electric Company directors would cut some sort of melon at their meeting yesterday morning. When the meeting developed into a purely routine one, as had been generally anticipated, these speculaters were anxious to sell out, and the result was a sharp decline in that stock.

The passing of its dividend by the Pittsburgh Coal Company, an unexpected development, had the effect of chilling the coal stocks, but this was offset later in the day by the declaration of a 2 per cent. extra on American Can, replacing the previous extra 1 per cent., and by the resumption of dividends of 75 cents by the Anaconda Copper Mining Company.

Generally speaking, however, the market was cold to these dividend changes, and trading continued throughout the day on a very quiet and subdued scale, due almost entirely to the near-by holiday. The shares of the Pullman Company were bid up in the afternoon by a pool which has been operating in that stock, but, taken as a whole, the market was without pool support and appeared to be merely drifting about aimlessly.

B. M. T. EARNINGS INCREASE

A further increase in earnings was reported yesterday by the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Corporation in its statement of November operations and the five months of the fiscal year ended Nov. 30.

Gross income for November was $3,428,551, which was $233,523 greater than the corresponding month of last year, while surplus after charges for the month was $411,451, an increase of almost $100,000 as compared with the corresponding month in 1923. Total operating revenues for the five months was $17,788,580, compared with $16,215,685 for the same period of 1923. Net revenue from operation for this period was $6,158,572, compared with $5,446,124 last year.

GENERAL MOTORS EXPORTS.

Statement Shows 30 Per Cent. Increase in This Branch of Business.

Export business of the General Motors Corporation for 1924 will show a substantial increase compared with 1923, according to a statement issued yesterday by Amory L. Haskell, Vice President and General Manager of the General Motors Export Company. Present indications, according to Mr. Haskell, are that the company's export business will be 30 per cent. larger than in 1923.

In an official statement Mr. Amory says the company has been building up its foreign markets, and the year 1925 promises to establish a new record in the export branch of the company.

Orders That it Is Expected Will Be Placed in a Few Weeks Total $4,000,000

Approximately $4,000,000 worth of rails are involved in inquiries which are expected to be placed by Western railroads in the next few weeks, according to reports reaching the financial district yesterday.

The Chicago-Northwestern will buy 40,000 tons. The Burlington is inquiring for a large tonnage, the Rock Island is negotiating for between 15,000 and 40,000 tons, the Nickel Plate and the Toledo, St. Louis & Southwestern are seeking 25,000 tons each, and the "Cotton Belt" between 10,000 and 15,000 tons.

Between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000 will be spent by Western carriers in the next few weeks for rails and fastenings in addition to the huge tonnages of rails to be placed. The Western roads are also expected to come into the market for cars on a broad scale. One local equipment man estimated that 10,000 cars would be ordered between now and Jan. 1.

The Wabash Railway Company has just placed an order for 400 all-steel hopper cars with the Pressed Steel Car Company and 400 gondolas with the Streator Car Company. The Northern Pacific has ordered 800 gondola cars from the Ryan Car Company. The Western Pacific has ordered seventy stock cars from the Western Pacific Car and Foundry Company.

Although the automobile industry in 1924 was supposed to be quieter than in 1923, the Hudson Motor Car Company reports slightly better earnings than during the year before. The report showed that for the year ended last Nov. 30 the net income was $8,073,458, against $8,003,624 for the preceding year. December of this year, according to R. H. Jackson, President, will be one of the biggest months in the company's history.

Interest and other income	396,194	280,676
Gross income	10,644,067	14,853,027
Net income	8,073,458	8,003,624

Expenses for the fiscal year ended last Nov. 30 totaled $8,570,908, which consisted of $5,719,216 as selling and general administration expenses; $1,120,000 as provision for Federal taxes in 1923 and $1,730,792 as other expenses, including depreciation. Dividends paid in the form of cash and stock and reserves amounted to $7,332,019, the dividend payments consisting of $3 a year as the regular dividend on the company's capital stock, to which were added last April 15 a stock dividend of 10 per cent. and last July 15 an extra cash dividend of one-quarter of 1 per cent. a share.

The company's balance sheet as of Nov. 30, last, showed $12,876,721 in cash and Government securities, of which $6,000,000 was in Liberty Bonds and Treasury Notes and $6,876,721 in cash. Current assets totaled $21,502,330, against $16,400,915 a year ago, and current liabilities totaled $5,430,474, against $4,725,788 a year ago, leaving net working capital in 1924 of $16,171,836, against $11,675,147 in 1923.

"You will be pleased with the profits, the substantial gains and the financial soundness which amply justify the cash and stock dividend policy for the year," said Mr. Jackson in his statement to stockholders. "The outlook for the new year is very encouraging. Orders are plentiful and our domestic and export shipments for December will total about 12,000 cars."

Trades Move— What of It?

When a firm leaves an old location the floor space which it vacated must be quickly rented, if the building's income is to be maintained.

OF INTEREST TO ALL BUSINESS MEN

Thursday, January 1, 1925, The New York Times will publish its Annual Financial Summary. It will contain a forecast of the business and financial year of 1925; a brief retrospect of 1924; an outlook on and survey of the grain trade, the cotton trade and the steel trade; forecasts of the new year from the markets of London, Paris, Berlin and Rome; tables of transactions, range of prices and total sales in bond and stock markets for the year. Full comparative tabulations by months of the course of the various foreign exchange rates during 1924. The New York Times is the newspaper of record. There is no publication in the United States preserved in so many places — libraries, banking houses, newspaper offices, chambers of commerce, schools, colleges and universities.

CAR LOADINGS SHOW SEASONAL DECLINE

GAIN OVER 1923, HOWEVER

Total loadings of revenue freight by the railroads of the country for the week ended Dec. 13 were 956,761 cars, an increase of 57,004 cars over the corresponding week in 1923, but a decrease of 11,495 cars under the preceding week "due to the usual seasonal decline in freight traffic at this season of the year," the American Railway Association announced yesterday.

Besides being a substantial increase over the corresponding week in 1923, the total is a gain of 77,709 above the same week in 1922, and an increase of 230,687 cars over the same week in 1921, and 154,490 above 1920.

The association reported that since the week of Sept. 21 a total of 12,365,004 cars have been loaded with revenue freight, an increase of 251,681 cars, or 2 per cent., over the corresponding period last year, when freight traffic was the heaviest in history.

Livestock loading for the week ended Dec. 13 totaled 43,219 cars, an increase of 247 cars over the previous week, and 2,410 above the corresponding week last year, as well as 4,707 cars above the corresponding week in 1922.

Grain and grain products loaded amounted to 33,651 cars, a decrease of 1,373 cars under the week before, but 1,961 cars above the same week last year and 1,066 cars over two years ago. The Western districts alone reported grain and grain products loaded in the week amounting to 32,498 cars, a decrease of 1,204 cars under the corresponding week last year. Coal loadings for the week were 191,854 cars, a decrease of 1,402 cars under the preceding week, but an increase of 15,726 cars over the same week in 1923. Compared with the same week in 1922 it was a decrease of 3,397 cars.

Loading of merchandise and less than carload freight totaled 248,197 cars, which was 737 cars below the week before, but 8,394 cars above the same week last year, and 23,985 carsabove the same week in 1922. Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 325,847 cars, 8,460 cars below the week before, but 23,574 cars above the corresponding week in 1923 and 59,860 above the corresponding week in 1922.

Compared by districts, increases over the week before in the total loading of all commodities were reported in the Allegheny and Pocahontas districts, with decreases in all others. The Northwestern district was the only one to report a decrease under last year, while all reported increases over 1922, except the Eastern and Allegheny districts. The figures compare as follows with preceding year:

Record loadings for this year were 1,112,345 cars in the week ended Oct. 25. Previous to 1924 the highest loadings for any single week totaled 1,007,493 cars in the week of Sept. 27, 1923.

RUSSIA PLACES ORDER FOR AMERICAN DYES

As the result of a simple order of American dyes placed in the United States last June by the All-Russian Textile Syndicate's American branch, it was learned yesterday that the syndicate has reached an agreement with E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. for a large supply of these products. Alex Gumberg, general manager of the syndicate at New York, declined to reveal the size of the order in advance of its actual placement, but confirmed the fact that satisfactory arrangements had been concluded regarding credits which will cover the contract. Since the American dye industry is a comparatively new one and hitherto has not been more than a negligible factor in the country's export trade, the contract is believed to be the first of its kind ever placed in this country for American dyes by or for the account of Russian industries.

The All-Russian Textile Syndicate made public yesterday a statement of its balance sheet and expenditures for the period dating from its establishment of the American branch on Dec. 15, 1923, up to Sept. 30, 1924, which is certified to by Marwick, Mitchell & Co., accountants and auditors, of 40 Exchange Place. In this period the syndicate spent for American cotton $36,682,130, and total expenditures for purchases in the nine and one-half months covered by the report amounted to $39,206,085.

For the calendar year 1924 the total purchases of American cotton, a small part of which was bought in Germany, England and Holland, approximate 400,000 bales. At current prices, which are much lower than the prices of the American staple in the early part of the year, the total involves an expenditure of about $70,000,000.

TO READJUST BOND ISSUE.

Notice of Agreement Sent to Birmingham & Southeastern Holders.

George C. Van Tuyl Jr., Chairman of the Bondholders' Committee of the Birmingham & Southeastern Railway Company, issued notice yesterday to bondholders and holders of certificates of deposit of the Central Union Trust Company of New York that the committee has prepared and adopted a plan and agreement of readjustment of the bonds.

Holders of the bonds, according to the notice, shall be assumed to have assented to and ratified the plan and agreement of readjustment unless within twenty days after Dec. 24, 1924, they shall dissent and withdraw from the deposit agreement. Holders of undeposited bonds may participate in the plan by depositing their bonds, together with coupons maturing after Nov. 1, 1916, with the Central Union Trust Company. Howard Lehman is counsel for the committee, and H. M. DeLanoie is Secretary.

FORM NEW MINING COMPANY.

Boston-Montana Properties to Be Transferred on Jan. 19.

The committee in charge of the reorganization of the old Boston-Montana Company announced yesterday that the plans had met with success. Title to the mines, milling and railroad properties of the company will pass to the new Boston Mining Corporation on Jan. 19 at Dillon, Mont., and it is expected that operations will start immediately.

More than 6,000 old stockholders participated in the reorganization on a share-for-share basis and, in addition, were privileged to subscribe for 4,000 underwritten shares.

Railroad Director Elected.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company, J. Frank Prantz of Columbus, Ohio, was elected a director to succeed William H. Lee of St. Louis, who resigned. Mr. Prantz is Vice President of the Middleton Rolling Mill Company of Columbus.

GUGGENHEIMS MAY GET BIG NITRATE COMPANY

Plan to Acquire Anglo-Chilean Railways Company Also for 3,000,000 Pounds.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—"Control of one of the largest British nitrate companies is likely to come into the hands of a powerful American company," according to a statement issued today by the Exchange Telegraph Company. The statement continues:

"A meeting of the shareholders of the Anglo-Chilean Nitrate and Railways Company, Ltd., has been called for Jan. 2, to sanction an agreement between the company's board and the Guggenheim Brothers of New York for the sale of the company's assets for £3,000,000, to be satisfied by 1 per cent. mortgage debentures, stock of an American company, to be formed by the Guggenheim Brothers."

The formation of the Anglo-Chilean Consolidated Nitrate Corporation has been undertaken here as a part of the plan to acquire the properties of the Anglo-Chilean Nitrate and Railways Company from the British holders. Capitalization of the new company, chartered in Delaware, will consist of 125,000 preferred shares of $100 par value and 1,000,000 no-par value common shares. Further details of the organization and plans for its development will be announced after stockholders of the British company have acted on the offer of the Guggenheims to take over its assets.

Murry Guggenheim, speaking for the Guggenheim Brothers, said yesterday that negotiations for the acquisition of the Chilean properties were progressing satisfactorily and that the transaction probably would be completed early in January. Representatives of the Guggenheims, who have been conducting the negotiations with the British interests, will arrive here next month to assist in completing the organization of the new company.

10,000 CLERKS ADDED TO WALL STREET ROSTER

Banks and Brokerage Houses Caught Short of Men by Boom in Stock Trading.

As a result of the "bull market" in stocks, which developed after the Presidential elections of Nov. 4, more than 10,000 clerks have been added to the rosters of Wall Street banks and brokerage offices.

In May of this year, when the stock market's activities ebbed to the year's low point, about 20,000 clerks and other workers were let out, some of these having lost their jobs with banks which were hard pressed to trim expenses because of the declining money rate. Since then the total of stock market operations has suddenly soared to the 2,000,000-share-day levels and brokerage houses were caught short of men.

The investment banks, as a rule, have not felt the change from lean to fat periods of earnings so much as the brokerage offices. With the exception of a comparatively few weeks in the full year, they have marketed an average of $75,000,000 of bonds a week. The total of their operations for the full year is expected to exceed $4,000,000,000 and to set up a new record for this work.

Three classifications of bonds alone total $1,000,000,000 each or more. These are the foreign financing group, the State and municipal group, and the railroad bond group, which by mid-December had crept within short distance of the $1,000,000,000 mark, and with new offerings in the last half of the month was expected to cross the billion mark.

RUNNER NOW A PARTNER.

J. Alexander Harper Enters Firm of Strong, Sturgis & Co.

Several changes in partnerships were announced by leading New York banking and brokerage firms yesterday. The firm of Strong, Sturgis & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, yesterday announced that J. Alexander Harper has been named a partner of the firm. Mr. Harper is the latest addition to the long list of names of men in the financial district who have climbed from the bottom of the ladder to fame and success in Wall Street. Mr. Harper started with the firm twenty-eight years ago as a runner. He takes the partnership made vacant by the resignation of Seymour L. Cromwell, former President of the New York Stock Exchange, who will become affiliated with Carlisle, Mellick & Co.

Mr. Harper, who is 42 years old, is a director in several large corporations and is also prominent in turf circles, as horse racing is one of his chief hobbies.

Lee, Higginson & Co., effective Jan. 1, 1925, will admit E. N. Jesup into the firm partnership. Mr. Jesup has been affiliated with the firm for fourteen years.

MORE IDLE FREIGHT CARS.

Surplus on Dec. 14 Was 223,431, an Increase of 14,980 in a Week.

Due to the seasonal decrease in traffic, the number of surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service is growing, according to reports filed yesterday by the carriers with the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association. These showed that on Dec. 14 the surplus freight cars totaled 223,431, an increase of 14,980 cars compared with the number on Dec. 7.

Surplus coal cars in good repair on Dec. 14 were 100,793, an increase of 4,832 over the number reported on Dec. 7, while surplus box cars in good repair totaled 86,705, an increase of 4,830 within a week. The reports showed 14,005 surplus box cars, an increase of 1,930 over the number reported on Dec. 7, while there was an increase during the same period of 1,483 in the number of surplus refrigerator cars, which brought the total for that class of equipment to 9,770. Practically no car shortage is reported.

CALL MONEY RATES RISE.

Reach 5 Per Cent. for First Time Since April—Bank Loans Called.

For the first time since April 8, call money rates advanced yesterday to 5 per cent. Calling of loans by New York banks was general, and the banks of other cities, which recently had sent millions here for loaning purposes, began also to call their loans. The incident was said by bankers to reflect merely the usual demand for money which comes with the year-end settlements. Time money rates were steady.

Both in the bond and stock markets the effect of the higher call loan rate was felt. Part of the reaction of stock prices was attributed to it as well as a moderate recession in prices in the bond market.

Moon Motor Co. Reports Gains.

With only the few days remaining in December to be estimated, the Moon Motor Company reports total shipments and sales for 1924 slightly in excess of total shipments for 1923, notwithstanding the fact that the industry as a whole was off approximately 9 per cent. from the previous year. The export business of the Moon Company for 1924 shows a gain of 30.5 per cent. over the previous year.

Stock Issue Oversubscribed.

Merrill, Lynch & Co., yesterday announced that the Briggs Manufacturing Company stock offered by them and other local bankers has been largely oversubscribed. Allotments were scaled down 10 to 30 per cent. of the original subscriptions.

International Utilities Dividend.

EXCHANGE REVISES STOCK SYMBOLS

TO SPEED TICKER SERVICE

List as Given Out by the Committee Includes Ninety-six Issues.

The Committee on Securities and Quotations of the New York Stock Exchange announced changes in the ticker symbols representing ninety-six separate stock issues yesterday. In some instances securities having three letters for a symbol were cut to two letters, and some were cut to a single letter.

This action on the part of the committee is in line with a program previously adopted to speed up service on the tickers, which have been taxed to capacity of late because of the long series of two-million-share markets and the increased number of issues traded in on the Stock Exchange.

LIFE INSURANCE PLAN.

Proposal to Mutualize Guardian Company Put Up to Stockholders.

A plan to mutualize the Guardian Life Insurance Company has been put before stockholders insured for $1,000 or more, whose insurance shall have been in force for at least a year on Jan. 22, 1925. The plan has been adopted by the directors of the company and policyholders will meet Jan. 22 to vote.

The plan provides for the acquisition of the capital stock of the company at $250 a share, besides the usual interest and surplus dividends to be declared Jan. 28. The payment of dividends of 12 per cent. per year on the stock is assured from year to year, according to the plan. The capital stock of the company is $200,000, divided into 4,000 shares of the par value of $50 each, and under the company's charter the holders of the stock are entitled to receive annually so-called interest and surplus dividends aggregating 12 per cent., or $6 per share.

HARDWARE TRADE ACTIVE.

Retail Stock Lower Than Normal After Holiday Sales.

Holiday sales of hardware were unusually active during the past week, according to the current issue of Hardware Age. Staple lines and Spring goods were less active as a result of heavier buying for the Christmas trade, but both groups are expected to resume activity after the turn of the new year. The average retail hardware stock is estimated to be lower than normal.

Dealers and jobbers in all sections express complete confidence in the outlook for Spring trade. Manufacturers report practically no surplus stocks. Shipments are fair. No trade boom is not expected nor desired. Gradual healthy improvement is anticipated. Collections generally are satisfactory.

RADIO AGREEMENT PLANNED.

Two Big Concerns Would Make "Super-Ducon."

Negotiations by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the Radio Corporation of America and the Dubilier Condenser and Radio Company, looking to a working agreement among these companies whereby Westinghouse and the Radio Corporation will manufacture Dubilier's "Super-Ducon" plug, were reported yesterday.

At present the Dubilier Company has the exclusive right under patent to this radio part, and it is proposed to permit Westinghouse and the Radio Corporation to manufacture it on a royalty basis. Super-Ducon is expected to prove an efficient substitute for "B" batteries.

New York Dock Co. Income Report.

The New York Dock Company reports gross revenue of $251,079 for November against $246,488 in the same month last year, and net income of $36,121 against $30,963. For the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 1924, the company reports gross revenue of $2,926,934 against $3,025,173 in the corresponding period last year, and net income of $474,236 against $458,617.

Jones Bros. Tea Changes Capital.

Stockholders of the Jones Bros. Tea Company at their meeting yesterday approved the proposal of the management calling for a change in the capital stock of the company from shares of $100 each par value to stock without par value.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

European exchanges drifted lower again yesterday. Business was on a small scale, the reaction being ascribed more to absence of demand than to any volume selling. London sent lower cables at our start, preliminary business being arranged at the best prices of the day, from which point the movement was downward.

Sterling sagged steadily most of the session, sagging to $4.69¾ from a start at $4.70⅛, but just before the close covering purchases turned the rate back to $4.69⅞, which narrowed the overnight loss to ⅛ cent. The French franc yielded one-half point to 5.85 cents, while the Spanish, Swiss, Holland and Sweden units lost ground that ran from a fraction to as much as five points. Danish and Norwegian bills, however, were moderately higher. Profit-taking cut into the recent gains established the Chinese and South American, both groups moving off.

DIVIDENDS RESUMED BY 3 CORPORATIONS

Several encouraging dividend announcements were made yesterday. The Anaconda Copper Mining Company resumed dividends at the rate of 75 cents a share, payable Feb. 16 to stockholders of record Jan. 17. In the financial district it is assumed that the stock is again on the $3 annual basis that existed until payments were suspended early this year.

Chairman John D. Ryan, commenting on the dividend action, said: "Dividends are resumed because, in the opinion of the directors, present conditions and prospects for the metal market are the best they have been since the war." After the dividend announcement the company's shares advanced to a new high record for the year on the Stock Exchange.

An extra dividend of $2 was declared on American Can's common shares, besides the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. Both are payable Feb. 16 to stockholders of record Jan. 31. The stock immediately sold down sharply, as Wall Street had expected instead of an extra dividend an announcement in connection with the long predicted split-up in the common stock, although officers of the company denied that any split-up was being considered.

A 1 per cent. dividend was declared on the common stock of the New York, Ontario & Western, payable Jan. 28 to stockholders of record Jan. 8. This is the road's first dividend since 1921.

Directors of Lord & Taylor declared the first dividend on the common stock since 1914. It is 50 cent, payable Jan. 15 to stockholders of record Jan. 5. The quarterly 2 per cent. dividend on the second preferred was declared, payable Feb. 1 to stockholders of record Jan. 15.

The Pittsburgh Coal Company failed to take action on the common stock's quarterly dividend of 1 per cent., but declared the regular 1¾ per cent. on the preferred, payable Jan. 20 to stockholders of record Jan. 6.

A score or more of companies announced the regular dividends for the last quarter.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company announced that dividend declarations, payable next year, will amount to $34,500,000, of which $12,719,000 has been apportioned to the Industrial Department. In addition to the $7,000,000 already declared in the Ordinary department, payable next year, the directors voted yesterday to set aside $2,000,000 as dividends and $12,700,000 for a reserve to cover dividends which will be passed upon at the next meeting. In the Ordinary Department $2,100,000 was set aside to wipe out all liens placed on policies of the Pittsburgh Life Company, which the Metropolitan assumed a few years ago, to reimburse policyholders who paid cash rather than to agree to liens at the time of the assumption, and to restore full value to holders of matured endowments and annuities in the Pittsburgh Life.

METAL MARKETS FIRM.

Higher Prices Quoted for Copper, Lead and Zinc.

A firm tone continued to prevail in the local metals markets yesterday, and higher prices were quoted for copper, lead and zinc. Copper, which on Monday was quoted at 14⅜ to 14⅝ cents a pound, was quoted on a flat 14⅝-cent basis yesterday. Producers continued cheerful on the outlook for the industry, and the action of the directors of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company in resuming dividend payments on the capital stock was looked upon as an expression of confidence as to what may be expected in the new year.

The American Smelting and Refining Company yesterday announced an advance of 15 points in the wholesale price of lead, the new quotation being 6.50 cents a pound. The demand for lead continues on an active scale, and orders for future delivery are increasing. The price established a new high for the year on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday.

Zinc continued in moderately active demand yesterday, forcing the price up to a new high record for 1924. The metal was quoted at 7.62½ to 7.65 cents a pound, East St. Louis. This price compares with a previous high mark of 7.55 to 7.60 cents a pound established on Monday.

Denver & Rio Grande Bonds Ready.

The new general mortgage sinking fund gold bonds of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Company, the new corporation which was formed under the reorganization of some of the old Gould properties, are now ready for distibution, according to announcement yesterday by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Fractional scrip for the bonds and certificates for the preferred stock were also said to be ready. The bonds and stock certificates are in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive bonds and certificates when prepared, and the bonds are in bearer form without coupons.

DROPS EXTORTION CHARGES

Government Frees Two of Six Defendants in Corcoran Case.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—The Government today discontinued the charges against two of the six persons on trial for alleged extortion of $50,000 from Victor A. Searles, an artist, who has been shown by testimony to have drawn a check for that amount, which was cashed by William J. Corcoran, former District Attorney of Middlesex County, the principal defendant.

The prosecution then rested its case and Corcoran announced that he would offer no evidence.

Those against whom the charges were dropped today were J. Warren Kane and Michael J. Lyons, alleged to have been in the employ of a blackmail ring that forced payments amounting to thousands of dollars from wealthy men compromised by women who were in the conspiracies. Whatever Kane and Lyons did was on orders from Corcoran, the District Attorney said.

Searles today testified as to his visit to a South End apartment, in which he was surprised with Blanche Paul and Eleanor Barnes. He had gone there with Captain Arthur Austin, whom he employed as a bodyguard, he said, for luncheon and a few drinks, when four men representing themselves as detectives entered, and one of them told him to see Corcoran about getting the matter fixed up.

BARNSDALL CORP. REPORT.

Robert Law Jr., President of the Barnsdall Corporation, sent a letter to stockholders yesterday in which he said the company would close the present year's operations with net earnings, after all deductions, of approximately $1,250,000 as against $181,848 for the previous year.

Mr. Law's letter said:

"The most important subject to all stockholders is—What about dividends? We hesitate to make any statement which might be interpreted as being definite. Your company has reduced its funded debt from $12,550,000 in 1921, to $6,408,500 in 1924, or about six and one-quarter millions, during the most strenuous times in the oil industry, and during this period has applied large sums to necessary new investments. Your officers, all of whom are large stockholders, are vitally interested with you in the early resumption of dividend payments, and will continue to devote every energy consistent with the proper safeguard and development of the corporate assets, toward that end."

TREASURY ALLOTS NEW BOND ISSUE

NEW YORK LEADS IN BIDS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Treasury Department announced tonight that the total subscriptions received for the new issue of long-term 4 per cent. bonds, maturing in 1954 and callable after twenty years, was $1,992,760,550.

Of this sum $1,460,530,550 was in the form of cash subscriptions and $532,230,000 was represented by Third Liberty loan bonds of 1928 and Treasury notes and certificates maturing on March 15 next, which were offered in exchange.

Of the cash subscriptions only $224,513,500 was allotted, the Treasury having requested subscriptions of this kind for about $200,000,000. All of the Third Liberty bonds and other Government securities maturing next March were accepted and allotted. The Treasury stated that cash subscriptions of $1,000 or less were allotted in full, and those of $1,000 and up to $10,000 were allotted 65 per cent. All cash subscriptions for amounts over $10,000 were rejected.

The heaviest subscription came from the New York district, which bid for $965,327,100 worth on the cash basis, and offered as exchange $165,302,000 in 4¼ per cent. Treasury notes, $112,083,500 in 4 per cent. Treasury certificates of indebtedness, and $70,444,200 in Third Liberty bonds.

The Chicago district, which sent in cash subscriptions for only $210,664,000, received an allotment of $53,356,500. This was accepted as indicating that the vast majority of the bids from the New York district for the new bonds in return for cash was made for large amounts by banking interests. All of these subscriptions in large amounts were rejected by the Treasury's decision to accept none in excess of $10,000.

There was much interest in the extent to which Third Liberty bonds and securities maturing next March would be offered in exchange. In all $270,430,900 in the 4¼ per cent. Treasury notes, $168,599,500 of the 4 per cent. certificates of indebtedness and $93,199,600 in Third Liberty Loan bonds were offered in exchange by the twelve Federal Reserve districts.

New York was the only district which exchanged more than $5,000,000 of the Third Liberty bonds. Chicago exchanged $31,787,700 of the 4¼ per cent. notes, and none of the other districts more than $20,000,000. Chicago also exchanged $11,062,500 of the 4 per cent. certificates of indebtedness and none of the other districts except New York more than $10,000,000.

New York's subscription of $70,444,200 in Third Liberty bonds is understood to constitute nearly a straight exchange offering sent in by the First National Bank of New York. Several New York banking houses are said to have sent in cash subscriptions in large amounts, all of which were rejected.

The total exchanges from all Federal Reserve districts for notes and certificates maturing on March 15 next was $439,030,400. This was entirely satisfactory to the Treasury, as it reduced by that amount the total notes and securities which would have required refunding at that time had it not been for the exchanges now made. It is now believed that maturities next March can be handled without any extensive financing program by the Government, as the total maturities have been practically cut in half.

District.	Subscription.	Allotment.

KARDOS CONVICTED IN BUCKETING CASE

Jury Returns a Verdict of Guilty After Being Out Twelve Minutes.

Louis Montgomery Kardos Jr., active partner in Kardos & Burke, the brokerage firm which failed on Washington's Birthday, 1922, for $5,000,000, was convicted yesterday in General Sessions of trading against the order of a woman customer of the firm. The verdict was returned twelve minutes after the case had been placed in the hands of the jury.

Philip S. Samuels, counsel for Kardos, requested Judge Nott to impose sentence immediately, but the Court put off the imposition of sentence until today with the statement that he wanted time to consider the penalty he would impose. Kardos then was remanded to the Tombs without bail. The maximum penalty for the offense is one year in prison and a fine of $5,000.

Kardos refused to testify in his defense. Only three witnesses were called in his behalf. One of these, a former employe of the brokerage firm, in which John Burke of the firm of Burke & Kitchen, was one of their most remarkable successes. Before the stock had formally been placed on the market at $110 a share the incoming orders had more than absorbed the total available for sale. As a result, the bankers found themselves, as one of the underwriting heads described it, "in an all-day jam." Proceeds of the deal, amounting to $20,070,000, exceed by $5,000,000 the valuation placed by Mr. Eastman on his total gift to the four universities of 230,000 shares.

The sale of the stock, it also was learned, was for the benefit of all four universities which figured in the donation, these being the University of Rochester, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Tuskegee Institute and Hampton Institute. About half of the 187,000 shares sold was stock given to the University of Rochester, which received a little over half of the total of the four-college gift.

The University of Rochester was a straggling arts college until a few years ago, but even in its condition of poverty the school had adhered to an independence of action which at one time attracted nation-wide attention. This was about twenty years ago when a Standard Oil Company official offered a large contribution which Rochester rejected on the ground as its President described it, that the money was "tainted." Subsequently, the gift which had been offered to Rochester, and rejected, was turned over to Syracuse University, and almost overnight that school was converted into one of the country's richest. Rochester, by reason of Mr. Eastman's gifts and the smaller donations by other admirers, has in recent years been carried to the eminence of one of America's richest universities.

Will your Christmas be a merry one if you have not helped the NEEDIEST?

COLLEGE SPIRIT WON BIG EASTMAN GIFT

Energy of Rochester Undergraduates in $10,000,000 Plan Impressed Kodak Manufacturer.

It was the spirit of the undergraduates and alumni association of the University of Rochester that won from George Eastman, head of the Eastman Kodak Company, his recent large contribution, it was learned yesterday. Before announcing his benefactions, Mr. Eastman observed critically the efforts of the Rochester University applied in its effort to raise a fund of $10,000,000. When he saw how energetically the student body and the school's graduates were working and noted the widespread answer to appeals for funds, he revised his original plan of benefactions so as to help the University of Rochester even more than he had at first intended.

This and other new information on the Eastman gifts were obtained from Raymond N. Ball, Treasurer of the university, who was in New York yesterday. He came here to complete his part in the recent plan of offering a large block of the stock to the public which Mr. Eastman had given to four universities. Mr. Ball visited the Bankers Trust Company, which made the arrangements for the sale of the stock, although its name did not appear in the group of banking houses which placed the stock on the market.

"Mr. Eastman's gift came as a complete surprise to the University of Rochester," said Mr. Ball, "and it was a gratifying surprise. To provide for expansions and improvements, we had embarked several weeks ago on a drive to raise $10,000,000, not knowing or dreaming that Mr. Eastman was contemplating a gift. By hearty cooperation we were able to raise the $10,000,000 with comparative ease, 14,000 persons contributing, which was at an average of about $700 per donation. Mr. Eastman said later that the spirit which prompted this effort, and met with such splendid reception, was pleasing to him and had prompted him to give more to the welfare of the University of Rochester than he had at first intended. His gifts to the University of Rochester total $26,000,000, this figure being based on the conservative valuation which Mr. Eastman attached to his latest gift.

"Mr. Eastman is an excellent giver, both in the act of transferring his wealth to a worthy cause and in the spirit in which he gives. No strings are attached to his donations. He does not concern himself about what is done with the money and asks nothing in return, being happy apparently in the bare knowledge alone that he has done something which he considers worth while. As a result the University of Rochester is free to do whatever it wants with the money accruing from the sale of its stock, and so far as Mr. Eastman is concerned the university may take whatever action it choses for the advancement of education."

Mr. Ball said the university's authorities had not yet decided how to utilize the proceeds from its sale of Eastman Kodak Company stock, nor was it yet ready to say how much of the stock it would be retained as a permanent investment. The success of the $10,000,000 campaign raised all the money that the university required for the present; the problem now is to determine what to do with the unexpected addition to its resources by the Eastman gift, and ample time will be taken in determining this program.

For about fifty years the school had consisted of a liberal arts college; later there was an Eastman gift it enlarged its scope by adding a College of Music, in which is a theatre named after Mr. Eastman, and later, through another Eastman gift, it established a Medical College, in connection with which is one of the country's two free dental dispensaries, also a result of Mr. Eastman's liberality.

The sale of the 187,000 shares of Eastman Kodak Company stock in the investment market last Monday was described yesterday by bankers who handled the deal, consisting of Dominick & Dominick, Bernhard, Schiffer & Co., White, Weld & Co. and Hibbard, Palmer & Kitchen, as one of their most remarkable successes. Before the stock had formally been placed on the market at $110 a share the incoming orders had more than absorbed the total available for sale. As a result, the bankers found themselves, as one of the underwriting heads described it, "in an all-day jam." Proceeds of the deal, amounting to $20,070,000, exceed by $5,000,000 the valuation placed by Mr. Eastman on his total gift to the four universities of 230,000 shares.

The sale of the stock, it also was learned, was for the benefit of all four universities which figured in the donation, these being the University of Rochester, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Tuskegee Institute and Hampton Institute. About half of the 187,000 shares sold was stock given to the University of Rochester, which received a little over half of the total of the four-college gift.

HALT OF LIQUIDATION MAKES WHEAT RISE

EXPORT DEMAND LACKING

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 23.—Grain markets averaged higher, with a let-up in the liquidation which has been in evidence the past few days. Breaks in wheat brought in a good class of buying, with the best sellers of Monday active on the buying side today. The market was erratic but the close was at the top, with net gains of ¾@1⅛ cents after a range of 1⅝@2½ cents for the day.

The action of the market suggests that some of the local longs are gradually getting out of their lines on bulges, although the leading holders are doing nothing and leaving the market to take care of itself.

The holiday spirit prevailed in all pits and for the moment a majority of operators are keeping close to shore. Many of the pit element were caught short on the breaks and covered as soon as values started upward.

There was a noticeable lack of export demand, with sales estimated at only 200,000 bushels in all positions.

A leading seaboard cash handler, who was here today, after a short stay in the Northwest, said estimates on the amount of grain back in farmers' hands in the American Northwest ranged from 15 to 30 per cent. and there were indications that farmers had marketed on a much more liberal scale than usual.

The official estimate on the visible supply of 100,000,000 bushels showed around 15,000,000 bushels in excess of the trade estimates, but little attention was given to news of either a bullish or bearish character during the day.

Primary arrivals today were 928,000 bushels; week ago, 1,117,000; last year, 1,136,000. Shipments were 522,000 bushels; week ago, 692,000.

Reinstating of lines of corn recently sold out combined with the forecast for cold weather and snow and smaller receipts caused a market show of independent strength, with net gains of 2@2¼ cents for the day, the finish being about the top. At times the market acted sold out and its failure to break sharply has brought about some change in sentiment.

Argentine crop news was favorable, but this was offset by the limited country offerings. Local arrivals were 221 cars. Eastern cash demand was also, as it usually is at this season, of the year.

Primary arrivals for the day were 1,132,000 bushels; week ago, 1,626,000 and shipments, 324,000 bushels; week ago, 223,000.

PRESSURE OF SALES PUTS COTTON DOWN

Prices Lose 21 to 32 Points on the Day, as Market Feels Effects of Liquidation.

While the actual volume of business in cotton continues the smallest of the year, there was more selling pressure yesterday in proportion to the demand and prices lost 21 to 32 points as a result. Just as the demand for both January and October became a strengthening influence a week ago, a quantity of contracts released in those positions during the day carried the general list lower. Less trade price fixing in view of approaching inventories at the end of the year, combined with profit-taking before the holidays, supplied more contracts than was wanted at recent price levels. May sold back to low figures of Saturday, with a slight rally in final trading.

From the opening the market felt the effects of increased liquidation of January prior to the first notice day in that month on Friday. This left only one more trading day for those who did not intend to take up and pay for actual cotton, in which to terminate their interest. For some weeks liquidation of holdings in January has been going on daily, the extensive spot house operations in the way of covering hedges in January and putting them forward into either March or May had served to absorb contracts. For the moment there seemed to be a more urgent desire on the part of holders to sell out than eagerness on the part of those having hedges outstanding to cover, and the result was a slow, sagging tendency throughout the greater part of the session.

In addition to the selling of January, an increased quantity of October contracts appeared in the ring. The recent advance in that month from 21½ cents to 23¼ cents had developed opposition to any further rise of this junction in view of the surplus crop grown in 1924. Pressure on October became more pronounced than for some time, which brought in outside liquidation in other positions. October lost more than other positions and closed around 23¾ cents. Though March sold above 24 cents in early trading, prices worked below 23¾ cents, with May at 24.10, the low figures of Saturday's market.

Wins $95,000 Income Tax Appeal.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Board of Tax Appeals held today that the five-year statute of limitations barred the Bureau of Internal Revenue from collecting a deficiency of $95,000 assessed on income and profits taxes levied in 1917 against th National Petroleumh Company of Ohio and twelve subsidiary corporations. The board thus assumed jurisdiction over the application of the statute. The bureau held that the statute was inoperative until five years after the taxpayer had filed an amendment to the tax return in 1923.

Boston Elevated Shows a Profit.

BOSTON, Dec. 23.—The Boston Elevated Railway showed a profit for operations in November, General Manager Dana announced today. His announcement that the road had "turned the corner" was accompanied by the statement that receipts from fares last Saturday, $128,844, were the greatest in the history of the road. Wage increases granted recently were said to have been more than offset by reductions in the working force and economies in purchase and operations.

MUSCLE SHOALS BILL LIKELY TO GO OVER

TALKS OF POSTAL PAY RISE

Thinks It Also Will Go to Next Congress Although Vote on Veto Is Set for Jan. 6.

United States Senator Dill of Washington said at the Hotel Astor yesterday that he did not look for final action by the present Congress on the Underwood bill to give the Federal Government power to lease Muscle Shoals to private interests. Final consideration of this measure, Senator Dill said, would probably go over until the next Congress.

Should the bill be defeated, Senator Dill added, it would be due not entirely to the fact that many Senators feel themselves to be in the dark regarding the possible effect of the legislation, but because they fear that if some power corporation should derive benefit from its enactment, a vote for the bill might act as a boomerang.

Another bill which in the opinion of the Washington Senator probably will go over is the postal revenue measure, designed to provide enough more money out of postal rates to take care of the salary increases provided for in the Postal Employes Salary bill. This measure was vetoed by President Coolidge at the last session of Congress. Jan. 6 has been fixed as a date upon which a vote to override the President's veto will be taken. President Coolidge vetoed the bill because it failed to provide a means for raising the money needed to increase the salaries.

Senator Dill said that with thirteen appropriation bills to be considered and finally voted upon already on the desks of Senators, there would be no time left prior to March 4 to dispose of additional revenue measures.

Commenting on the last election Senator Dill said the Democratic Party must look about for new leadership and shun a revival of old feuds. In order to become successful, he added, the Democrats must create their appeal to the voters as a liberal party but with no tinge of radicalism. He said the party and the country was waiting for some great leader to guide the people toward liberalism. In connection with this Senator Dill said there was no denying the fact that Governor Smith had proved himself a great leader in thought and action in his own State.

Touching on the problems of the Northwest Senator Dill said the I. W. W. troubles were a thing of the past and no longer a problem. The farming situation he thought rather perplexing. Farmers were going bankrupt and leaving their farms largely on account of the great drought this year.

BIG GAIN IN EXPORTS FOR PAST 3 MONTHS

$427,000,000 IN SEPTEMBER

Special to the New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—An analysis of foreign commerce during the calendar year 1924 just completed by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States shows that September, October and November registered the highest monthly export figures for many years. During the Summer months, however, there was a temporary slowing up in many exports.

The analysis was made by the Foreign Commerce Department of the Chamber, and shows that this tendency was especially noticeable in the ranks of the twenty leading exports. In July exports reached the lowest value in recent years—$276,000,000. This low mark is declared to have been partly offset by the heavy exports of raw cotton and grains, which brought August figures to $330,000,000, and September values to $427,000,000, the highest monthly export total in more than three years. The October and November figures were found to have shown even larger totals.

"Exports of unmanufactured cotton during the nine months of 1924 totaled $526,000,000, the largest nine months' figure since 1920, and $110,000,000, or 26 per cent. higher than a year ago," says the Chamber's statement. "The textile group as a whole stood 18 per cent. higher than a year ago, with cotton manufactures off 8 per cent.

"Exports of automobiles and parts increased $35,000,000, or 29 per cent. The vehicle group as a whole gained 20 per cent.

"The coal-petroleum group made only a 2 per cent. gain, with exports of coal off 31 per cent. On the other hand, the value of refined petroleum products increased 15 per cent., with gasoline, naphthas and other light products $20,000,000 higher than the year before.

"Leaf tobacco exports were $7,000,000, or 7 per cent. greater during the three-quarters of 1924 than during the same period of last year. Cigarette exports were 15 per cent. lower than a year ago.

Meats Fall Off 20 Per Cent.

"With iron and steel off 1 per cent., but with refined copper $20,000,000, or 25 per cent. higher than a year ago, the metals group made a 7.9 per cent. increase.

"The lumber group was off 1 per cent. and the paper group was 6 per cent. below 1923 totals. Books, maps and pictures, however, made a 12 per cent. gain.

"Meats and leather as a group declined very slightly, with meats off 20 per cent. and leather manufactures off 12 per cent., but with leather making a gain of 15 per cent. and dairy products 9 per cent.

"With grains off 12 per cent., fodders and feeds 15 per cent. off, but with vegetable increases 4 per cent. and dried fruits 76 per cent., the vege foodstuffs group as a whole declined only 5 per cent.

"Chemical exports were off 13 per cent.

Several Lines Declined.

"Noteworthy increases in value included hides and skins, 263 per cent. higher at the end of September, 1924, than at the corresponding date in 1923; fresh apples, 134 per cent. higher; paraffin wax, 64 per cent.; canned fruit, 55 per cent.; gas and fuel oil, 41 per cent.; fish, 23 per cent.; canned milk, 20 per cent.; agricultural machinery and implements, 19 per cent., and crude petroleum 19 per cent. higher in value than a year ago, at the end of September.

"Severe declines in the value of our exports for the nine months of 1924, compared with the same period of 1923, included the following commodities: Corn, which was off 54 per cent.; coal and coke, 34 per cent.; fertilizers, 29 per cent.; bacon, 25 per cent.; cotton wearing apparel, 18 per cent.; refined sugar, 17 per cent.; paints, pigments and varnishes, 16 per cent.; leather boots and shoes, 15 per cent., and oilcake and oilcake meal 15 per cent.

Many Groups Made Gains.

"Gains in quantity exported included the petroleum products, lumber, raw cotton, some iron and steel manufactures, copper, wheat flour, machinery and vehicles, while the losses in volume shipped abroad occurred largely among the foodstuffs, chemicals and cotton goods. Some of the striking quantity gains were hides and skins, 380 per cent.; dried prunes, 346 per cent.; safety razor blades, 148 per cent.; fresh apples, 119 per cent.; iron and steel scrap, 77 per cent.; lead bars, pigs, &c., 67 per cent.; canned fruits, 57 per cent.; silk hosiery, 59 per cent., and adding and calculating machines, 55 per cent.

"The slowing-up during the third quarter, which was evident in the values of our exports, was more noticeable in the quantities exported, sixty-two items moving more slowly, while thirty-nine strengthened their positions.

"Severe declines in volume of exports were recorded by freight cars, rice, corn, oatmeal and rolled oats, crude coal tar and pitch, iron ore, artificial silk hosiery, iron bars and rods and benzol."

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 23.—Reports received by the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia show that 727 banks of the 994 in the third Federal Reserve district maintained Christmas savings clubs during 1924 and that the money available for distribution increased 19 per cent. over last year. The third district includes two-thirds of Pennsylvania, all of Delaware and the southern half of New Jersey.

The total amount distributed by the Christmas clubs was $33,961,000, as against $28,587,000 in 1923. The number of depositors in 1924 in New Jersey was 105,030, an increase of 7 per cent. The deposits there amounted to $4,970,204, an increase of 7 per cent.

Reports on other savings deposits showed that 994 banks had on deposit this month $1,064,839,000, as against $967,671,000, a year before, an increase of 10 per cent.

Among the New Jersey counties that showed increases in Christmas savings deposits were Atlantic, 21 per cent.; Burlington, 14; Camden, 20; Cape May, 24; Gloucester, 26, and Mercer, 14.

SENATE EMPLOYE CLEARED.

Justice Department Finds No Law Violated—Refuses Any Details.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The Department of Justice's investigation into charges that a Senate Committee employe accepted money for the use of his influence in behalf of legislation has resulted in a finding that no law was violated.

Attorney General Stone declined to divulge the nature of the legislation or the name of the man involved.

Officers of postal workers' organizations charged that the case was conceived by opponents of the postal pay increase bill to try to defeat that measure and demanded that the Attorney General make the facts public, but this was never done.

STOCKHOLDERS SUE TO GET $2,001,139

GREENSBORO, N. C., Dec. 23.—Suit for $2,001,139 damages growing out of the failure of the firm of Bailey Brothers, a tobacco manufacturing concern of Winston-Salem, was filed here today by W. L. Ashby, on behalf of the stockholders of the bankrupt firm.

The petition names as defendants the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem; the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, which has branches in several North Carolina cities, and a number of individuals. It charges conspiracy to wreck the concern, for which receivers were appointed May 15, 1923.

Ashby charged that "a creditors' committee was formed by the defendants for the purpose of bankrupting Bailey Brothers, Inc. It also is alleged that a conspiracy was formed to circulate false reports about the concern, and that officials of the Reynolds Tobacco Company and the Wachovia Company held conferences at which it was agreed that the loans of Bailey Brothers should be called to enable the Reynolds firm to obtain real estate in Winston-Salem owned by Bailey Brothers.

Trustees in bankruptcy, also named in the petition, are charged with having conspired to suppress bidders at the sale of the Bailey property with the result that three sales were held and finally property worth $772,986.61 was sold for $300,000.

FRENCH AUTO TAX IS HIGH.

New Tariff Also Raises Wall Against Import of German Dyes.

PARIS, Dec. 23 (Associated Press).—Automobiles suffered the brunt of increases in duties provided by the new tariff bill, which affects practically every commodity imported into France exceptising foodstuffs. The bill, which was drawn up by the Customs Commission during the last six months, was issued by the Government Printing Office today and will be presented for the ratification of Parliament after the budget is voted.

A general increase in customs duties, ranging from 10 to 50 per cent. in some instances, was decided upon by the commission. The new tariff bill, covering every range of imports, requires a volume of seventy-five pages.

Automobiles, whether bare chasses without tires or finished cars ready for the road, will pay from 1,800 to 3,600 francs per hundred kilograms weight, according to the size of the car. Spare parts are assessed at from 1,900 to 2,250 and from 3,600 to 7,200 francs per hundred kilograms, according to classification of metal, whether of cast iron, steel, copper or bronze. Light oils for motor fuel, benzola and naphtha are assessed at 7.50 francs per hundred kilograms, while the heavy fuel oils testing 190 per cent. are exempt.

The duties on steel are placed at from 150 to 600 francs, on copper from 108 to 900 francs, according to the classification of trade: sewing machines at from 600 to 1,200 francs, typewriters, adding and addressing machines, at from 2,400 to 3,600 francs per hundred kilograms. Cotton duties are unchanged.

The new tariff raises a wall against the import of dry dyes from Germany, the duties being placed at from 1,200 to 3,400 francs per hundred kilograms in order to protect the dye industries of Alsace-Lorraine.

WAR ON "FASHION PIRATES"

Paris Firms Charge Extensive Counterfeiting of Styles.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—Dressmakers and other manufacturers of French luxury articles have appealed directly to Premier Herriot to save French trade from serious inroads by "fashion pirates."

The business firms have formed an "Association for the Defense of Plastic and Applied Arts," with an organization charged with running down counterfeiters of designs in dresses, fancy glassware, shoes, hats, embroidery, laces and similar goods.

In its letter to the Premier the association declares that there are 100 clandestine firms in Paris which make a business of copying new designs and shipping articles out of the country or selling them to the trade here at prices which the creators cannot meet because of their heavy expenses.

One of these fashion pirates, the letter says, is a foreign woman who has established a regular dressmaking factory in a big apartment, operating secretly, which is contrary to law, as business firms in France must take out a license and keep books for examination by the tax collector.

FRENCH BUDGET HELD UP.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Dec. 23.—All hope of getting next year's budget through Parliament before the end of the year has been definitely abandoned. Though the Chamber has been discussing its provisions since it assembled in mid-October, it has not yet finished with the expenditure side, and has not begun to tackle the question of the amount of income to be derived from next year's taxation. The Chamber will be asked to vote provisional credits for January and February.

Although the Premier will be allowed by his doctors to leave his bed tomorrow, it will be several weeks before he can appear in the Chamber to defend his estimates.

Before the session ends on the last day of the year it is the Government's intention to obtain passage through the Senate of the amended Amnesty bill. The Senate commission, while examining the Chamber's amendments to the bill, is seeking to obtain their modification on several points, and the discussion seems likely to be prolonged.

MAIL HEAVIEST IN HISTORY.

Postal Men Optimistic Despite Trains, Weather and Packages.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The heaviest mails in the history of the postal service are being handled today as a result of the posting yesterday of an over-Sunday accumulation of Christmas gifts and greetings.

Meantime adverse weather from the Alleghenies to the Rockies has slowed up train service, but that handicap is being overcome.

Spurred by the order that under no circumstances shall clerks and carriers work after 11 o'clock on Christmas Day, nor report earlier that morning than usual, employes of the postal service are striving to "clean up" on time.

The avalanche of greeting cards and gift packages is literally swamping post offices, but postal officials are confident all that have been posted in ample time will be delivered by Christmas.

Mailings, on the basis of current reports, believed to be from 25 to 35 per cent. heavier than last year.

WANTS TAX CASE HASTENED

Stone Will Ask Quick Action by Supreme Court on Publicity Question

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Attorney General Stone has instructed the Solicitor General to ask the Supreme Court when it convenes Jan. 5 to advance The Kansas City Journal-Post tax publication case on the court docket.

The case involves a constitutional question, and the Attorney General believes the motion from the department will be agreed to by the Court because of the public interest in the decision. The department's argument in the case is now being prepared.

BUSINESS ADVISERS ON ORIENT DROPPED

NAMED BY HOOVER IN 1922

It Lost Influence, However, When Secretary Rejected Its Findings as to China's Debts.

The Advisory Committee to the Far Eastern Division has been dissolved by Dr. Julius Klein, Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, it was learned yesterday. The headquarters of the committee are in New York, but members whose offices are here were reluctant to go beyond an admission that the department had seen fit to dispense with their services for which arrangements were made in June, 1922, when Secretary Hoover appointed the committee of representatives of organizations doing business in the Far East.

The impression among those familiar with the subject was that Dr. Klein had dispensed with the committee because its attitude on certain questions of policy did not meet with the approval of the department and therefore there was not perfectly harmonious cooperation. A year and a half ago the Advisory Committee, according to one conversant with its work, recommended to the Department of Commerce that the Chinese Government's overdue foreign obligations should be met before new loans were allowed. The committee also wanted to have applied as a source of immediate relief the 2½ per cent. increase in Chinese customs which was provided in the nine power customs treaty which came out of the disarmament conference.

Disapproved by Hoover.

When Mr. Hoover received the committee's letter of recommendation he turned it down but did not seek to suppress it. Instead he sent it to the State Department with his disapproval noted on it. Certain business interests here, recognizing that the Advisory Committee was without power, then formed the Committee of American Material Creditors of the Chinese Government. This new committee then took up the recommendations made by the Advisory Committee, adopted them and sent a formal communication to the State Department last month recommending that this Government adopt the policy suggested in dealing with China. It was no secret when inquiry was made here today that the creation of this new committee and its efforts to make itself felt at Washington had not met with encouragement from the Administration.

The Advisory Committee which was dissolved by Dr. Klein was composed of E. Stanley Glines, President of Lam Glines & Co., Chairman; M. A. Oudin, Vice President of the International General Electric Company; Charles M. Muchnic, Vice President of the American Locomotive Sales Corporation; E. P. Thomas, President of the United States Steel Products Company; J. A. Thomas of the British American Tobacco Company; Frank Waterhouse of Seattle and A. E. Ekberg of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

On the American Material Creditors Committee are these concerns: the International General Electric Company, the United States Steel Products Company, the American Locomotive Sales Corporation and Lam Glines & Co., all members of the former committee, and Robert Dollar Company, the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the American Trading Company, Anderson, Meyer & Co., and the American International Corporation.

Seeks a Permanent Solution.

E. Stanley Glines, who was Chairman of the old committee and who is on the new one, was reluctant to discuss the developments last night, but said that he felt there had grown up a public misconception as to what the new committee was and why it was formed.

"We are not so much anxious to have our debts paid," Mr. Glines said, "as we are to take advantage of our position in the Chinese debt to work out a permanent solution of commercial relations between China and the United States, to bring order out of chaos and further trading."

READY TO NAME JUDGES.

Coolidge Hopes to Send Nominations to Senate Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—President Coolidge hopes to submit several Judgeship nominations to the Senate next week when Congress reconvenes.

There are nearly a dozen vacancies on the Federal bench, including three in the Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Coolidge is approaching a final decision in three cases, including the vacancy on the Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, embracing Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee. John R. Moorman of Louisville, Federal Judge in that city, is most prominently under consideration. The question of a successor to Judge Moorman also has been taken up, and Robert W. Bingham, a Louisville publisher, discussed both appointments today with Mr. Coolidge and Attorney General Stone.

Selection of a successor to Judge A. B. Anderson of the Indiana District, who is to be elevated to the Court of Appeals, Seventh Circuit, also is approaching determination. Attorney General Stone has not submitted a recommendation, but is giving careful consideration to Judge Robert C. Baltzell of one of the Indiana State courts, who has the endorsement of Senator Watson and the Indiana Republican organization.

A third vacancy soon to be filled is in the Southern District of New York, resulting from the elevation of Judge Learned Hand to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

OHIO WIDOW IS ARRESTED.

Poison Is Found in Body of Husband Who Died Mysteriously in May.

COSHOCTON, Ohio, Dec. 23.—Mrs. Clara S. McCurdy, aged 55, was arrested at her home near Warsaw today in connection with the death of her husband, William Allison McCurdy, aged 65, which occurred under what was said to have been mysterious circumstances on May 7.

McCurdy was reported to have died from nephritis. Later, however, County Prosecutor J. B. Shepler ordered an investigation. McCurdy's body was disinterred on Nov. 25.

Every member of the Japan Society has contributed to the first $100,000. Another $100,000 is promised by the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Fund when the first $100,000 is raised. The college, which is a Christian institution, was destroyed by fire following the earthquake of September, 1923.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Monday .....3½@3¾% for the best names.

Waist Orders Are Varied.

Recent orders received in the market for waists are divided among a number of types of garments. For the time being the hip-length blouse is taking precedence over the tunic in the Winter models, although the latter has been exploited in Southern resort lines and will, in trade opinion, doubtless be a good Spring "number." Another favored type of blouse is the peasant effect, which is made of white silk and trimmed with colored embroidery and smocking. This style has taken well as a semi-dressy blouse to be worn with a two-piece suit.

Holidays Aided Business.

The coming of Christmas will find makers of women's underwear with one of the best holiday seasons behind them that they have enjoyed for some time. Not only were silk underthings of all kinds and grades in demand, but the call for both lace-trimmed and tailored garments continued brisk right up to the end of last week. Negligees have also been popular for the gift season, according to the United Underwear League of America. Many more quilted robes have been sold this year than last, and among the best sellers has been the silk robe made on practical lines and lined with albatross. This type of garment is said to have done well because it gives as much warmth as a quilted robe and is much less bulky.

As Garment Jobbers See Things.

While this and the coming week in the women's garment trade are likely to be quiet ones because of the holidays, the week of Jan. 5 will probably see the beginning of Spring buyers in the market, according to an executive of the Merchants' Ladies Garment Association. Quite a little Spring business has already been booked, he added, mainly for Southern delivery. Lightweight sports coats have figured largest in the demand thus far. Credit conditions at the windup of the Fall season he described as fairly good. Bills of retailers now falling due are being liquidated quite promptly, within a week or ten days after falling due being considered prompt.

Some Mills Made Money.

While the year now drawing to its close was one of the most unsatisfactory periods the silk and woolen goods trades have passed through, yet some mills will enter figures on the right side of their ledgers. These mills were those which centred their production on novelties in silks and the higher grade fabrics in woolens and worsteds. It was not altogether the case in men's wear fabrics, but it was predominantly true of women's wear weaves. The mills which produced fabrics within the severely competitive prices ranges found that they could not make any headway against the buying policies of retailers or garment manufacturers, together with the marked stress on price.

New Effects in Rayon Fabrics.

As the result of the development of new knitting machinery, patterns in artificial silk knitted fabrics never before obtained are now being turned out, according to Levi & Seligman, Inc. The patterns are checks, stripes and plaids worked out in color, it being possible through the new invention to have as many as seven individual colors in the cloths. While it has been possible heretofore, said a representative of that firm yesterday, to work out such patterns on the Rashel or flat knitting machines, the fabrics produced cannot be used for coat and suit purposes. In the new method the silk "floats" are entirely concealed on the reverse side, whereas heretofore this could not be done. The patterns are worked out in solid stripe, awning stripe and checkerboard effects, one of the latter showing a solid ground, a dark box pattern and also a shadow box.

Gray Goods Were Quiet.

Gray goods continued dull in this market yesterday, with very little doing aside from the movement of certain staple printcloth constructions. In these goods some further trading was reported on spot lots of 38-inch 68-72s at 10¼ cents and in 39½-inch 64-60s at 9¼ cents. For January-February delivery of the latter the best that could be done was 9¼ cents. Buyers paid 8 cents for 38½-inch 60-48s. Sheetings were very quiet, with 10¾ cents the market for 37-inch 48-square four-yard cloths. For 37-inch 3.95-yard drills sellers wanted at least 10¾ cents, and the same figure was quoted on 72-80 pajama checks.

Increased Orders No Help.

Although his total volume of business for 1924 will probably run about $100,000 ahead of 1923, a leading dress manufacturer said yesterday that his profits will be less than they were last year. The increased volume, he finds, has not helped to swell actual profits, largely because of the fact that a considerable part of the sales represented jobs, and other portions regular merchandise which was sold practically without profit, owing to the "unreasonable" demands made by buyers. Both of these conditions, the manufacturer remarked, are due to the stress placed upon price practically all through the year.

Spring Lines of Handbags.

Some business has already been booked in Spring lines of handbags by wholesalers here, but the trade in general is awaiting the turn of the year for buyers to begin active purchasing. Up until very recently there was considerable filling of retailers' orders for holiday sale. In this business the underarm bag stood out prominently, and it is figured that this type will carry over strongly into the Spring season. Cloth bags of fancy silks are being featured in this style. Especial efforts are made to produce merchandise that will fit in thoroughly with the ensemble vogue indicated in women's garments for the coming season.

Burton Bros. & Co. to Dissolve.

Burton Brothers & Co., 267 Fifth Avenue, announced yesterday that their present copartnership would be dissolved about June 1, 1925. Stocks of merchandise of the firm will be divided between two successor organizations that will be formed under the auspices of John Howes Burton and Howard F. Clark, the senior members of the present firm, and the lines now established in the market by the firm will be continued. The firm of Burton Brothers & Co. was founded about thirty-five years ago by F. W. Burton and Robert L. Burton, and John Howes Burton has been connected with it continuously during that period. The firm moved to its present location at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street about ten years ago. It was rumored yesterday that the business would be continued at that address by John Howes Burton under the name of the John Howes Burton Company, but this was not confirmed. Mr. Burton is widely known as a result of his Liberty Loan work in Washington during the war, in the course of which he originated the idea of the honor flag, and also as founder of the "Save New York" movement. He has been Chairman of the "Save New York" Committee since its organization.

More Underwear Prices Out.

Despite the unwillingness on the part of Northern underwear manufacturers to give out prices on their 1925 lines for publication, these figures are gradually becoming public property. It became known yesterday, for instance, that the quotations on one of the well-known New York State lines for the new season run this way: Ten-pound (per dozen) shirts and drawers, $6.62½; 11-pound shirts and drawers, $7; 12-pound latch-needle union suits, $10.25; 14-pound latch-needle union suits, $11.25; 15-pound spring-needle unions suits, $12, and 16-pound latch-needle union suits, $12. All of the foregoing prices cover January-September deliveries. It also became known yesterday that a leading New York State line of latch-needle union suits is priced for 1925 on the basis of $11.25 a dozen for 14-pound garments and $12 for those running 16 pounds to the dozen.

BUSINESS NOTES.

S. Weintraub, for the past seven years a partner in Kuh, Rose & Co., Inc., makers of women's handbags, 6 and 8 West Eighteenth Street, has withdrawn from the business. During his connection with it he was in charge of production.

The Wittenberg-Shimberg Corporation, manufacturer of women's coats, has taken over the eighth floor of the Sadowsky Building at 1,312 Broadway. The corporation, which has been organized only a short time, has been located on the ninth floor of the same building, where it occupied about half as much space as it will in its new quarters.

MOVIE ACTRESS HELD ON BAD CHECK CHARGE

Representatives of four hotels and Franklin Simon & Co. appeared yesterday afternoon against Margaret R. Taliaferro, 30 years old, a moving-picture actress, when she appeared in Yorkville Court on a charge of passing worthless checks.

Miss Taliaferro was arrested Monday night in the Biltmore Hotel by Frank Walsh, a house detective for the Waldorf-Astoria. When she failed to appear yesterday morning the bail of $1,000 was forfeited, but was restored later by Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan when she appeared with her attorney, Eli Johnson of 1,540 Broadway. Appearing against her were representatives of the Waldorf-Astoria, the Biltmore, the Hotel Alamac and the Hotel Wellington and the department store.

It was charged that the woman had stopped at each one of the hotels, and after staying for a week or two, had given worthless checks in payment of room and board. These checks it is alleged, were in amounts from $60 to $365, drawn on the First National Bank of Philadelphia and the Collingwood (N. J.) Trust Company.

The representative of the store said that during the months of September, October and November Miss Taliaferro had charged clothing of a total value of $1,200 to the account of a Mrs. Alexander R. Gallenkamp, whose address was not given. Magistrate Corrigan held the actress in $5,000 bonds for a hearing this morning.

Miss Taliaferro said that she would be able to explain everything at the proper time. She said her home address was at 827 Park Avenue, Collingwood, N. J.

FINED $10 FOR CONTEMPT.

John Rodgers of Union League Club Says "Dammit" in Jersey Court.

John Rodgers, who said he was manager of the Union League Club, New York, was fined $10 for contempt of court by Judge Adam O. Robbins in Court of Common Pleas, Jersey City, today. State Senator Alexander Simpson, counsel for the plaintiff, objected.

"Dammit, I'm an American citizen. I can say what I like," burst out Rodgers.

"Your remarks are improper," he said. "I hold you in contempt of court and you stand committed until a fine of $10 is paid."

Rodgers produced cash immediately and stepped down from the stand. He was not called on again.

The palintiffs in the case were Mrs. Eleanor H. Ransom of 170 Broadway, Manhattan, and her husband, De Witt. She asked $20,000 and he asked $5,000, alleging that she was injured outside the Summit Avenue tube station through negligent operation of a Public Service trolley car.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Disturbances were central Tuesday night over Alberta, Northern Manitoba, Arizona and New Mexico, and off the Texas coast, and high pressure prevailed over practically all other regions. This pressure distribution has been attended by precipitation over the greater part of the United States, except portions of the Atlantic and the Pacific States within the last twenty-four hours.

The weather became warmer Tuesday in the Eastern and Southern States, except portions of Alabama and Georgia, but much colder weather has again overspread the Rocky Mountains and plateau regions, the Northern plains States and Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

There will be precipitation over practically all sections east of the Mississippi River Wednesday and Wednesday night, probably continuing Thursday morning in the lower lake region, the extreme upper Ohio Valley and the Middle Atlantic and Northern Atlantic States. The weather will clear by Thursday in the lower Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the East Gulf and South Atlantic States. The weather will become colder Wednesday and Thursday in the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the East Gulf States and the Atlantic States on Thursday. Cold weather will prevail almost generally over the United States on Wednesday and there will be snow on the ground in most middle and northern sections east of the Pacific States.

ZERO'S IDLE ARMY TO INVADE WALL ST.

PLAN TO SLEEP IN CHAPEL

Reposing in pews with their heads pillowed on newspapers, about 500 unemployed followers of Erbain L. Ledoux, shepherd of the workless, will sleep tonight in St. Augustine's Chapel, Second Avenue and Houston Street. "Mr. Zero," as Ledoux calls himself, with several trusty lieutenants, will mount guard at the ecclesiastical portals to prevent his flock from being disturbed.

At least, that was the plan last night of Ledoux, enunciated as he stood surrounded by piles of bread and bags of vegetables in "The Tub," the basement restaurant at 33 St. Mark's Place, where all one can eat costs only 5 cents. Prior to taking possession of the chapel, said Ledoux, he will stage a silent protest of his band before the Wall Street offices of the vestrymen of Trinity Church, of which the chapel is an adjunct. If the vestrymen deny them the use of the church—well, Ledoux, with a shrug suggestive of his French-Canadian descent, intimates they'll take, possession anyhow.

There are, however, at least two bars to "Mr. Zero's" plans. The first is that the police hitherto have not taken kindly to demonstrations or to parades without permits. The second is that Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity, says Ledoux's army shall not sleep in St. Augustine's. Asked whether the police would be summoned, Dr. Stetson said "that situation will be met when it develops." He added that Trinity had encountered Mr. Ledoux before.

Says Church Is Not Suitable.

"The church," said Dr. Stetson, "cannot be slept in. It is not suitable for such purposes. As for the parish house, it is devoted entirely to the many activities of the City Missions Society, of which Dr. L. Ernest Sunderland is Superintendent. The activities include clubrooms and many other features for the people of the neighborhood."

As on the two preceding nights, Ledoux led more than 250 men into the Camp Memorial Congregational Church, in Chrystie Street, near Delancey Street, last night. A find of five tons of coal in the basement was utilized.

"The Camp Memorial," said "Mr. Zero," "is now full and we have at least 500 men who are seeking a place to sleep. Tomorrow night we are going to take full charge of St. Augustine's Chapel, releaving the present janitor and staff and the chaplain—you notice I place the chaplain last—of further responsibility.

"In order that it may be rightly done, spiritually as well as materially, we will visit the vestrymen who have charge of that church at their places of business in Wall Street. We go to the vestrymen, directly, knowing that the chaplain and the head of Trinity have claimed that they were absolutely powerless to deliver this edifice to us.

Before marching over to the Camp Memorial, the men dined at "The Tub." Yesterday's menu omitted "mulligan" stew and in its place there appeared a thick green pea soup. A volunteer cook, one of the original 2-roasters—as the band, all worshipers of warmth, are called—was assisted by a corps of dishwashers. Zero said that 800 men were in and out during the day for a cup of coffee or a piece of pie.

Eighteen Men Get Jobs.

Eighteen of the original enlistment deserted the idle army and went to work. Three were hired as porters, four as woodchoppers, two as hospital orderlies, two as bus boys, three as firemen and four as trainmen.

Ledoux said that in his parade to the Wall Street offices of the Trinity vestrymen he would line his men up outside with their heels against the curb so as not to interfere with traffic. Every twentieth man will be an ex-service man who will maintain silence and discipline.

FIVE ADMIT SHOPLIFTING.

Women Plead Guilty and Receive Various Terms.

Five women pleaded guilty to shoplifting charges when arraigned yesterday in Special Sessions. All had been taken into custody by detectives of the Stores Mutual Protective Association.

Ann Hunziker, 23 years old, of 10 West Ninety-fifth Street, was sentenced to Bedford Reformatory for an indeterminate period. Detectives told the Court that the woman had previously been arrested for similar offenses. Yvonne Frencard, 24 years old, of 661 Fourteenth Street, Paterson, N. J., was fined $25 and sentenced to one day in the Tombs for the theft of four chemises worth $11. Mrs. Blanche Wallace, 35 years old, of 261 West Thirty-ninth Street, was remanded to the Tombs until Dec. 29 for further investigation after she had admitted that, on Nov. 1, she had stolen a dress worth $29 from Gimbels. Her lawyer, in pleading for clemency, told the Court that the woman had been drinking and didn't know what she was doing.

Eva Jeressat, 24 years old, of 116 Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, who stole eighteen articles, valued at $28, from McCreery's on Nov. 29, was fined $25, and sentence was suspended on Lucille Kemenoff, 20 years old, of 108 West Eighty-second Street, who had been in jail since, Dec. 9 last, when she was caught stealing two pairs of hose, worth $6, from McCreery's.

LAMP PRICE CUT ANNOUNCED

This reduction, the sixth since 1922, affects lamps of from 100 to 1,000 watts and amounts to approximately 10 per cent. Industries, stores, theatres and auditoriums will be the chief beneficiaries of the reduction. The public lamp bill will be lowered by the decreased cost of lamps for street lighting. The cost of lighting the kitchen, the workshop or the home will also be less.

America Prefers Home Cosmetics.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The bulk of the cosmetic concoctions now contributing to American pulchritude are products of home industry, in contrast to milady's former preference for imported "complexions." The domestic output of cosmetics, according to the National Geographic Society, is now valued at from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, against an imported valuation of about $9,000,000, the greater part of the imports consisting of perfumes and their materials.

Christmas is but one day away and the HUNDRED NEEDIEST CASES will receive the greatest share you help.
